

Chapter 487

Goegiriana entered the room and cast her gaze around everyone there.

"Georgiana! Thanks a lot that you have come here." When Neil saw her old friend arrive to save his son, he felt compelled to speak up.

Georgiana's eyes fell on Ryan, who was there, standing next to her daughter.

She moved closer to him and bowed to him.

"Alpha"

Neil frowned at her and asked,

"You knew about him? But why didn't you tell us?"

"It was his forbidden law. It is only up to him to reveal to others who he truly is. Anyone who wants to divulge it will be required to exit his pack."

"His pack? Are you living in his pack?" Glen asked with a shocked tone.

"Yeah, he has the biggest coven in the world. There is no other pack that can provide the witches with the conveniences that he does. We owe him an enormous amount of gratitude for giving us such a nice life."

Everyone was stunned by her praise.

"Stop trying to butter me up and do what they ask you to do." Ryan said and rolled his eyes. Before leaving the room, he cast one final look over his shoulder at Ethan.

Ella rushed to Georgiana and held her hands.

"Please help my son, Georgiana. He is dying."

"What in the world happened to him?" She inquired as if she were completely unaware of what had taken place.

"This woman rejected him." Neil said to Georgiana while pointing at Elora.

Elora turned her attention away from Neil's rage and toward Georgiana instead.

"Mom, please do something to save him."

"Mom?"

Everyone in the room except Allison was taken aback.

"Did you just call her your mom?" Neil asked.

Georgiana smiled at Neil and replied,

"She is my only daughter, Elora James."

The others' eyes widened in response.

"Your daughter? But she is a hybrid." Joey said with confusion.

"There is a long story. I can't tell you about it. But what she had done was something your son had in his fate to take inevitably."

"What are you saying? Are you trying to hide your daughter's fault, Georgiana?" Neil asked in a furious tone. No matter how powerful a witch was standing in front of him, for him, his son came first.

"No way. Didn't I warn your son on your other son's birthday night? I predicted that he would become a powerful Alpha, and that is exactly what happened. I predicted that he would have a smooth reign over the pack, and he did so. After that, I cautioned him that he would have to face the consequences of his actions. It would be a punishment for the sin that he had committed himself."

"My son is not a sinner. Why are you saying this, Georgiana?" Ella cried out.

"Ella, your son is not a saint either. Ask your soon-to-be daughter-in-law. Didn't he reject her?"

Except for Neil and Ella, every other person in the room was aware of the rejection.

Neil looked at Glen, who was silent. Neil frowned and asked,

"You were aware of it? Why did you hide it from me?"

"I did not want to hurt you. After some time had passed, he reconciled with Allison and pleaded for forgiveness. Therefore, there is no point in continuing to discuss it." Glen explained to Neil.

Neil experienced a loss of words that prevented him from uttering anything. He turned his head to look at Allison, who was completely silent as she kept her attention fixed on Ethan.

A flash of memory brought him back to Ryan's few words about Ethan and Allison.

He touched his chest as he felt a slight pain in his heart.

"NEIL!" Ella screamed.

Glen and Wade were holding Neil to keep him from collapsing. Everyone helped him to sit on the couch.

"Please, drink some water, Uncle." Allison handed a glass of water to Neil.

Neil held the glass and looked at Allison. He thought back to the day when she made him realize how cruelly he had behaved toward Ryan all these years. That day, he felt suspicious about her defending Ryan. Tonight, when Ryan told him about Allison, he made it abundantly evident that he used to have feelings for Allison.

"Did I make a big mistake?"

He thought, and his hand trembled. The water from the glass spilled a little.

Linus checked on him and gave him some medicine.

"You should not put much pressure on yourself mentally. Just calm down." Linus advised him. He gave Georgiana a thoughtful look before saying,

"We can not afford to waste even a single second. He does not have a lot of free time. The mechanical apparatus will not be able to control the rate of his heartbeat. Since you are a Lunar witch, you are the only one who can save him. You can summon the power directly from the moon. Please help our Alpha."

Georgiana gave Ethan her full attention before giving a slight nod. "I will do everything in my power. You all are my old friends. Through my prophecies and cautionary words, I have always pointed you in the right direction. If it means giving up anything important, I will do everything it takes to ensure the safety of your child. Ethan is like my son, too."

When everyone heard Georgiana, they all experienced a momentary pause in the activity of their hearts. They believed she would help him. He was so dead that no one could save a dead body. He was still alive, so there was hope.

"Everyone, please leave the room. Let me do my work." Georgiana said to others.

One by one, everyone left the room to let Georgiana do what she wanted.

She cast a glance in Ethan's direction before turning to face her mother.

"Mom, please save him. I am aware that you are keeping many of your powers hidden from me. You have the power to save him."

"Do you believe your mother this much?" She said and stroked her hair.

"Mom, I beg you. For me, save him."

Elora thought her mother would give her a condition not to go close to Ethan if she saved her. But to her surprise, she replied,

"I will try."

Elora gave her a warm grin and an embrace. "Thank you very much, Mom." Then she left the room with her fingers crossed.

Georgiana looked at Ethan as soon as the door had been closed.

Her normally placid expression morphed into one of rage. She hurried over to him and stood beside him.

"How can you still be alive?" She asked him as if he were listening to her and would reply back.

The color of her eyes changed. As she directed her gaze toward the man who was lying on the bed, they began to glow.

She bent and leaned toward him. "You should have died when she rejected you. What is it that is keeping your body from releasing its hold on your soul?"

Her silver nails grew to an impressive length. She stroked his face with her nails.

"I lied to my daughter. You are the main thorn in my daughter's path. She lost her heart to you in a few days without much interaction. I kept calling her to remind her not to go close to you. But she failed to do that. She can not become a stone heart like her mother. It's her loss."

She closed her eyes and chanted a spell before opening her eyes again.

She removed the blanket from his upper body and placed the palms of both hands on his chest.

"Mors tua inevitabilis est."

Ethan's body jerked up and fell back to the bed.

Georgiana stepped back with a dark grin on her lips.

"Now, even if they go to someone else, no one can save you. I will tell your parents that I helped you.

But the truth is, I clenched your wolf's heart inside. You and your wolf will both perish together before the sun rises."
