

Chapter 2389 Ella Arrives At Bainbridge

Levi just smiled and shook his head at Matthew "Save the formality. We're just here to freeload." he spread his empty hands.

The more casual he was, the better his relationship with Matthew. Martin had been observing Levi's behavior from the beginning of the journey until now

Levi had undergone a tremendous change. It was so drastic that Martin had trouble adapting to it. How should he put it?

Previously, Levi was like a fierce crocodile lurking in the swamp; he hid himself, ready to deliver a fatal blow to his prey at any moment.

Yet, now, he was more like a gentle water buffalo; harmless to humans and animals. He was approachable.

Even the serious and stern Levi had become mischievous.

Of course, they had known each other for many years, but Martin had never been able to fully understand him. Since he couldn't figure it out, he decided not to dwell on it.

"Matthew, don't listen to this old man. He came empty-handed, but I have prepared a gift for you," Martin said. He then took out a pearl the size of a baby's fist, almost perfect in appearance. The white surface shimmered with a purple light, catching the attention of all the women present.

Just as Matthew was about to refuse, a figure suddenly rushed into the hall. Before Levi and Martin reacted, the person had already arrived next to them.

Then, with a leap, the figure landed on Matthew's back with her hands covering his eyes.

"Matthew, guess who I am?" It sounded so familiar that it lit his face with joy.

"Ella, why are you here in Bainbridge?" he asked, immediately embracing her.

Looking at her chubby arms and rosy cheeks, he could tell that Ella had been living well in Orleans.

What shocked him the most was her increase in strength. With just her lightning-fast speed earlier, he had so much to catch up with her.

Needless to say, the stronger Ella became, the happier he was.

"Come, Ella, say hello to Uncle Levi and Uncle Martin." He patted her cheeks before setting her down on the ground.

As she curiously looked at Martin and Levi, the two of them involuntarily took several steps back. Then, with a wary look in their eyes, they glanced at each other. The stronger one's power, the more sensitive one became to danger.

It was an instinctive reaction to terrifying strength.

Levi hadn't expected that the little girl who was once powerless had become so powerful, and more importantly...

The terrifying power within Ella made even him tremble.

"Uncle Levi, Uncle Martin, hello. I'm Ella!" she greeted.

"Uh, yes, hello!" The two Kings were suddenly a bit awkward.

Ella's eyes brightened at the sight of the pearl. Leaving with no choice, Matthew apologized to Martin and gave it to her as a gift. Martin naturally had no objections.

As for the Cunningham family, they were completely numb by now. What kind of divine lineup is this?

They had been so proud and mocking before, yet now they were in a very embarrassing situation.

Matthew suddenly walked up to Yann. "Sorry, Mr. Fair, right? And Mr. Yann! Our guest seats are already full. So, please?" he said, clearly indicating that they were being expelled.

As for the two of them, they had no pride to stay any longer and hurriedly fled together.
