

Chapter 2623 Dance for Me

When it came to dealing with this kind of haughty rich kid, Matthew had encountered and dealt with plenty of them, especially considering his primary objective was to gather information. Therefore, he paid no attention to Avril's sarcastic remarks.

However, Elara, who was standing beside them, couldn't help but grimace at the prospect of being called a "drag-along" and wasn't pleased.

"Sigh, what bad luck. But since you've already here, you can board the ship with us, hick, lest Grandpa gets upset with me if he doesn't see you," Avril voiced her complaint and promptly boarded one of the luxurious cruise ships.

The comment "hick" instantly ignited Elara's irritation. She retorted with annoyance, "You're but a spoiled rich kid who throws her weight around because of her family; what's there for you to be proud of?!"

Upon hearing Elara's words, Avril paused in her tracks. Just as she was about to turn around and confront Elara, the cruise ship's gangway started filling with wealthy passengers, all boarding the ship together.

"Just you wait, you country bumpkin!" Avril glared daggers at Elara before walking onboard the luxurious cruise ship with deep resentment.

Matthew, witnessing the conflict between the two women, could only shake his head in resignation. Indeed, wherever there were many women, disputes were bound to arise. He had a headache just thinking about it, but as long as there were no complications, he was satisfied.

"Ivy, let's go enjoy the cruise on this big ship," Matthew said, lifting Ivy into his arms and then swiftly running up the deck.

It had to be said that the massive cruise ship named "Maria" was indeed luxurious and extravagant. Just on the main deck, there were no fewer than five or six hundred people, all elegantly dressed and exuding wealth and opulence. Of course, they had another role to play, which was that of witnesses.

On this day, the negotiations between the Stubber Family and the Perryvall Family from the Concordia region were witnessed by these wealthy businessmen from Concordia and its surrounding cities.

Following Avril from a distance, Matthew, along with Elara and Ivy, entered the lavishly decorated hall. By this time, many gossipmongers had already started discussing the conflict between the two major forces.

"Have you heard? The Perryvalls sent people to cause trouble at the Stubber Family's arena, and they had a fierce clash. It seems like dozens of people died."

"I heard about it too. The source of the conflict is quite interesting. It's said that the Perryvalls had already negotiated a massive supply order with Enzo Gavell, but then the Stubbers somehow found out the Perryvall Family's reserve price. They directly undercut the Perryvall Family's offer by five points and snatched the deal."

"So that's the story. I was wondering why these two families had such an intense confrontation."

Amid the ongoing discussions, Matthew discreetly joined a group of onlookers, listening to their conversation and absorbing all the details. This incident indeed reflected poorly on the Stubber Family's behavior.

At the same time, a fiery Avril confronted Elara. "You, country bumpkin, it was you who mocked me, right?!"

Outnumbered, Elara's arrogance diminished somewhat. "What, are you allowed to insult me, but I can't?"

"You f*cking b*tch! How dare you talk back to Avril! Are you itching for trouble?! You want to see if I'll feed you to the sharks?!"

Threatened by Avril's ferocious companion, Elara felt intimidated.

"What are you trying to do?" She forced herself to appear calm, albeit somewhat nervously.

Upon seeing Elara's response, Avril sneered, "Heh, what do we want? You have a good figure, you know? Why don't you go up there and dance for us? If we're satisfied, we'll let this go. Otherwise, I have a hundred ways to make you suffer."

She pointed toward the central stage in the hall.

However, Elara had no idea how to dance. Even if she could, she wouldn't want to do it in front of so many strangers. Avril's intention was clear: she wanted to humiliate Elara in front of everyone.

Seeing Elara remain silent, Avril's tone grew colder. "Looks like you're unwilling."