

Chapter 27

During lunch, Leslie heart went down, only to find Jensen occupied her regular spot. She couldn't help frowning.

When she thought of his hypocritical face in her previous life, it instantly killed her appetite.

"Leslie, time to eat."

Jensen promptly stood as she approached, flashing a polite smile.

Leslie nodded curtly, "Sure, let's eat together."

Seeing that Leslie finally paid attention to him, Jensen was a little happy and even a little excited in his heart.

Every guy dreams of conquering the aloof beauty, right?

Ashley and Sarah exchanged glances, a subtle coldness passing through their eyes.

Sarah, observing her boyfriend's excitement, felt a twinge of discomfort.

Even though she had decided to let go of Jensen, he was still technically her boyfriend!

Sarah had once told him that he could pretend to be in love with Leslie, but not for real.

But... if Jensen really fell in love with Leslie, would this be a reasonable reason to break up with him?

"Leslie, Jensen prepared this feast. Look, these are all your favorite dishes. Give them a try and see how they fare," Ashley smiled, her expression gentle.

"Jensen can cook?" Leslie raised an eyebrow, a touch of sarcasm in her tone.

"Yeah, been doing chores since eight," Jensen admitted somewhat sheepishly.

"Indeed, Jensen is a versatile talent. Not just the piano and art, but cooking and chores too. The perfect husband material!" Sarah chimed in, elevating Jensen.

Leslie responded with a cold smile. Little did they know that, in her past life, after marrying Jensen, she took care of everything herself.

She foolishly thought that doing it all was the best way to prove her love.

Jensen enjoyed the perks, while she believed he was moved. It was a joke.

Leslie tasted it and nonchalantly commented, "Decent."

Ashley and Sarah expected enthusiastic praise, but Leslie's response was unexpectedly flat.

Jensen felt a tad disappointed.

He had nearly shown all his skills, yet Leslie seemed unfazed.

Ashley remained composed, and Sarah, feeling somewhat let down, gently suggested, "You mentioned wanting piano lessons before. Why not let Jensen give you some lessons?"

"Yeah, Jensen is an all-around talent. Piano at a Grade 9 level. Having him as your tutor will be beneficial," Ashley suggested, her eyes anticipating Leslie's response.

Leslie shook her head, "No, changed my mind about piano lessons. Not suitable for it now. Sarah has great taste and is more suitable."

Sarah pursed her lips, unsure if she was happy or upset. "Well, you could join. Maybe you can teach your children this."

"When the time comes, there will be better piano teachers. What do you think, Jensen?" Leslie smiled lightly.

She was implying that Jensen's level wasn't the highest, and he wasn't the best piano teacher.

Jensen felt a pang of frustration. From high school to college, he had countless girls chasing after him.

Because at that time, he had already showed his sharp horns, and he was handsome and talented in the campus. Which girl didn't like such a handsome talent?

Leslie was the first to treat him so indifferently.

Ashley coughed lightly, signaling Sarah and others not to rush things.

"If Leslie doesn't want to, don't force her. How about this, Leslie, what do you need help with? Maybe Jensen can assist you?"

Ashley asked with a faint smile.

Leslie smiled, "I don't need tutoring. I'm confident about the college entrance exam!"

In her previous life, Mya did not get into her ideal key university. Mya cried and pulled her to study all the subjects of the college entrance examination again.

Now Leslie still clearly remembered the test paper for the college entrance examination next year.

Ashley and Sarah exchanged surprised glances.

"Leslie, your previous exam results were not ideal. Aren't you a bit too confident now?" Sarah couldn't help but taunt Leslie.

In previous exams, Leslie ranked fifth from the bottom in the class.

Leslie couldn't do anything else but playing around, and she was not interested in learning at all.

"I'll give everyone a surprise!" Leslie raised her perfect chin confidently, smiling lightly.

Sarah jokingly added, "You might as well aim for the first place; it'll be a good scare for us."

Leslie brushed off their comments.

Just wait and see.

After all, she had a good memory. She must win the first prize this year so that she could give Ashley and Sarah a good slap on their faces!

The atmosphere became a bit awkward. Later, Jensen chatted about his experience sketching outdoors, lightening the mood.

After Leslie finished lunch, she received a call from Riley, informing her that the car accident issue was resolved.

Ashley was a smart person. Before Riley obtained her share, he would not kill her.

Leslie took Mya's call next, and she suggested they go to the NeonNook Zoo together.

It was a place Leslie loved in her past life, so she readily agreed.

Leslie hurried up to the second floor, grabbed a small bag, and left without applying makeup.

As soon as she walked out of the room, Jensen came over.

"Leslie, I don't need to teach Sarah the piano today. How about we explore the campus together?"

Jensen gently smiled, looking handsome and warm in his white outfit. Leslie, in her past life, was captivated by this.

Leslie shook her head coldly, "Thanks for your offer, but I'm going shopping with friends. Let's not bother."

Jensen's face stiffened. Even his slight initiative couldn't persuade Leslie.

"Are you going with friends? Why not let us join you? We're all young people; it's good to socialize."

Leslie curved her lips, revealing a mocking smile. "Sarah is a nice girl. If you pay more attention to her, that'll be enough. As for me, I'm not interested in you."

Seeing Jensen's face, Leslie's deep-seated resentment bubbled like boiling water. Gradually, that resentment transformed into disgust and

Send Gift

Comments

 Watch Ads to Get 8 Vouchers