

Chapter 408

Allison could not understand his words. It was clear to her that she would never turn her back on him. Be that as it may, what exactly did he mean when he referred to betraying him?

She had a question in mind, but before she could ask it, Teresa brought over a plate of food and placed it on the table.

"Here is your food."

She looked at Teresa and said, "Sit."

"No way. I can't be a third wheel between two love birds."

Allison blushed and hit her hand. "Don't say these things."

Teresa laughed and bent down. She kissed Allison's cheek.

"Don't be mad at me, my honey. My mate is waiting for me at that table."

Allison cast her gaze over to a table that was a little ways away from them. Max was sitting there. He waved his hand at her. She gave him a friendly grin and nod in response. She gave Teresa a look before uttering the word "Okay."

Teresa straightened her back and sent a quick glance in the direction of Ryan, whose gaze had been intently focused on Allison from the very beginning.

So rather than bothering herself with a greeting, Teresa headed straight to the table where Max was sitting.

Allison turned her head toward Ryan. "What are you looking at?" She queried him, seeing that his gaze was fixed on her without shifting in any way.

"I don't like it when she kisses you."

Allison's eyes widened. "She just gave me a peck on the cheek. She is my best friend, she can do that. And she is a girl, not a boy."

He shook his head. "I can't share you with a girl either."

She heaved a breath as she turned her gaze away from him. She heard his chuckle as he moved away.

She looked at him. He had a grin on his face.

She could not help but smile as she continued to gaze at his charming grin. It was hard to resist him when he smiled

She glanced at her plate and patted his shoulder.

"Take a bite."

He shook his head in disagreement. "I am full."

"But you have just entered the cafe. When did you eat?"

"I am not hungry."

Allison did not listen to him and brought the spoon close to his mouth instead.

"Eat."

He stared at the spoon for a while.

"You know what you are doing, right?" He muttered.

"Yeah. I am feeding you. Now eat."

He allowed her to feed him by opening his mouth and letting her do so.

His eyes moved on her. The way she was feeding him from her plate captivated his heart. He had never experienced such compassion and concern from another person before.

Beginning at a young age, he was involved in arguments with her parents and Ethan. Although his mother loved him, she chose to spend the majority of her time with her older child.

When he was in his teenage years, he left the pack and stayed alone abroad. There was no one in his life who could show love or care for him.

So this was the first time he had the feeling that someone was moving his heart.

He was completely focused on the girl who was conversing with him and feeding him at the same time. She was living in her own little universe. She had no idea what position she was holding in his life. She was completely unaware of the immense power that she was harboring on the inside. She was naive and innocent in his eyes. He believed that she would not treat him in the same manner that his family had in the past.

He was confident that she was not like the other girls who were after power and position. She was different from them. She would never abandon him.

"So my parents got worried about me and told me to spend more time with Teresa."

Allison was telling Ryan how she was spending her days when he left the pack.

He grabbed her hand just as she was going to give him another spoonful of food.

"I am done, baby. You can have it now."

She watched him get up from the chair he was sitting in.

"Are you sure?"

"Yeah, two hundred percent."

"Where are you going?"

"I am going to join the classes."

"Oh." She realized that they had spent a long time in the cafeteria. It was time for classes.

"Meet me after the classes." He said and headed to the door.

She gazed at his back. When viewed from behind, he gave off the impression of being a very powerful guy.

Sometimes, she felt that he had duality. He was a boy with charms that drew other girls and at the same time, a guy who could have a chilly demeanor and was not afraid of anyone.

"Which one are you, Ryan?" She asked while looking at him. Even after he had exited the cafeteria, she did not take her gaze off of the glass door.

After Teresa had joined her at her table, the two of them proceeded to the classes together.

Allison concentrated on the classes and reminded herself that she needed to focus on her studies since everything was fine now.

After all the classes, she walked to the entrance with Teresa.

After Ryan ate lunch with her at the same table in the cafeteria, she began to overhear other students talking about her at the school.

"Look at her. The fact that she is the beta's daughter is definitely an advantage in her favor. She had the opportunity to be in a relationship with Ethan, and now she is rambling around with his brother. How shameless!"

Teresa wanted to reprimand the girls, but Allison stopped her by shaking her head. When Teresa glared at the girl, the girl responded by rolling her eyes.

Allison's steps halted when he saw Ryan. He also heard that girl. He turned to the girl, who was talking with her friends. Then he headed to the girl and stopped in front of her.

Both Allison and Teresa turned their heads to look at him. Everyone else in the area came to a halt and watched to see what action Ryan would take in response to the situation.

"Did you just say something?" Ryan asked the girl.

The girl was stunned. She did not think that she was loud enough for everyone to hear her. She only wanted to be heard by Allison. She was completely oblivious to the fact that Ryan was close to her.

"I-I was just stating the facts."

Ryan glared at her with annoyance. "If you can't learn to keep your mouth shut, you don't have to come to this school from tomorrow."

She was startled by his words and his dark eyes, which caused her to take a step back. "R-Ryan, I-

"A delta female whose father is a pack fighter. I think your father should quit training as a pack fighter and instead concentrate on the parenting of his daughter."

The girl was shocked that Ryan identified her father's rank correctly without even seeing him. He even warned her indirectly about his father's profession. She started to cry. But Ryan did not show any sympathy for her.

He walked to Allison. Everyone was taken aback by Ryan's statements. Allison was just as surprised as everyone else.

He grabbed her hand and declared it loudly,

"Next time, whoever wants to mock her by taking Ethan's name, come to me directly.

Because I am the one who is pursuing her."
