

Chapter 2783 Gadel's Counsel

Despite Prince Gadel's reputation for excess and indulgence, Garrett saw him in a different light. Furthermore, with Princess Fiorenna's inability to conceive, the other royal brothers had become less vigilant towards Prince Gadel.

It wasn't until Prince Gadel actively sought a cure for his queen that everyone realized they had been deceived. However, by then, Prince Gadel had gained momentum, and it was too late to take action against him.

If Matthew could kill Prince Gadel directly this time, eliminating a strong contender for the throne, Garrett would be delighted with such a favorable outcome.

That was also why he was present here. Regardless of the outcome, he would be the winner.

As for Iris, seeing that Matthew couldn't be persuaded, she decided to wait. Next to her, Zedbar was filled with resentment. After touching the scar on his face, he approached Iris with a murderous look.

"Princess Iris, since we can't do anything to Matthew for now, why don't we capture his companion to prevent him from escaping?"

Upon hearing this, Iris' eyes lit up. "Yes, since this woman is Devil Doctor Matthew's companion, she must also be a demoness. Send someone to capture her and burn her alive to protect the people of my kingdom from her harm."

Since they were currently unable to take action against Matthew, they might as well vent their anger on his companion.

However, just as Zedbar turned around to capture the woman, Garrett interrupted, "Wait!"

Iris' face turned ugly as her younger brother repeatedly interfered.

"What's the matter? Are we not allowed to do anything? Am I, Princess Iris, not even allowed to lay a hand on a demoness?"

Garrett patiently explained, "Iris, let's not rush into action. Just think, what if Matthew actually cures Gadel? At that time, if he successfully heals Prince Gadel, and we capture his companion, how will the world perceive us?"

Both sides understood the implications at this point. If Iris went ahead with her plan, she would undoubtedly face criticism for being ungrateful and treacherous. Despite being a princess, she couldn't control public opinion.

"Alright, let's wait a little longer. If Matthew fails to cure Prince Gadel, you can't stop me anymore. Otherwise, I will turn against you."

"Of course."

While nodding repeatedly to please Iris, Garrett secretly broke out in a cold sweat. Even as her younger brother, he found Iris' intelligence impressive. If she could channel her seductive thoughts into building a team, her actions wouldn't be so impulsive.

Thinking of this, Iris' gaze unintentionally fell on the talkative Zedbar. However, after locking eyes with him and seeing the calm smile on his face, Iris suddenly felt a chill run down her spine.

For a moment, she had forgotten about the presence of Garrett, this smiling tiger, when he instigated Iris. Being targeted by this person usually didn't end well.

Realizing this, she couldn't help but silently regret her actions.

Inside the hot spring, Prince Gadel furrowed his brows upon hearing the commotion outside the door.

Since he only heard the shouts of his subordinates and not the sound of gunfire, it meant that the person outside was either not his royal brother or the still temperamental Iris. This thought angered him.

Was he really so easily dealt with?

However, just as Gadel was about to call for his servants, Matthew, who was administering the treatment behind him, suddenly spoke.

"Relax your nerves. Don't get distracted."

They were currently in a critical stage of the treatment, and if anything went wrong, all their previous efforts would be in vain.
