

Chapter 2395 The Assassination Order Against Matthew

The next day, the Emsgate people, who were exhausted from indulging in wine and women, returned to the large courtyard prepared by the Watkins Family. Grogginess was weighing on his head heavily.

Before they entered the place, a cry of mourning came from inside.

"Josiah, why couldn't you hold on? It was only a matter of half a day. Just half a day!"

Everyone felt a sense of impending doom. After quickly walking into the courtyard. What they saw was the body of Josiah from the Golden Sword Sect, as well as the broken Seven Pace Sword beside the body.

Everyone was surprised by their sleepiness. A murderous Great Octavian stepped forward. "Master Damron, what is going on? Didn't Josiah say that he and your family were going to Eastshire to intercept Matthew? Why? Why did this happen?"

Pointing at Josiah's body, he trembled uncontrollably with anger. This person was the most significant genius in Emsgate. The head of the Golden Sword Sect not only appointed him as the next sect leader but also made a bold statement—Josiah would be able to break through the mountain in Cathay that no one had ever crossed.

His talent in martial arts was indeed unparalleled. At the age of early 20s, he had already comprehended the unparalleled sword intent. It was something even the older generation of strong warriors found difficult to catch him up.

From the moment he showed his extraordinary talent. He became the primary trainee in the Emsgate Warriors Association.

Yet, such a genius died within the borders of Cathay.

Baxter hung his head low. "Sir, this is all my fault. Josiah said he wanted to go and kill Matthew, I should have tried to stop him at all costs. Otherwise, he wouldn't have gone to Eastshire to get killed by Matthew. It's all my fault. It's all my fault."

His lament jarred into everyone's ears, and the Emsgate people instantly grasped the core of the problem.

"Damn it! It's that damn Matthew Larson again! He killed our genius divine doctor from the Land of Divinity, and now he even killed the Golden Swordsman. Josiah is now the next one on the death list. We must avenge this!

We will return to the Land of Divinity as quickly as possible to inform the Golden Sword Sect and Emsgate Warriors Association of Josiah's death. Issue an order to assassinate Matthew. The Mavericks members will join forces to besiege and kill him."

...

Within brief moments, all the forces present dispatched members to spread this news in Emsgate. At the same time, they also jointly issued a death warrant for Matthew.

Despite the sorrowful expression, Aurelius was genuinely thrilled. "Matthew Larson, this time, you're dead meat."

He tried to suppress the excitement in him as a nimbus of power played around his hands.

"You deserve to die for failing to protect Josiah!"

He propelled his palms forward, and Baxter was so far away from everyone that no one knew whether he survived that hit or not.

Of course, this was also part of Aurelius's plan. Although Matthew was the murderer, the Watkins Family held part of the responsibility.

The only way for Aurelius to face the Emsgate people was to punish his very own nephew.

As he had expected, the representatives of the Emsgate forces wore a relieved expression upon witnessing the punishment themselves.

"Master Damron, this matter has nothing to do with Baxter. Why did you act so ruthlessly?"

It was an insincere statement, but that was exactly what he wanted.

Soon, the shocking news reached Terrance's ears. "I didn't expect Aurelius to have such nerves. Good, wonderful. Matthew Larson, let's see if you can escape from this."

As enemies, Matthew, who possessed extraordinary talent, was a pill to the Cunninghams. As long as they didn't eliminate him, they would never have peace of mind at all.

With this, the vortex of conspiracy was officially formed.