

Chapter 84

Sophia was waiting outside Bryan's cabin as she kept glancing at the door. She did not know what was happening inside, but she was afraid that Bruce would say something wrong about her to Bryan.

At the very moment that the door to the CEO's cabin opened, Sophia stood tall and straight while leaning her back against the pillar that was located in close proximity to the interior of the cabin.

She took notice of Bruce as he emerged from the cabin. His gaze landed on her as he came to a complete stop in his tracks.

She tried to ignore him and proceeded to enter the cabin by walking past him.

Surprisingly, Bruce did not stop her and left the office.

Sophia glanced at Bryan, who was standing behind the desk. He looked gloomy yet calm.

"Alpha," she mumbled.

When his eyes met hers, she took a deep breath. This man's gaze was so penetrating that it seemed as if he might shoot her heart through the eyes.

"I want them to come here for the meeting. Inform them about it."

He sounded commanding, which indicated that he was mad at something.

"Yes, Alpha."

Sophia hurriedly dialed a number. She informed the secretary of the other Alpha and told him to come to the Morrison Group directly.

While she was taking a quick check at the lunch box, she observed that it appeared to be untouched.

She wanted to ask him why he had not had his lunch yet. But the room had turned colder. She assumed that the two brothers had possibly had a verbal fight. She wondered who had won the argument.

Sophia left the cabin to set up everything for the meeting. In light of the fact that it was a meeting with a different pack company and not with any of the inner companies of this pack, she had to make a few more arrangements, such as booking hotels for them.

"Everything done?" She asked other employees who were in charge of the conference room.

The employees gave her a nod in agreement. Sophia smiled at them and began to check the files for the projects.

She emailed all the managers about the prepone meeting since the time had changed because of Alpha Bryan's mood.

Sophia huffed while putting her hand on her waist. She had a glance around to determine whether or not everything was on the right track.

"Perfect."

She clapped her hands and left the conference room. Then, she made her way back to Bryan's cabin.

"Alpha, everything is done. Now we are just waiting for Alpha Noble."

Bryan heard her but did not reply to her. A sigh came out of her mouth as she expressed her dissatisfaction with his unexpected behavior.

"This man is bipolar. I just can't understand his mood swings," she murmured while standing close to the desk.

She jerked up when she heard Bryan.

"Did you just say something?"

She looked at him with wide eyes and shook her head immediately.

When his eyes met hers, the room fell into complete silence. She made another attempt to read his gaze, but she was unable to do so. Because of his calculated action and unreadable eyes, he could crack anything in front of him even without touching it with his hands.

She gulped when she found him staring at her. What was going on in his mind?

"Alpha, what hap—"

She was interrupted when the door opened. Beta Robert entered the cabin with Delta Edger.

Their gaze landed on her. They waved at her. She gave them a small smile.

"Hello," she greeted them.

"Hello, beauty," Edger said, winking at her.

She blushed and looked away from him. Robert went to sit on a chair at the desk.

Edger laughed when he saw Sophia's cheeks flushing red. He turned around, and his eyes fell on Bryan, who was looking at him.

"Bro, come on. It was just a wink. There is no need to feel overly possessive."

Sophia was stunned by his statement toward Bryan. She glanced at Bryan, who rolled his eyes at Edger.

She cleared her throat and said,

"Alpha, I'm going to my cabin. I will inform you when Alpha Noble arrives here."

When she got no answer from Bryan, she left the cabin. She waited for Alpha Noble's arrival at the company.

After receiving the news from the receptionist that Alpha Noble had arrived, she did not waste any time and headed straight to Bryan's cabin.

She informed the three people to come to the conference room. All of them went there together.

When Sophia entered the conference room, she noticed all the managers of every department were present there.

They stood up and bowed to Bryan as he proceeded to the head chair.

Alpha Noble also got to his feet when Bryan came close to his chair. They greeted each other by shaking hands.

Alpha Noble was a middle-aged man who seemed to be experienced in the business world.

As the meeting started, Sophia stood beside Bryan while holding a file. Troy was making a move with his hand to wave at her, and she cast a glance in his direction.

Following the exchange of a smile with him, she returned to her professional demeanor.

"You will get 65% profit, but what will my pack get in return?" Alpha Noble asked the marketing manager, who had just presented the project on the projector.

Every manager tried to put their points forward in an effort to convince Alpha Noble.

"What else?" Once again, Alpha Noble inquired.

When Sophia noticed that Alpha Noble did not appear to be willing to accept the agreement, she pondered about it and then replied,

"You are receiving support from our pack. This is the most significant opportunity for you to investigate further fields. I believe this reason is enough for you to accept the deal."

Everyone turned their heads at her in shock. She shrugged her shoulders. She was a business student. She could see what strategy Alpha Noble was using. He had the desire to accept the deal, but he was merely trying to get an edge through negotiation.

Alpha Noble looked impressed by her words. He turned his attention to Bryan and chuckled.

"Your secretary is smart. She knows what to say in any situation."

Bryan looked indifferently at him. Sophia was perplexed as to why, on earth, he had not yet made an effort to convince Alpha Noble.

"Do you also have something to say, Alpha Bryan?" Alpha Noble asked.

Bryan gave him a nod. He looked at Beta Robert, who handed him the cigarette packet, as if Bryan had asked for it in his mind link.

Bryan pulled out a cigarette and put it between his lips.

Sophia was shocked. During the meeting, smoking was considered to be a form of disrespectful behavior toward the other Alphas. After all, it's a professional conference.

However, he was Alpha Bryan. In no way did he follow any of the regulations.

Sophia stepped aside when Edger stood up and came to light Bryan's cigarette.

She was able to get a sense of the entire room becoming anxious. The gaze of Alpha Noble was fixed on Alpha Bryan.

"70% of the profit," Bryan replied after taking a moment to inhale the smoke.

Alpha Noble frowned at him with a confused look. "What do you mean?"

"I want 70% of the profit," Bryan remarked as he removed the cigarette from his mouth and held it between his two fingers.

Alpha Noble and his beta, who had come with him, looked at Bryan in shock.

"But we were talking about 65%, and you agreed with it."

Bryan scoffed at him. "What about wasting my time for the past twenty minutes?"

"But don't you think you need to convince me?"

Bryan raised a brow and asked,

"Do you really think Alpha Bryan needs to convince anyone? Other Alphas are perishing to get the deal. Go and give it to one of them."

Sophia was shocked when she heard Bryan's warning directed toward Alpha Noble since she thought that Bryan would let the deal go.

In a situation where people tried to convince others, he liked to warn them.

"If you go out of my pack without signing the deal, I will close every border for your pack business. Let's see which pack will come to your aid when your pack members start starving to death."
