

Chapter 2549 Making a Bet

"Originally, my master just wanted you to take down the sign that claims you can cure all diseases, but now, things have become much more complex. Since you were disrespectful to my master, kneel down and apologize now. If you do that, my master won't pursue the matter any further."

At this moment, Grayson couldn't hold back anymore. "Mr. Riley, you have gone too far."

Suddenly, Mr. Murphy, the other old alternative medicine doctor behind Mr. Riley, focused his gaze on Grayson.

"Grayson, we didn't come looking for trouble with you, but you decided to interfere. After discussing with the Hulwin Alternative Medicine Association members, since you are not skilled enough, it has been decided that your medical license will be revoked to prevent you from harming others and to protect the interests of the patients."

"If you have any sense, you should comply obediently. Otherwise, there will be no place for you in Hulwin."

Mr. Murphy arrogantly thought that he could get Grayson to obey him.

Little did the three elders know that if Matthew had not persuaded Grayson to stay, Grayson would have left long ago since their threats didn't scare Grayson at all.

Looking at their arrogant and haughty appearance, Matthew was angered. He wondered where they got their confidence from.

"Sorry for interrupting. The medical license is exclusively recognized by the CAUMP. Your so-called association doesn't have any authority in this aspect at all."

"Also, there's one thing you've misunderstood. The sign that claims that one can cure all diseases doesn't belong to Mr. Zahn, but me—Matthew Larson."

Upon hearing the first half of his sentence, the three elders were still angry, but when Matthew finished the second half of his sentence, they were momentarily stunned.

They stared at Matthew's young face, and then someone burst out laughing all of a sudden. This started a chain reaction, causing everyone else to laugh as well.

"This is hilarious! Your sign? You should take a good look at yourself before boasting."

"Do you know anything about herbal medicine, diagnostic methods, or acupuncture? I can't believe you dare to make such grandiose claims."

"Alright, everyone calm down."

Although Mr. Riley was forcibly suppressing his emotions, there was still a hint of mockery at the corner of his lips.

"Matthew, your joke was quite successful. Perhaps the medical industry is not suitable for you. On the contrary, your talent for entertaining is extraordinary."

Along with his words, there was another burst of laughter from behind.

They naturally despised Matthew's ignorant words and actions.

Matthew pretended to be angry and raised his hand to say, "Since no one believes the truth, let me prove it to you. I'll face the obstacles head-on. I propose a duel of medical skills. Do you dare to accept this challenge?"

His reaction was that of a person who had lost his mind out of anger and embarrassment.

At this moment, one of the three elders who had been silent, Mr. Chandler, suddenly raised an eyebrow.

"Since you're so confident, we'll oblige. However, as well-known medical practitioners of Hulwin, a simple competition seems a bit beneath our status. How about we increase the stakes?"

Seeing that the other party took the bait, Matthew couldn't help but feel delighted.

Of course, he continued to put on a poker face and firmly said, "Alright, what do you want to bet on?"

Seeing this, the other two old traditional medicine practitioners secretly gave Mr. Chandler a thumbs-up and then smiled at each other.

"Matthew, how about this? The stakes are too low, but we won't back down from a challenge. It just so happens that the three of us have a new building under our names."

"We'll give you an advantage over us. If we win, this clinic will belong to us. If you win, the new building will be yours."

Upon hearing this, their disciples suddenly became anxious. The difference between the stakes was clearly too great.

However, Mr. Riley waved his hand indifferently, indicating for them to calm down before adding, "Of course, Matthew, if you lose, you will leave Hulwin and never set foot in Seraphis Province again."