

Chapter 2804 Three-way Struggle, Hidden Motives

Confronted with Druira's watchful gaze, these princes were well aware that despite their understanding of the situation, they were powerless. Their elderly father's refusal to yield left them with no choice but to watch helplessly.

The throne became an irresistible temptation. Although they were aware of the potential dangers, not seizing it would lead to their demise. The princes were willing to fight each other, even risking their lives, in order to gain a glimmer of hope for obtaining the throne.

Rocco understood this well, but he could only observe the royal struggle without passing any judgment.

"On Druira's side, they have received a distress signal from the Keller Family. They have already stationed troops at the Seraphis and Druira border, stockpiling biscuits."

"As for Seraphis, prominent forces like the Durham Family and Zedler Family have also begun mobilizing their troops to the border, aiming to prevent Druira from invading Seraphis."

In this way, the forces of Seraphis, Druira, and Montiria were mutually restraining each other. Although Seraphis was the weakest, they had Cathay as their support. Unless a perfect opportunity presented itself, the two critical countries would not dare to attack Seraphis. The current military movements were merely a display of strength.

However, despite this knowledge, it was still necessary for the powerful forces of Seraphis to remain vigilant.

Upon hearing this, the eldest prince's expression turned cold. "The more chaotic the situation becomes, the better chance we have to establish control over Seraphis."

The aging king of Montiria had become a ticking time bomb. If Toby, as the eldest prince, could secure Seraphis before the king's sudden demise, he would have a strong chance of becoming the next king. Not only that, but he could also integrate the forces of Seraphis with Montiria and potentially conquer Druira in the future.

Of course, the other princes had also considered this two-pronged plan. Even Druira had the same intention. Although they couldn't invade Seraphis directly, they could secretly manipulate and control Seraphis from behind the scenes.

However, Seraphis appeared to be caught between the two sides, but they had their own plans. By seeking refuge under Cathay's name, they could instigate conflicts between Montiria and Druira. When two tigers fight, one will be defeated. At that point, Seraphis could seize the opportunity and expand its territory. With careful management, it might even be possible to conquer both countries.

Then, they would be able to completely break away from Cathay and develop into a formidable alliance nation.

The three parties had different thoughts and calculations as they made their moves against the Keller Family. The three forces were currently deterring each other, but it was only a display of strength. If given the opportunity, the flames of war would ignite.

The pawns were prepared, and now it was a matter of how they would maneuver against each other.

"What about the Keller Family? How are things progressing on their end?" Toby inquired, and Mr. Rocco smirked.

"Druira is putting on a show of power. Worman is so thrilled that he believes Druira is actually assisting him."

"Hmph, let that foolish imbecile self-destruct. He is no longer of any use to us. And keep a close eye on that Matthew Larson, too. He is the only wildcard in this game."

Rocco was about to agree when he added, "By the way, I just received news that Dustin Harrowsen gave Matthew Larson the top VIP card of the Harrowsen International Group and promised to make an exception to assist him."

"Heh, even a shipbuilder dares to meddle in local power struggles. Let Zedran come to me!"

With a command from the prince, Zedran promptly arrived.