

Chapter 2376 The Wyatt Brothers

Sasha's self-introduction had the dieticians exchange meaningful smiles. Matthew joked, "Excalibur, stop doing. My wife is getting jealous."

Everyone burst into laughter after he finished speaking. She blushed and pinched his waist hard. He sucked in a breath in pain.

While the laughter filled the air, Dylan hurriedly arrived from a distance. "Greetings, sir. Master told me to escort you to CAUMP."

Urain frowned. "Dylan, your juniors have already made a name for themselves in these years. You, on the other hand, have achieved nothing. Why don't you just follow your senior and cultivate together? Look at yourself, have you given up medicine for farming?"

Indeed, Tucker not only had disheveled hair but also had mud all over his body. "Thank you for your consideration. I am incompetent and only wish to serve you by your side all year round. As for my appearance, it's because I have been working in the medicinal fields."

He realized the impropriety of his attire and patted his clothes, raising a cloud of dust. Annoyed, Urain dispersed the dust with his energy in an instant. "You—"

He wanted to reprimand Dylan, but he gave up at the thought of his nephew's personality. "Never mind. Lead us the way."

As the masters walked away at a leisurely pace, Matthew noticed a young man of similar age following them. Sensing his gaze, the young man looked over and nodded expressionlessly.

Despite the simple gesture, a strong martial arts aura rushed towards Matthew, only to dissipate the next second.

Another prodigy.

Matthew speculated silently and returned the gesture to the young man, and their interaction ended right there.

Back at CAUMP, Rhett, who was busy and exhausted, took the time to arrange the reception. After Matthew and the dietician masters arrived, Rhett greeted them warmly. "Brother, why did you suddenly come to Bainbridge? It's been a long time. How do you feel?"

Brother?

Matthew looked at Urain with curious eyes. No wonder Urain felt familiar to Matthew. He didn't expect Rhett and Urain to be brothers.

Judging from Rhett's words, it seemed that this group of dietician masters were not invited by him.

While Matthew was pondering, Urain suddenly snorted. "I won't die that soon yet."

Noticing his brother's displeasure, Rhett asked curiously, "What's wrong?"

A continuous stream of accusations came crashing down.

"How dare you ask me this question? The Holy Doctor Competition almost ruined our reputation because of those Emsgate fellows. You even undermined the authority of the CAUMP. And look your disciple. Is he planning to become a farmer?"

Dylan could only scratch his head, mortified. Rhett finally understood the situation. His elder brother was dissatisfied with the CAUMP's recent performance and came to Bainbridge specifically to tell him off.

Rhett's expression turned serious at this matter. "Urain, how can you bring this up? If you hadn't taken the lead and retired to Kinton, many of us wouldn't have followed suit, citing old age as an excuse. Look at what you've done. How many are there left handling the once prestigious CAUMP?"

Rhett brought out a list of themes. After a glance, Urain's face turned red. He didn't expect that his unintentional actions would bring such a big impact.
