

Chapter 2684 Busybody

Olivia stormed home and immediately began editing the recording, paying particular attention to Matthew's slightly dangerous language at the end, which she emphasized.

After making adjustments, she carefully edited and saved the recording, then uploaded it.

Her report from yesterday had already gained popularity, and with the assistance of the people she hired, the buzz instantly skyrocketed.

"Dr. Larson of Emden Hall Threatens Female Journalist at Star Newspaper!"

Uninformed followers quickly joined in denouncing Matthew.

"Is he even a real man?"

"He's threatening journalists. What a loser! We should investigate this!"

"Can someone like him become a doctor? Are the standards so low now?"

"Boycott Emden Hall. Boycott Emden Hall!"

As the controversy grew, patients who knew the truth or had personally experienced Matthew's exceptional medical skills gradually joined the team to defend his reputation.

"Do you guys even know anything? Just because you have a keyboard, you think you know the truth!"

"You're jumping to conclusions without knowing the facts. You're just blindly following."

She watched as the popularity of her news continued to rise and felt very pleased.

Keep arguing. The more you argue, the more traffic I get!

By degrading and smearing Matthew's skills, she could also generate traffic for herself. This move was a double-edged sword.

However, she was not satisfied with these actions alone. In order to undermine them completely and satisfy her anger, she decided to take a portable camera and a voice recorder and happily skipped to Lawson Street.

After surveying the surroundings, she noticed a middle-aged woman sunbathing at the entrance. Since pedestrians on the road hurriedly avoided her, the only target Olivia could approach was this middle-aged woman.

"Hello, ma'am!" Olivia deliberately raised her voice several tones higher, afraid that the other party wouldn't hear her words.

"What are you shouting about? I'm not deaf. And you look like a foreigner. How strange!" The middle-aged woman was displeased to be called "ma'am" by a foreign girl. A woman is forever young.

Olivia felt inexplicably disliked and had a puzzled expression on her face. "Ma'am, did I say something wrong?"

"No, you didn't say anything wrong. You're a pretty young lady, but unfortunately, your mouth gets in the way and blocks my sunlight."

Olivia felt speechless. Why do I feel like I'm being disliked? No, it must be that this woman has a bad temper.

After consoling herself, she gave up on trying to get closer and went straight to the point. "Ma'am, what are your thoughts on the discrimination against foreigners at Emden Hall?"

The older lady drooped her eyelids and let out a slow yawn. "What do I think? I simply observe."

"No, you misunderstood me. I mean, do you dislike doctors who are unethical and heartless like this?"

This time, the older lady didn't respond directly and simply clapped her hands absentmindedly. "Lucy, come here!"

As soon as she finished speaking, a Golden Retriever ran over with a wagging tail.

"Lucy, go catch me a rat." With the command, Lucy rushed out and returned within half a minute while wagging its tail.

When Olivia saw what the dog had in its mouth, she was startled and stepped back repeatedly. "Oh, a rat!"

"You hairy beast, you can guard the house, but you don't even bark when a stranger comes. Yet, you're quite good at catching rats." While scolding Lucy, the middle-aged woman's eyes intentionally or unintentionally glanced at Olivia.
