

Chapter 2652 Various Thoughts and Intentions

With Enzo taking the lead, the other guests greeted Tyga and quickly boarded Enzo's ship to depart. As for the cruise ship beneath their feet, it was designated for Tyga and Matthew's private meeting.

As the ship began to move, watching Matthew's figure on the cruise ship, the guests had mixed thoughts. Although they couldn't manage to eliminate Matthew in the end, there was still a sense of satisfaction. They not only secured a profitable business opportunity through their connection with Enzo but also made an impression in front of Tyga.

Isambard and Tavish, too, carried complex emotions. This young man was too enigmatic. Not only did he have the backing of the Zedler Family, but he had also established connections with the Montiria Royal Family. They couldn't deny that the presence of this young man might bring significant changes to the future of Seraphis. Thinking about this, Tavish couldn't help but sigh. Beckett, my grandson, I'll have to find another opportunity to avenge you.

With these emotions in mind, the two elders exchanged a glance and simultaneously snorted coldly before turning their heads away.

On the bow of the ship, Enzo quietly enjoyed the sea breeze. Upon hearing the footsteps of his subordinate, he opened his eyes.

"How is Blanco's injury? Is it severe?" he inquired.

"Other than his knee, which suffered a comminuted fracture, he should recover with some rest," the subordinate replied.

"Alright, let him rest properly. Also, regarding the Night Creeper Tea, make arrangements as soon as possible."

"Understood. By the way, should I arrange to deal with Matthew Larson for you, Mr. Gavell?"

Blanco was one of Enzo's trusted subordinates, and considering his severe injury, the subordinate sought Enzo's guidance.

Enzo shook his head. "Let's not rush to take action. This Matthew Larson may seem young, but he has connections to the Zedler Family and the Montiria Royal Family. Let's wait and see how the situation unfolds."

From initially admiring Matthew to considering taking action against him and later being surprised, Enzo had gone through various emotions. If he still believed in Matthew's claimed identity, he would truly be a fool. Matthew exuded an air of confidence, whether facing the Stubber and Perryvall Families on his own or in an armed standoff. It was a confidence rooted in either his own abilities or the powerful support behind him, making Enzo immensely curious.

"You know what? Screw that. Let's stay clear of that young man; he's too unpredictable."

On the other side, the Zedler brothers tightened their coats as they stepped onto a speedboat, immediately wanting to report the news to their father. The death of the Keller Family's eldest son had created a massive impact, and they felt unable to handle it.

"Father, we have a serious problem."

Mortimer's voice came through the phone, chastising them, "You're both adults, so stop acting so fidgety. What happened?"

"Father, Osiris Keller is dead."

"Who killed him?"

In response to this question, Erwin hesitated for a moment, then answered with a serious tone, "It was Matthew Larson. Osiris Keller was killed by his sword."

The phone line fell silent for a while before Mortimer issued a stern command, "Understood!"

Snap! After the call was disconnected, the Zedler brothers exchanged a sinister smile. They couldn't help but think, Matthew Larson, you're in for a world of trouble this time!

Matthew remained unaware of these developments. At this moment, he was already on the bow of the ship, engaged in a conversation with Tyga.

"What do you need from me?" Matthew asked Tyga. He didn't feel particularly favorable or unfavorable toward Tyga. His first impression of Tyga was someone with a hidden agenda, cold-blooded and ruthless. However, as long as Tyga didn't provoke him, Matthew had no intention of causing trouble either.

"Mr. Larson, I'll be straightforward. We have an important figure in our royal family who has been in poor health for quite some time. Despite consulting numerous renowned physicians, there has been no significant improvement. We've heard about your extraordinary medical skills and have sought you out in the hope that you might be able to help," Tyga explained.