

Chapter 2552 Guessed It Right

When one of the three masters, Christian Riley, carefully opened the wooden chest, he discovered a brightly colored red petal inside.

At first glance, it appeared ordinary, but it still seemed ordinary upon closer inspection.

What is this?

Seeing these petals, the three masters frowned.

They would have assumed it was just an ordinary petal if they hadn't witnessed Matthew's pharmacological skills before.

But looking at Matthew's confident and relaxed demeanor, the three masters couldn't help but feel uncertain.

"This item is packaged so delicately, and this kid is definitely trying to stump us. This must not be as simple as it seems. Don't underestimate it, you two," Christian reminded them.

Upon hearing Christian's reminder, the other two were immediately enlightened.

What a cunning kid. He almost tricked us.

With this thought in mind, the three masters observed more carefully.

However, after about ten minutes, the three of them exchanged glances and saw doubt in each other's eyes.

As their leader, the other two fixed their gaze on Christian and looked at him inquiringly.

For a moment, Christian also appeared troubled.

He himself didn't recognize these petals.

Then, he thought of something, and his eyes suddenly lit up. He coughed lightly.

"This item is indeed extraordinary, but unfortunately, I didn't get enough rest last night, and my thoughts are a bit confused. Here, Mr. Murphy, your pharmacological knowledge is the highest among us. You explain it to them and let Matthew also witness the strength of Hulwin's master of alternative medicine."

When Christian mentioned his name, Elias knew things were going to spiral south.

Sure enough, once Christian finished speaking, all the disciples' attention was turned to him.

Their eyes were full of curiosity and anticipation.

The excuse Elias was about to blurt out was quickly swallowed.

With a brave face, he cautiously said, "This item is the north blood safflower."

After speaking, he quickly glanced at Matthew.

Once he noticed Matthew's expression changed upon hearing the answer, Elias gained infinite confidence.

D*mn, did I guess it right?

With this thought in mind, a surge of confidence instantly filled his heart.

Under the eyes of the admiring disciples, Elias calmly stroked his beard.

"Blood safflower, as the name suggests, is used for blood replenishment. According to the Compendium of Materia Medica, this flower blooms once every hundred years and is said to be able to resurrect the dead."

Speaking of this, he couldn't help but add, "However, that's just a legend. I think it basically means that this herb has a very strong blood-boosting effect."

As he spoke, he raised his head proudly and looked at Matthew.

The north blood safflower was not a fabrication of his.

It was something he saw in a niche fairytale.

Unexpectedly, it actually had a great effect today.

As for Matthew, he raised his hand and clapped after the other party finished speaking.

"Amazing, truly amazing. You're indeed worthy of being called the master of alternative medicine."

Faced with Matthew's praise, Elias became even prouder.

After a cold snort, he turned his head to the side.

That arrogant appearance on his face made him seem like a true master.

In the meantime, Christian and Nicholas Chandler also changed their views on Elias.

Unexpectedly, this old man's knowledge of medicine had made great progress and even surpassed their expectations.

"Matthew, my master has given the correct answer, so hand over the clinic. In addition, according to the agreement, you are not allowed to set foot in the South from now on."

Once Jasper finished, the other disciples also followed suit.

"Get out of Hulwin, you trash."

"I thought you had some skills, but it turns out you're just pretending to be smart."

However, in the face of everyone's continuous mockery, Matthew smiled faintly.

"Who told you that I lost, and who told you that Mr. Murphy was right?"
