

Chapter 2316 Signs of Malice

Mateo Southwark, the martial arts whizz from Southwark Family. That family was renowned as the top family in Zubrowka. No one of the same generation in the same country was that Jujitsu master's match.

That's why Mateo traveled to Cathay's capital—Bainbridge—with his family to participate in the grand martial arts competition.

His goal was to break through his limits and boost his reputation by beating the martial arts practitioners in Cathay.

Since it was his first time in Cathay, a casual tour around the place was a must. While he was wandering around alongside his friends, his friend almost bumped into a local young man.

People usually wouldn't make a scene because of an accident, but his startled friend was upset.

"What the?! Dennis, guys, give me a sec. Let me teach that guy a lesson." His friend was going to chase after Matthew only to be stopped by Mateo.

"Keep your cool, Aurelia. We are in Cathay. Let's not cause unnecessary trouble. Besides, that guy is a skilled martial artist. He might be on par with your level."

Although Matthew stayed low-profile, his fleeting reaction gave the game away. That elegant footwork indicated how skillful he was.

Annoyed by what Mateo said, Aurelia stomped on her foot.

"Alright, enough of that. He's a skillful martial artist, so we'll encounter him in the competition at the end of the day. No need for the rush."

She finally calmed down. "Mateo, you have to teach him a lesson when that happens."

"Your wish is my command. When the time comes, you can wish for him to lose a hand or a foot. Just say the word." Mateo gestured like a gentleman would do, which tickled her funny bone. Her chest bounced along, and he swallowed his saliva.

"Mateo, that's cruel of you to say that. Just break his neck when the time comes. That way, he won't feel any pain."

"As you wish, Miss Everhart. You really are a kind-hearted princess." He kissed the back of her hand.

On the other hand, Matthew, who was completely unaware of what happened back there, was still rushing his way to West District.

When he arrived at his destination, he was shocked by the long queue that stretched over a hundred yards from S&L's Breakfast.

"We're doing better than I expected!"

Before this, he predicted the shop to receive a good response from the market because of its focus on healthy recipes. Moreover, society now emphasized a lot on healthy products.

However, he didn't expect them to strike gold.

"There are so many rich people," he exclaimed because he was the one who set the prices.

As soon as he entered the shop, the joyful scene of a long-awaited welcome from his wife did not happen. A hectic Sasha gave him an order instead. "Honey, you came just at the right time. We have ten delivery orders to a Taekwondo training ground. The address is all on the receipt!"

I thought couples welcome each other affectionately after a long separation. He was speechless.

She turned a blind eye to his sour face. "What are you standing there for? The customers are waiting."
