

Chapter 43

Third POV

It had been three days since Bryan fired Sophia from his company.

He was mad at her. He had observed her for a whole month through the window and was very impressed by her work skills. However what she had done to his company with Alpha Oliver was something he could not take.

Why did she do that? He even paid her more than enough. How much money did she want that she had to shake hands with another pack's Alpha?

A knock disturbed his thought and he permitted the person to enter the cabin.

"Come in."

The door opened and Troy, his company's financial director, entered the cabin.

"Alpha," he said and bowed his head.

Bryan gazed at him. By looking at him, he remembered the night when he saw Sophia going with him. Troy had told him that he was waiting for her.

"What happened?" Bryan asked him, inquiring to know why he came here.

"Alpha, I wanted to give you this file you asked for."

Troy walked to his desk and handed him a file. Bryan grabbed it and started to review the information inside the file.

As Troy watched Bryan checking the file carefully, he gulped in nervousness.

Recently Bryan's mood was terrible so every employee of the company was afraid of him.

Last night Troy was going back to his home when he got a call from Bryan. He asked him to check on every employee's bank account.

"Alpha, may I know why did you check on our accounts?" he asked in a lower tone, praying in head that his question would not offend his Alpha.

Instead of answering his question, Bryan shifted his gaze from the file and looked at him,

"How do you know Sophia Berge?"

Troy was taken aback by the question. Everyone in the company knew that Sophia got fired from the company three days ago. Though people said that it was her who betrayed them, Troy did not believe it.

However he was an employee of the company, how could he provide justice to her? He could only say to the people around him that there might be some misunderstanding.

"She is my mom's friend's daughter. So we are family friends."

Bryan raised an eyebrow when he heard Troy. He thought Troy would say something else or even if Sophia became his friend, the reason behind it would have been something else.

"Family friends?" Bryan muttered.

"Yeah, Alpha." Troy replied. He thought for a brief moment and said,

"Alpha, please forgive me if I say much but I think Sophia is innocent. I mean she didn't even know about the pack meeting. I was the one who discussed it with her. I told her that we all were assuming that someone had disclosed our information to another pack."

His words reminded him that Sophia had said the same thing to him.

"You can go back to your work now."

Bryan's voice came out in a cold tone which sent shivers to Troy. He bowed his head once again and left the cabin.

Bryan glanced at the door which Toy had just closed after leaving the room.

His eyes shifted on the window from where he could see the empty room.

Watching Sophia from the window had become his habit. So now whenever his eyes fell on the empty room, he felt unease in his heart.

He refocused his attention on the file. As Troy told him a while ago that there might be some misunderstanding, he also felt that in these three days.

For some unknown reason, his heart did not agree with the fact that Sophia had done that.

Though Lily herself was the evidence of Sophia's truth, still something was urging him inside.

Surprisingly only a few people received a big sum of money last week.

One by one, he reviewed every single employee's last transaction. His eyes paused on the account who got the largest figure.

His eyes narrowed when he looked at the name of the account.

"Lily Jain?"

He grabbed his phone and dialed a number. When the call connected, the other person spoke out,

"Alpha"

It was Noble, the delta of his pack.

"I'm sending you a bank account number. I want every single detail of the transaction ID of the people who sent her money." Bryan said to him.

"Okay, Alpha. I got it."

Bryan hung up the phone and called Lily's number.

In a few minutes, Lily came to his cabin. She walked to his desk with a cup of coffee.

"Sorry for being late, Alpha. I was making coffee for you."

When she put the coffee on the desk, Bryan glanced at it. It reminded him of Sophia's coffee.

Though he told Sophia that she could not make coffee properly, he really liked her coffee that she made for him for the third time. That was why he asked for it the next day too. It was just he did not want to let her know about it.

"Alpha?"

Bryan heard Lily's voice which made him turn his head toward her.

"Miss Lily,"

She caught off guard when she heard Bryan calling her formally. He never called her 'Miss'.

"Yes?"

Bryan looked at her nervous look and asked,

"I wanted to know what had happened that day."

"W-Which day?"

"The day when you heard Miss Sohia talking with Alpha Oliver. You said you heard her talking with him about the project and congratulating him about it."

"Yeah."

"I want to know the whole conversation."

Lily's brows shot up. At that time, Bryan's phone rang as he got an email from Delta Noble.

He checked on it while waiting for Lily to speak.

When he looked at the email which had the information of the transaction ID, Bryan's eyes darkened.

He lifted his gaze and looked at Lily.

Lily thought he was mad at her because she was making him wait so she spoke out.

"I-I heard her saying that she helped him for m-money."

"Money? How much?" Bryan asked, gritting teeth.

"I-I don't know th-"

"One million?" Bryan asked.

Lily's eyes widened when she heard him.

Bryan stood up from his chair and walked to her.

She took a step back in fear.

"A-Alpha, I-"

Bryan did not let her complete as he grabbed her by her neck.

His eyes turned red as he growled loudly.

"How dare you deceive me and put all the blame on her?"
