

Chapter 2464 Sword Break Blocked

After yesterday's ambush, although Matthew felt his consciousness sinking, his memory remained intact.

His opponent from the Talone Sect had mastery over earth manipulation and possessed exceptional agility.

Matthew would not naturally fear his opponent if he were in his prime physical condition.

However, given his weakened state, he needed considerable effort and strategic thinking to defeat his opponent and win the match.

Meanwhile, Chad, sprinting along the arena, had already showcased his agility technique to the extreme.

At first glance, all one could see was a swiftly moving silhouette.

Matthew, who was in the center of the arena, had his full attention focused.

He had witnessed his opponent's techniques before.

Similar to Zech, they were both skilled in long-range attacks.

As expected, just as Matthew drew his sword, a cold glint flashed behind him.

He spun around, swung his sword, and swiftly split the earth-made spikes in half.

With Chad launching another attack, the following episodes were like a torrential storm, relentless and unending.

Earth spikes came from all directions, aimed at Matthew.

Nevertheless, he blocked the incoming spikes with each sweep of his swords.

His reflexes and agility are not bad, but the underlying injuries still burden him. Let's see how long you can hold on. This sentence surfaced in Chad's mind as he once again ramped up the speed of his attacks.

The number of earth spikes in that instant surged towards Matthew in a denser frenzy.

Just as Chad expected, Matthew gradually felt his stamina waning under such intense dodging, and his mind drifted.

He couldn't react in time for a moment, and the sharp earth spikes headed straight for the center of his forehead.

Even though he quickly turned his head, his face still bore a deep graze.

His original rhythm was disrupted instantly because of this, and Chad was waiting for this opportunity.

In a sudden brake, he crouched down, and with a forceful push of her feet off the ground, he propelled towards Matthew like a bullet.

During this sprint, a surge of vigorous nimbus manifested in his hand.

As he clenched his right hand, all the yellow, sandy soil surged towards him madly.

In the blink of an eye, a giant blade, over a yard long and more than three feet wide, materialized in his hand.

It wasn't that Chad didn't want to wear Matthew down to death, but that this type of long-range attack with earth spikes, coupled with his rapid movements, was also a massive drain on him.

If Chad maintained this state for too long, it was very likely that he would exhaust himself without bringing down his opponent.

At this moment, Matthew barely managed to block all the earth spikes.

Suddenly facing such a giant blade, he instinctively swung his sword to meet the attack.

Clang!

The two weapons clashed, creating a tremendous noise.

However, although Matthew's Bloodreaper created a significant gap in the opponent's giant blade, the overwhelming force also sent him flying.

As Matthew took advantage of this hard-earned opportunity, he leaped into the air, raising his sword to strike directly at Chad. Sword Break!

After landing, Matthew pushed off the ground with both feet, sliding for about ten yards before finally stabilizing his body.

As for Chad on the opposite side, when faced with this move again, he surprisingly did not use the Earth Release Technique.

Instead, he directly transformed the giant blade in his hand.

As the sword energy approached, a one-yard-wide earth wall instantly formed before him.

Accompanied by violent tremors, a deep gap appeared on the wall's surface.

However, the sword's energy was blocked entirely about two-thirds of the way through the wall.

"Hahaha, I knew it. With your injuries, you can't unleash your full power." Chad laughed heartily.

However, after that, he also began to breathe heavily. Clearly, this Earth Wall Defense Technique was also a significant drain on him.
