

Chapter 2921 The Current Situation of the Durham Family

At the Durham Family Clan.

Ever since Solon returned from Concordia, all eyes in the family have been on him.

The reason was simple. Solon had previously made significant contributions to the family by exposing the rebellion of the Durham Family branch in Skargness. Following the Keller Family's extermination, he had now consolidated billions of assets for the main family.

Many people had become envious. An illegitimate child from a small family actually possessed such abilities. This had made many people in the main family unhappy.

Most importantly, not long ago, the major managers of the Skargness branch were removed for colluding with outsiders and embezzling the family's wealth. The new appointees had not been finalized yet, so many people in the family had set their sights on this coveted position. Solon had become a competitor in the eyes of many.

Under various pretexts, many people had started to stir up trouble. Rumors gradually surfaced that Matthew bombed the Durham Family's dock, kidnapped Solon, and took away many jewels from the Durham Family's maritime territory. Solon hadn't even reclaimed his honor, yet he still cooperated with Matthew. Wasn't he just humiliating himself?

If everyone followed suit, would the Durham Family Clan's still be reputable? Who would still respect the Durham Family in the future?

Some even went to the Durham Family's board of seniors to lodge complaints about this matter and demanded punishment for Solon to serve as a warning to other family members.

However, the only reply they received was—Pending!

Solon naturally knew about these vexing matters. Although they didn't have much impact on him, it would bother anyone as they were like a group of flies buzzing around one's ear.

"Damn it! What a bunch of trash. How dare they blame the women for not being perfect when they were useless themselves? All they know is playing these disgusting tricks all day." Solon complained as he walked out of the board of seniors. A few elders had called him in for questioning and wanted to probe into his relationship with Matthew.

His answer was simple—there were no permanent enemies, only permanent interests. Although he had some unpleasant experiences with Matthew before. As long as Matthew could bring benefits to the Durham Family, the past could be set aside.

This answer naturally satisfied those old stubborn ones, and after a heartfelt discussion about loyalty to the family and prioritizing family interests, they let him go.

Solon was also troubled by the current situation. The Durham Family was too vast. It was so vast that there were some things that even the board of seniors couldn't control.

Some branches advocated for alliances with external forces to unify Seraphis.

Some believed that the Durham Family's power was extraordinary and could rely solely on their own strength to unify the Seraphis Province.

Of course, some believed that since they had pledged allegiance, they should do so honestly and not cause any trouble.

In short, the family had different factions and even the board of seniors had differing opinions.

As Solon analyzed the chaotic situation within the family, he walked back to his room.

After lying down on the bed, he couldn't help but sigh.

"Ugh... It's so annoying. If I were the head of the Durham Family, I would first remove the board of seniors and just kick them out."

Of course, this was just his frustration speaking. He knew very well that it was just a pipe dream for him to become the head of the family with his abilities.

Most importantly, although he had secretly developed a lot of manpower, they were all a bunch of rough men. They were good at fighting, but none of them had any talent in strategy.

Upon thinking of this, Solon couldn't help but start to miss Rocco and Matthew. With their intelligent minds, they could definitely help him see the situation clearly.

But ever since they parted ways last time, he couldn't contact Rocco anymore.

The same went for Matthew. Solon called once and the crown prince answered, scaring him so much that he quickly hung up. Later on, he heard that Matthew was invited to the Basha's Sacred Mount.