

Chapter 168: You Don't Want to Divorce Anymore

The air seemed to freeze in an instant.

After waiting several seconds without hearing his voice, Suzy tentatively spoke, "Liam?"

"I'll come pick you up now."

"Okay."

After hanging up the phone, Suzy felt as if a huge weight had been lifted off her shoulders! It was as if suddenly, no obstacle in her path could make her fear or worry.

She felt a sudden sense of determination. As long as Liam didn't back down, neither would she.

With this decision made, she felt much lighter!

Suzy had spent the entire night without sleeping, yet she felt surprisingly energetic. She got up, changed her clothes, and freshened up before applying a bit of makeup.

As she stepped out of her bedroom, Wendy was still yawning and stretching, looking disheveled.

She stared at Suzy in surprise.

"Where are you going?"

"Liam is coming to pick me up."

Wendy stood there, stunned for almost a minute. "So? Have you come to your senses?"

Suzy nodded. "Yes, you're right. It's time for me to live for myself. He has given up so much and still chooses me. If I were to keep hesitating, I'd be letting him down."

"Yes, exactly!" Wendy was so excited she could have burst into tears right there.

"Suzy, please remember you deserve a great man! You deserve to be cherished! Mr. Park has truly seen your worth, hasn't he?"

She walked over briskly and hugged Suzy tightly.

"Suzy, you deserve to be happy!"

"Yeah," Suzy sighed with relief. "I will be."

She knew that if she missed this opportunity with Liam, there would never be another man who would treat her like how he did.

She really wanted to cherish this feeling of being held in someone's hands so dearly forever.

When Liam arrived, Suzy was still in the middle of her embrace with Wendy! It wasn't until his call came through that they reluctantly parted ways.

She walked out with her bag, feeling light and joyful with every step.

Seeing Liam, she felt a strange shyness...

Even though they had already done everything together.

Liam naturally strode over and took her bag from her hands.

"Um, are you not going back to the office today?" Suzy cleared her throat.

"Alec will handle things over there. I haven't slept all night and I want to go back and rest," Liam replied, his voice hoarse and fatigue evident on his handsome face.

However, if Suzy asked, he would definitely make time for her without hesitation.

"Oh." She lowered her head and followed behind him, but Liam suddenly stopped, causing her to bump into his back!

"Are you trying to get me to clear my schedule to go file a divorce?"

"No, no, I was just asking!"

Liam raised an eyebrow upon realizing her intention. "You don't want a divorce anymore?"

"Yeah." Suzy nodded with a shy smile, feeling a bit awkward.

"Mr. Park, you've been incredibly kind to me, looking after me and placing your trust in me. If I were to insist on getting a divorce, wouldn't that be ungrateful of me?"

Finally, a hint of a smile appeared on Liam's handsome face.

This was probably the only time he had genuinely felt happy recently.

He raised his large hand and gently tapped her forehead. "So, you finally realize how ungrateful you have been."

"It's your fault for not letting me know about what you've been doing."

Suzy looked at him. "You should have informed me about the Far East project."

Liam paused. "How did you find out?"

"Mr. Gray came to see me. He told me everything you've been up to."
