

Chapter 2711 Breaking News

Upon learning the identity of those individuals, the crown prince became thrilled and excited, thinking that capturing them would clear their name. However, Matthew quickly intervened and warned him about the potential danger.

"Forget it! Those people are far more dangerous than they appear. We should save our encounter for another time."

Matthew was uncertain who would gain the upper hand in a direct confrontation with those individuals, especially considering their ability to throw knives that were difficult to see. "Since they're after Solon, as long as we keep him safe with us, I'm sure we'll encounter them again."

Next time, I won't go so easy on you, fellas! Matthew thought to himself as he looked in the direction in which his enemies fled.

The next morning, the news spread rapidly across Seraphis.

'Over 2,000 bodies found on Victorious Cruise with no survivors at all!'

'Billionaire ranked in the world's top 500, Matt MacCall, died in the cruise massacre!'

'Massacre! Who would have thought that a pleasant cruise trip would turn into a nightmare?'

The massive massacre on the Victorious Cruise attracted attention not only in Seraphis but also globally. It captured the interest of people worldwide, not only because it involved an underground casino frequented by famous and wealthy tycoons, but also because of the shockingly high death toll. It quickly became one of the most shocking international news stories.

As the news continued to spread, another report caught the readers' attention. It was revealed that Matthew and his subordinates were the only survivors of the massacre. This made the incident even more mysterious and raised suspicions about Matthew, as he was the only unharmed survivor.

'We must avenge Mr. McCall by taking Matthew Larson's life.'

'The O'Connell Family will not rest until Matthew Larson is dead. His blood will be used to appease the deceased.'

'Could he be framed or something? Why would he even want to kill those people on the cruise? It's not like he had a grudge against them or anything...'

'Who are these guys? Matthew Larson and the crown prince? Anyway, they're psychopaths that disgust us.'

The comment section below the news article was filled with remarks representing different sentiments and attitudes. While some condemned and blamed Matthew, others took a more neutral and skeptical stance towards the incident. Regardless, Matthew became the center of attention for everyone who read the news worldwide.

Meanwhile, Matthew, the subject of discussion, was still sound asleep as he was busy removing the needles and toxins from his body. By the time he finished, it was already dawn, which explained his drowsiness. It wasn't until noon that he woke up to his ringtone. Irritated, he answered the call in frustration, only to hear the crown prince's agitated voice.

"Matthew! Matthew! We're famous! Everyone on this planet knows about us now! Haha! Get up. I'm coming to see you. What...?! You want me to leave? Fine then." After the call ended, the crown prince hurriedly made his way to Lawson Street.

On the other hand, Matthew, who was awakened by the call, no longer felt as sleepy as before. He got up and freshened up, only to find the crown prince's arrival. The crown prince slammed a stack of newspapers on the table.

"Matthew, we're making headlines! Even the news stories on the phone are all about us."

Matthew, still brushing his teeth, shook his head. "Alright, alright, I heard you. You seem happy, don't you?"

"Of course! I'm now a famous man known worldwide. Even my grandpa, Master Levi, couldn't achieve this."

"What a tough guy! But let me ask you something—are you not afraid of becoming a target for our enemies? Many of those who died on the cruise were once wealthy and powerful individuals."

The crown prince seemed unconcerned. "Why should I be afraid? I'll kill anyone who tries to mess with me. Besides, I can always seek refuge in the South if anything goes wrong. Haha!"

Upon hearing the crown prince's response, Matthew was initially impressed by his courage, until he heard the second half of his sentence. D*mn! I can't believe I fell for that. Haha! Matthew laughed at himself for foolishly thinking that the crown prince was truly brave enough to face their enemies.

Nevertheless, after considering the crown prince's words, Matthew quickly agreed. After all, the soldiers stationed on Cathay's borders were not easy opponents. Furthermore, even if their enemies managed to infiltrate Cathay, they would have to face Master Levi himself. With that in mind, Matthew was convinced by the crown prince and had nothing more to say.