

Chapter 14: Sophia's Return

However, she didn't forget her responsibilities. After some thought, she said, "I'll make breakfast tomorrow."

After all, there was no reason for a benefactor to serve her, right?

Liam chuckled lightly, dressed in a dark loungewear, exuding a hint of laziness. He walked over, pulled out a chair at the dining table, and sat down. "You don't need to be so formal. After today's registration, you are legally my wife."

Seeing him being so forthright, Suzy decided not to beat around the bush and asked directly, "Mr. Park, how long is the duration of our marriage contract? Should we consider signing an agreement?"

After all, this was a business transaction, and she needed to set a timeframe for herself. In case Liam mentioned a duration that was too long, she needed to think about it carefully. It was to everyone's knowledge that men possessed a substantial amount of time during which they could be considered eligible.

When Liam got his divorce certificate, he would still be a highly sought-after eligible bachelor, but she would be in a difficult situation as an older woman with this unflattering history. Therefore, there wouldn't be many who would want her.

Liam, holding his fork and knife, paused for a moment, seemingly contemplating the question. After a while, he nodded, "Yes, I'll have my secretary draft a contract. Let's start with one year."

"Alright."

Suzy finally let go of her worries and tasted Liam's porridge. Indeed, it was exceptionally tasty.

.....

After breakfast, she took her ID card and went to the marriage license bureau with Liam to register their marriage.

In less than thirty minutes they finished all the steps of the marriage registration, including taking an official photo together, and she was now legally recognized as Mrs. Park.

"I'll have my assistant take you to the hospital to see your mother. You can come to my place after work." Liam, who was already dressed in a suit, reverted to his cold and authoritative CEO demeanor, his tone brooking no dissent.

Suzy nodded in agreement and left with John.

Not long after they left, another black Maybach slowly pulled up next to Liam.

The rear window rolled down, revealing Clive's mischievous and worldly handsome face. "

Sometimes, I really don't understand you. You took such a big risk to register for marriage with her, but you haven't confessed your feelings. What's the plan?"

Liam gave him a cold glance, opened the car door, and got in, his tone icy.

"She has no feelings for me now."

"So?" Clive widened his eyes. "You should be aware of the consequences if your parents find out about this unauthorized marriage! Is it worth it for her?"

In Clive's eyes, if a woman didn't catch his fancy, he'd spend a night and bid farewell. If she did pique his interest, he might see her a few more times. He really couldn't understand why Liam would go to such lengths for a mere employee like her.

"They won't know if you keep quiet about this."

"You're just burying your head in the sand!" Clive rolled his eyes in exasperation.

"Honestly, I'm quite curious to see how this story unfolds. If she really has no feelings for you, what will you do?"

Liam ignored him, focusing on his computer to handle work.

These matters couldn't be postponed until the evening. Today was their legitimate wedding night, and he had no intention of playing the waiting game indefinitely.

As the car started, Clive suddenly remembered something and patted Liam's shoulder.

"By the way, next week, Sophia is returning to the country. We should all get together. Have you seen her posts on social media? She's absolutely stunning now!"

He was enthusiastic about it, but Liam didn't even lift his head. "We'll discuss it next week."

"Hey! She came back specifically to help you, and you're being so ungrateful?"
