

MEDICAL GOD CHAPTER 475

A disease that had experts all over the world scratching their heads must be something incredibly rare. For Liu Qingqing to find someone who could actually cure her, what is to say that person could not come up with something else equally as miraculous?

With her transformation literally happening overnight, some of her staff even wondered if it was actually her or some other woman she had hired to act in her stead. Their refusal to believe that it could be her was in part due to their lack of knowledge about advances in the medical field. They had asked her who this expert was, but she refused to say so they did not pry any further.

“If you put it that way, I guess we should continue with the clinical trials then.”

Taking the paper with the formula written on it, the experts bent their heads as they looked through it quickly. After that, they each shook their heads.

“A drug that’s taken orally should not have such obvious effects in one day alone.”

“Let me try it! My stretch marks are quite terrible.” A woman in her forties stood up and lifted her blouse. Her stretch marks were a lot worse than Huang Yan’s as her entire abdomen was nearly black with them. Clearly, melanin had deposited in them over the years.

Bringing the drug home with her, she followed the dosage instructions on the paper.

The next day, during their daily staff meetings, the woman suddenly barged into the meeting room. Locking the door, she turned around with a look of joy on her face.

“President Liu! It’s incredible! All of you, look!” She lifted her blouse to reveal her stomach. Where yesterday it had been an ugly black patch, today the marks were a lot lighter. Some of the smaller marks had even disappeared, leaving barely noticeable scars behind. The effect of the drug was unbelievable!

Everyone leaped to their feet and crowded the woman, wanting to take a closer look and feel it for themselves.

As women, they all knew how hard it was to get rid of any kind of scar. As businesswomen, they knew this drug was an excellent opportunity for Stratus Beauty to increase their market value immensely.

Originally already close to being the richest person in the country, with the release of this product, Liu Qingqing’s net worth would shoot up and land her firmly in first place. Even He Nianying, who would be left as the second richest person, might not be able to catch up to her.

Liu Qingqing was as excited as everyone else as her fingers clenched into fists. All she could think about was that calm and indifferent look on Qin Jun’s face.

That man was just too amazing.

A simple remedy off the top of his head could easily double her net worth. Not only was it going to change her life, her company was going to benefit hugely from this as well. He truly was a treasure to behold.

From here on out, it was Liu Qingqing’s time to shine. With the confirmation of the effectiveness of this product, there was no need to worry about losing money.

Calling her secretary over, she had the woman bring a contract over to Qin Jun. She would be transferring fifteen percent of Stratus Beauty’s shares over to him.

In truth, fifteen percent of the shares was a huge amount of money. Shares from a company like theirs was normally very difficult to come by as everyone wanted a cut of the several billion yearly dividends. With the launching of a new product, the share price would only go higher.

Now that she was giving him fifteen percent, he would be the biggest shareholder behind her.