

Chapter 2793 Invitation From Matthew

Upon discovering that Prince Gadel had prohibited the maritime forces of the Keller Family, Worman realized that his assassination attempt had failed, but he was unaware that he had been exposed. He believed that all of this was a collaboration between Matthew and Prince Gadel, with the intention of dealing with the Keller Family.

"The black-robed man was right. Prince Gadel had planned to take action against our Keller Family long ago."

What he didn't know was that, without the attack, Gadel only intended to suppress the Keller Family. The current situation had indeed escalated to a point of no return.

"Father, what should we do?" Louis was frightened upon hearing that Prince Gadel wanted to deal with their family.

The Keller Family was notorious at most in Seraphis, and even in Skargness, they only had a modest reputation. Going up against someone like Prince Gadel was like hitting a rock with an egg.

Seeing Louis' submissive appearance, Worman couldn't help but sigh. Thinking of his sons who had tragically died, he couldn't help but feel sorrow, and his eyes gradually turned red.

"A group of youngsters who haven't grown up yet dare to mess with my Keller Family. What a joke. Louis, you go down first. I will handle everything. Seraphis is nominally under Cathay's control, so Prince Gadel's forces dare not openly enter Seraphis. They can dream of wiping out my Keller Family."

Upon hearing his father's grandiose self-consolation, Louis felt some relief. However, what he didn't know was that Worman himself was also uncertain. Although Prince Gadel couldn't march into Seraphis, with his support, dealing with Matthew would become even more difficult. After all, Matthew himself had the backing of the Zedler Family.

After Louis left, Worman directly contacted the Whitford Family and informed them of the situation. If Matthew dared to set foot in Anivara, he would be annihilated with thunderous force.

While the Keller Family was mobilizing its forces, rumors began to spread outside.

The previous groundwork in public opinion was quite effective. After days of fermentation, more and more unfavorable news about the Keller Family started to circulate. People, in panic, began to withdraw investments or suspend cooperation with the Keller Family.

Under such circumstances, Matthew made a significant move. He spread a notice throughout Seraphis, inviting potential partners to discuss a maritime cooperation project. However, everyone knew that maritime cooperation was just a facade, and the real purpose was to suppress the Keller Family.

Initially, most people were merely observing, but when Matthew offered an enticing condition—anyone joining the maritime cooperation project would receive free medical treatment from Matthew and a free 'Longevity Pill,' endorsed by Prince Gadel—many were swayed. Especially those who harbored grudges against the Keller Family. They set off overnight and rushed to Concordia.

After securing dozens of transport ships from the Keller Family, the crown prince hurried back to Concordia to prepare for the reception.

According to Matthew, the collaborators against the Keller Family numbered in the hundreds or even thousands. Some were drawn by Matthew's medical skills, some by the "Longevity Pill," and others simply wanted a share of the pie after the Keller Family's downfall.

The crown prince wasted no time and directly approached the Stubber Family, intending to use them as the reception venue for this plan.

Facing the ancestral figure, Mr. Stubber naturally dared not refuse. Moreover, this matter would greatly benefit their family's reputation. As a result, the entire Stubber Family began busy and bustling reception preparations.
