

Chapter 2682 Emden Hall Receives High Praise

After a long and exhausting day, Matthew couldn't remember how many patients he had treated.

Some were amazed by his medical skills, while others came solely for the "free" treatment, despite their frail bodies.

A few people had to reluctantly give up waiting in line for treatment, as Matthew might have to work all night.

The next morning, Matthew arrived at Emden Hall once again, yawning. In the first few days of the clinic's opening, he still had to personally oversee everything.

Relying solely on the few alternative medicine practitioners from Hulwin might not be enough to handle the crowd.

However, when he entered the main hall through the back door, his legs went weak.

"What's happening, Prince? Why are there even more people than yesterday!"

Matthew pointed to the bustling crowd outside the clinic and saw that there were more than twice as many people as the previous day.

The Prince, who was lounging with his legs crossed, threw the newspaper he was holding at Matthew.

"Take a look. Someone is running negative advertisements against you!"

After Matthew glanced at the newspaper, he saw pictures of himself talking to those Hairy guys from yesterday, as well as some dangerous pictures of the Prince confronting the other party.

The headline read—"Shocking News! Cathay's unethical alternative medicine discriminates against foreign patients!"

Just by looking at these, Matthew couldn't deduce much. But when he looked at the Prince again, the latter made a calm gesture and pointed to his ear, then pointed outside the clinic.

"Did all these people come because of the newspaper?"

"Of course. What else? Apart from the doctors' attitude at Emden Hall, I just had to come and show my support."

"Those foreigners always think they're superior. They look down on you with their noses even when asking for directions."

The sentiments of ordinary people were direct, pure, and genuine like this!

Upon hearing these comments, Matthew was speechless. Well, these reasons were quite strong.

Of course, most people came because of his exceptional medical skills. Word of mouth had spread about his ability to cure diseases.

On the other hand, since the news that smeared Matthew was published, Olivia's popularity had skyrocketed. At least, Concordia now knew about a female journalist named Olivia Perrer.

She returned to the scene early in the morning with a joyful heart and intended to see the results of her efforts.

Hmph! Who allowed that clinic to target our foreign friends? Now, it's time for them to witness my wrath.

However, when she arrived at the clinic, she was completely dumbfounded.

In front of Emden Hall, it wasn't the empty scene she had expected but a bustling crowd. The long queue had already stretched to the end of the street.

And people passing by kept praising Matthew's medical skills to each other.

"This miracle doctor is truly amazing. I've had this cold feet for so many years, and I didn't expect it to be relieved by more than half with just a few needles."

"Me too! My gastric problem has been cured. Luckily, I read the newspaper. Otherwise, I would have missed out on such a great opportunity."

"Yeah, the clinic's reverse tactics are brilliant. It seems like they're tarnishing their reputation, but they're actually doing publicity."

"Hey, why does that foreign girl look so angry?"

"Maybe she's here to see a doctor because she's not feeling well. Let's move away a bit so we don't get accused of causing trouble..."

At this point, Chiara's heart was filled with the desire to kill. Could her actions be considered helping the enemy? Well, judging from the results, the answer was definitely yes.

The more she thought about it, the angrier she became. She simply raised her camera and walked straight into Emden Hall.

"D*mn! Another foreigner is trying to cut in line."

"I heard from a friend that someone tried to cut in line with money yesterday. Is she planning to use seduction today?"

The doctors in this clinic were truly remarkable at attracting foreigners one after another."

Upon listening to their comments, Chiara stumbled and turned around to glare at the complaining patients before finally reaching Matthew's side.