

Chapter 2524 Laura's Sudden Appearance

No one was naturally strong; it was a result of repeated resistance. Even after the dead had passed, the living had to continue living. After shedding tears, Vivian's emotions calmed down slightly, and when Matthew mentioned moving, she simply nodded with red eyes and a sorrowful expression.

For the safety of the Slob Family, Matthew directly brought them into his villa, which also conveniently allowed Matthew to treat Alberta.

"Mrs. Slob's body is too weak, so she may not be able to handle the news. Let's wait until she recovers before telling her," suggested Matthew.

Vivian was still reeling from the blow of her husband's death and was already at a loss, so she simply nodded in agreement.

Evander walked in from outside the door. "Mr. Larson, there is a woman outside claiming to be Instructor Larry's cousin."

Huh? How did she know so quickly? She came knocking just as I arrived home.

However, she was still Larry Slob's relative regardless of whether she had ulterior motives, so Matthew asked Evander to bring her in.

A woman dressed in various luxury brands and jewelry then appeared in front of them, accompanied by the sound of hurried high heels. Judging by her arrogant appearance, it was clear that she was not here with good intentions.

As soon as she entered the door, she immediately accused, "Who allowed you to take my Aunt Alberta away?"

Everyone present frowned at those words, but Vivian, who was standing beside her, immediately retorted, "Laura, why are you making such a fuss? You call my mother 'aunt' so affectionately but didn't come to visit even once when she was bedridden. Why are you so worried now that Matthew has provided her with a better environment for ease of treatment?"

Provoked by Vivian's words, Laura's face turned pale with anger. "Hmph, Vivian, is this the way you talk to your cousin? You should know that all these years, I have been the one contacting doctors to treat her."

Upon hearing these words, Vivian became even angrier, and her sad expression turned furious. "Contact doctors? How can you even say that? Do I need to point out the unethical things you did one by one? The doctor you recommended charged over a thousand for medicine costing only over a hundred, and not only did my mother's condition not improve, but it has worsened."

"If not for the unscrupulous doctor you introduced leeching on Larry, our family wouldn't have ended up in such a situation." Vivian's tears welled up once more at the mention of her husband.

Laura seemed to be struck by her words, and her face turned red. "Y-You're talking nonsense. Mr. Riley is a renowned doctor in Hulwin. How dare you insult him like this?"

"You are so ungrateful toward someone who has been kind to you. Just wait. No one in Hulwin will help treat Aunt Alberta with a word from him. If anything happens to her, it will be your fault." After expressing her rage, Laura eventually calmed down. "Step aside, I want to see her and take her for treatment."

Matthew, who had been silent all along, suddenly raised his arm and stopped her. "I'm sorry, but she needs rest right now, and no one can take her away until my patient recovers."

Laura stopped in her tracks and looked at Matthew disdainfully. "Who do you think you are? This is the Slob Family's business. What right do you have to interfere as an outsider?"

He remained calm. From Vivian's words, he probably understood the relationship between the two parties.

With a serene smile, he said, "I am Matthew, the Holy Doctor of Cathay!"
