

Chapter 2560 Randolph's Announcement

Once Sasha went upstairs, Matthew went to look for Stellan.

As soon as he entered the room, Stellan immediately guessed why Matthew was there.

"Mr. Summit Warden, are you here regarding the new office building belonging to the three masters?"

It was always convenient to converse with intelligent individuals.

Matthew nodded, taking a seat without hesitation and patiently awaiting further discussion.

While Stellan poured tea for Matthew, he discreetly signaled his trusted subordinate, Arian, to depart and secure the surroundings.

After Arian left and ensured the area's safety, Stellan began explaining, "I don't have all the specific details. The information I received is that Randolph Murray has made a public statement to completely ban all your assets.

Furthermore, the recent incident involving the Yarwoods has caused quite a commotion. Everyone in Hulwin is aware of the conflict between you and the Yarwoods, and they fear them greatly. So, even if they want to, they dare not cooperate with you."

Upon hearing this, Matthew grasped the true situation.

After sipping his tea, he asked with a perplexed expression. "Who is this Randolph Murray?"

"He is a wealthy man in Hulwin and also the president of the Hulwin Chamber of Commerce. Most importantly, he and Valentin are sworn brothers. He is domineering and controls the entire Chamber of Commerce."

On the couch, Matthew smirked coldly.

"I had originally planned to finish my current tasks before dealing with Valentin Yarwood. But I didn't expect him to make the first move. In that case, I will play along with him. Thank you for the information, Mr. Warrington. I will be going home now."

When Matthew stood up to leave, Stellan suddenly offered a word of caution.

"Mr. Larson, you have to be cautious during this time. Randolph is ruthless and goes to extreme lengths when doing things. Although he may not attack you directly, he might target those around you."

"I understand. Thank you, Mr. Warrington. Once everything in Hulwin stabilizes, I will fulfill my promise to you."

Once that was said, Matthew promptly departed.

Meanwhile, on Matthew's side.

One bad news came with another.

First, Evander contacted him and stated that the suppliers for their reserve troops had unilaterally terminated the agreement and would no longer provide any supplies to them.

Simultaneously, Grayson reported that all the suppliers of medicinal materials had shut him out and disappeared when he went to purchase them.

Even on Matthew's side, the pre-ordered mining auxiliary materials suddenly ran out of stock and couldn't be supplied on time.

"Hmph! It seems these people are quite efficient. Since they are seeking their own demise, they can't blame me for what's coming."

Muttering to himself, Matthew dialed Leanna's number once again.

The following morning.

The pot-bellied Randolph, clad in loose pajamas and a grin, entered the living room.

Yesterday, he slept with three women and made them repeatedly beg for mercy.

While reminiscing on that memory, he couldn't help but feel even prouder.

In the living room, Valentin had been waiting for quite some time.

When he saw Randolph, he excitedly approached him.

"Randolph, you're amazing. You managed to cut off all supplies to Matthew Larson's assets in one day."

Upon hearing his praise, Randolph sneered.

"How dare that little brat dare to show off in my territory? If it weren't for the Martial League's support, he would have been dead long ago."

"You're absolutely right, Randolph. It's all thanks to your brilliant methods. Now, Matthew has become a trapped bird. Even if he has some tricks up his sleeve, he won't be able to escape your grasp."

Receiving Valentin's praise, Randolph couldn't help but feel a sense of pride.

"Hehe. Just relax, Valentin. No matter how grand his entrance to Hulwin was, I'll make him leave just as embarrassingly."
