

Chapter 2309 Righting Wrongs

Mr. Tyler hastily stood up after a highly-customized Rolls-Royce arrived and came to a halt.

Then, he hurriedly made his way to wait for the arrival of the president with the utmost respect.

A middle-aged man dressed in training attire was seen coming out from the car.

His tall figure carried a dominating presence, and he exuded an aura of superiority even though his clothing appeared ordinary.

"What's going on?"

Eugene Clifford had been in a gloomy mood since his uncle was maliciously defamed by Fabien Blanc yesterday.

Furthermore, receiving a call from his subordinate with news regarding the failed acquisition of the restaurant only added to his frustration.

The acquisition of the restaurant was a crucial component for him to make a presence in the food and beverage industry according to the company's strategic plan.

He had specifically tasked the manager of the company's strategic department to personally handle the negotiations to ensure the success of the acquisition.

However, to his surprise, a complication still occurred.

Bob's eyes instinctively flickered when he heard Eugene's inquiry.

He gritted his teeth and complained after a glance at Matthew, "I had the deal done with the owner of this restaurant, President Clifford.

"All that was left was signing the contract and making the payment. But, this audacious youngster came out of nowhere and bid 5.25 million to snatch the restaurant from me."

Eugene's expression immediately turned ugly after listening to him.

He was already in a bad mood, and Bob's explanation was like adding fuel to the fire.

"How dare he! I have been thriving in the business in Bainbridge for so many years. This is the first time someone has dared to obstruct Clifford Group's grand plan."

"Lead the way, I'll meet him personally."

Bob instinctively shrank his neck as it was the first time he witnessed him get so angry.

However, Bob had an indescribable excitement after Eugene turned his back on him.

He believed that the angrier Eugene was, the more disastrous the consequences would be for Matthew.

How dare you cross paths with me! You will reap what you sow soon enough.

On the other hand, Mr. Madison, the owner of the restaurant became flustered as Eugene was about to arrive.

He became even more anxious after looking at Matthew's indifferent expression.

He would have sold the restaurant at a low price to Bob if he had known this would happen.

Now, not only did he offend Bob, but he even involved the president of Clifford Group.

Eugene stepped into the room while Mr. Madison still had butterflies in his stomach.

Mr. Madison secretly begged for mercy in his heart when he saw Eugene's gloomy face.

He had no choice but to approach Eugene and apologize in the hope to stop things from getting worse.

"I'm truly sorry, President Clifford. The deal was stalled because of my greed and lack of principles. Let's seal the deal for this restaurant with the agreed price now."

However, Eugene ignored the restaurant owner. He walked straight toward Matthew and shook his hands instead when Bob had expected a dominant display of rage.

"I didn't expect to meet you here, Matthew."

Huh? What's going on? Why is President Clifford so enthusiastic toward this unfamiliar young man?

The restaurant owner was also dumbfounded by this scene.

Who is this young man? How could he make the president of Clifford Group shake hands with him?

However, Matthew wasn't impressed by Eugene's warm greeting.

"Was it you who arranged Mr. Tyler to purchase the restaurant with such an exploitive means, Uncle Eugene?"

Matthew had decided that he would not stand by and do nothing when he found out that Bob was taking advantage of the Banes' backing to act as he wished even though he was Albert's nephew.