

Chapter 609

"No, he didn't do anything to me," Sophia patted her daughter's head gently.

"What? Didn't he say that..." Elise couldn't believe it.

"I'm serious. We were overthinking. I just made an agreement with him."

"What agreement?" Elise wiped away her tears.

"He..." Sophia told her everything. Although Chuck had mentioned that she could not tell others, Elise was her daughter.

However, she did not say a single word about Chuck's plan to be the richest man in the world.

"Cooperation? He wants to work with us?" Elise simply could not believe it!

"Yes. I've given him 30% of the shares," Sophia couldn't do anything about it.

As long as Chuck did not touch her, she would agree to anything. She would even give him 70% of the shares!

However, Chuck didn't push it too far, leaving her with a better impression of him.

Cooperating with him would be equivalent to cooperating with Karen, which was still of great benefit.

"That's a relief. However, Chuck looked at you with that kind of expression just now! Did he really not touch you just now?" Elise asked in a hurry.

As long as they were working together, it would be fine. There wouldn't be any harm in their cooperation, only benefits.

She knew that to work with Chuck was to work with Karen.

"Of course not," Sophia replied, shaking her head. She found it hard to explain.

Chuck hadn't touched her, had he? However, his tone was very flirtatious.

He had even complimented her multiple times. Wasn't he flirting with her?

She also felt slightly strange.

In fact, she was in a dilemma. After all, Sophia had been teased by a young man. She had extremely mixed feelings about this cooperation.

It was an extremely strange feeling.

"That's good. But why is your face red?" Elise was surprised.

"I drank a bit. Let's go home. I can rest well tonight." Sophia breathed a sigh of relief. After a few days of torture, she was very tired. Today's matter had been unexpectedly solved, so she needed rest.

"Me too. Let's go home."

The two of them drove home.

Once Sophia reached home, she lay on the bed groggily. Maybe she had been troubled for too long for she had a dream that night.

"My request is simple. That is, I want you to be with me," The Chuck in her dreams said with a smile.

Sophia was stunned and tangled. Finally, she sighed and compromised...

Chuck took a few steps towards her, but she did not resist.

This dream was so long. When Sophia woke up, she was confused and had a terrible headache. She went to take a bath...

.....

Patricia continued to do some research in Karen's casino. When Chuck woke up, he found Yvette in his arms.

In fact, Yvette knew that he was down last night. She wondered if it was because of Willa. Did he actually like her?

Maybe he didn't even understand his feelings.

Was that possible?

"Honey, I need to get up and discuss something with mom," When Chuck came back yesterday, he heard from Black Rose that his mother was no longer a member of the Lee family. She had been kicked out.

Chuck was furious!

He wanted to ask her about this matter.

"Alright," Yvette knew what happened to Chuck last night, as well as the cooperation with the Lawrence family.

"Honey, I'll be happy if you become the richest man in the world. Everything in my family will be yours, and all the money I earn will be yours. I'll continue to work hard to help you," Yvette said gently.

She felt that as Chuck's woman, she had to help him with this.

Chuck smiled and kissed her cheeks, smiling as he said gently, "I'm going to look for my mom."

"Okay," Yvette also had other things to do.

Just as Chuck got out of bed and was about to leave, there was a sudden knock on the door.

When Chuck opened the door, he was shocked to see Karen and Betty outside. Their expressions were eerily grim.

Yvette was also shocked. When she saw Karen, she hurriedly got up from the bed and came over. She lowered her head and said nothing.

"Mom, what are you doing here?" Chuck asked in surprise. What was Karen doing here this early in the morning?

"Chucky, please try to calm down. There's still something we can do, so don't be rash!" Karen's expression grew serious.

She had called Willa at 5 in the morning, but no one had picked up. Her phone was turned off.

She felt a little confused. Willa usually wouldn't do this. Whenever she called Willa, she would answer the call. However, this time, she didn't.

Also, the flight that should have arrived in Central City had yet to touchdown. It was impossible for the flight to arrive late.

Chuck was stunned and frowned, "Mom, what's going on?"

Yvette looked up and saw Karen's solemn expression. What had happened?

Had the Oatker family attacked them? Or was this a matter concerning the Lee family?

Yvette was lost in her thoughts.

"Something may have happened to Willa," Karen said. She was reluctant to admit it because she had watched Willa grow up with her own two eyes.

Willa was very talented. Karen had raised her since she was a child and knew what she was capable of. At first, Karen didn't want Willa to be Chuck's wife. Later, she noticed that Chuck also liked her, so she wanted to bring them together. However, she didn't expect the two of them to still be so distant.

"What? Auntie Logan got into an accident? What's going on?" Chuck grew nervous.

He was the one who had sent her off. How could anything have happened to her?

Yvette was shocked. Had something happened to Willa? She suddenly felt very guilty. She should have been there yesterday. If she had tried to persuade Willa, then she would not have been in trouble now.

"Willa's phone has been switched off and the plane is missing," Karen sighed. She knew exactly what this meant.

She had the ability to take it, but she was worried about Chuck.

Chuck immediately flew into a panic. Willa's plane had gone missing?

She was definitely in danger!

Yvette was stunned to her core. How could this be...

"Mom, let's go and find her quickly," Chuck said anxiously.

"Don't worry. I've already sent people to look for her. Willa's flight route is fixed, so there are not many places she could've gone," When Karen had realized what was going on, she had immediately sent people over to start looking for Willa. She was here to ask Chuck to follow along.

"Okay, let's go now," Chuck couldn't wait for another second.

He felt immense guilt and regret engulfing him.

He should have forced her to stay. If Willa had stayed, nothing would've happened.

As he thought of Willa who had come all the way here to save him and even suffered in the Amazon because of him, he felt a pang of pain hitting him.

How could anything have happened to her?

"Great, the plane is ready," Karen said. The people she sent had already gone ahead.

Chuck didn't have time to wait. He ran out immediately, and Betty caught up with him.

Karen followed suit. Meanwhile, Yvette felt extremely guilty and muttered, "I'm sorry. We talked a bit after I saw her doing it that day. She had left because of this..."

Yvette blamed herself. If she had pretended not to see it, would Willa have stayed?

If she hadn't gone back, nothing would've happened to her.

"It's not your fault," Karen shook her head. Willa had told her about everything. Yvette's reaction was reasonable, so it wasn't Yvette's fault at all.

Yvette lowered her head and felt guilty.

"Don't think too much about it. With Willa's strength, maybe she will be safe," Karen said in an attempt to comfort both Yvette and herself.

Yvette felt uneasy, "I hope she's fine. I won't say anything else, I promise."

If Willa was safe, Yvette would not say anything anymore. Even if she accidentally saw it, she would leave silently.

"We'll talk about this after we find Willa," Karen said.

The two of them also ran out and drove to the airport.

The group grabbed a plane and started searching along the lines of Willa's flight route.

They had to find some clues that could explain why the plane would go missing.

Chuck was anxious.

He prayed that Willa was safe and sound. He hoped nothing happened to her.

However, just then, Karen suddenly received a phone call. It was from one of the people she had sent out. She took a deep breath and answered the call.

Chuck saw her stunned expression and asked anxiously, "Mom, what happened?"

Yvette and Betty were extremely nervous. Karen put down her phone and sighed. "Willa's plane crashed..."
