

Chapter 2787 Initial Thoughts On Dealing With The Kellers

Slasher, one of Prince Gadel's most trusted subordinates, was the head of the armed forces. However, Prince Gadel's direct order for Slasher's arrest indicated a loss of trust.

Upon receiving the Fire God Order from Prince Gadel, the secret guards swiftly departed without hesitation.

"Mr. Larson, I apologize for the negligence of my subordinate. I will personally apologize to you once I handle this matter," Prince Gadel said, suppressing his anger and forcing a smile towards Matthew.

"Your Highness, please attend to your matters first!"

After bidding farewell, Matthew left with the servants. He understood Gadel's current state of mind. No one could tolerate a traitor among their subordinates, especially a prince.

At the banquet, Tyga, following Prince Gadel's order, came up with a random excuse and personally apologized to each guest. He even prepared generous gifts for everyone.

Although many guests were unhappy about being inexplicably detained, they dared not speak up in the solemn atmosphere of Peterburg. They could only leave quickly with doubts in their hearts. Only a few representatives of the forces cooperating with the Keller Family remained for tea.

By the time Matthew had tended to his external injuries and cleaned his wounds, it was already around one o'clock in the morning. Sleep eluded him as his mind strategized on how to deal with the Keller Family.

After Prince Gadel experienced such an attack, there was no way he would allow the Keller Family to continue existing.

That night, gunshots reverberated throughout Peterburg.

The next morning, there was a knock on Matthew's door. It was none other than Tyga, Prince Gadel's trusted subordinate.

"Mr. Larson, His Highness invites you for a conversation." Tyga's face showed signs of fatigue. He had not slept all night either.

As Matthew stepped out of his room, he noticed that Peterburg had completely transformed. The once lively atmosphere had turned solemn and quiet, with a strong smell of blood in the air.

"Your Highness, Mr. Matthew Larson has arrived." Tyga, leading the way, gently knocked on Gadel's royal chamber door. Soon after, a muffled sound came from inside the room.

"Come in!"

Upon hearing the response, Tyga turned to Matthew and said, "Mr. Matthew Larson, His Highness is inside. I have urgent matters to attend to, so I won't accompany you."

After bidding farewell, Tyga quickly left.

Matthew entered the room and saw Gadel with a gloomy face. His Highness' once friendly smile had completely vanished.

"Mr. Larson, please have a seat. I apologize for the spectacle. I never expected to find a mole among my most trusted subordinates."

Although Gadel's armed forces had not yet been fully investigated, he had already uncovered several individuals with ulterior motives.

Matthew remained silent and calmly waited for the continuation. Gadel's restrained anger after such a significant incident was commendable. After venting his frustrations for a while, Gadel finally turned to the main topic.

"Mr. Larson, I called you here to discuss how we should deal with the Keller Family." As Gadel mentioned the Keller Family, a hint of murderous intent flashed in his tone. The teacup he held deformed slightly due to excessive force.

Matthew raised an eyebrow. "Isn't it easy for Your Highness to annihilate the Keller Family?"

Although the Keller Family had some reputation in Seraphis, they were insignificant in the presence of Prince Gadel. With a single command, Prince Gadel could wipe out the entire Keller Family within a day.

However, Gadel sighed. "Mr. Larson, you may not be aware of this. Despite the chaos in Seraphis, the people there are fiercely xenophobic. If I were to simply dispatch troops to attack the Keller Family, there would be significant resistance from within Seraphis."