

Chapter 169: You Still Have the Energy to Do That

"What did he say?"

"He told me everything he knew, but he made it clear that he wasn't advising me to be with you."

Suzy knew that as a good friend of Liam's, Clive was probably looking out for Liam's best interests.

She had been neglecting Liam's efforts, showing no response or enthusiasm. In Clive's eyes, she was probably not worthy of Liam. He probably thought it was too painful for Liam to be torn between her and his mother.

"Don't listen to him."

"I won't, but you should be grateful to him. Otherwise, I might still choose to avoid the problem and use divorce to solve our current troubles."

She pursed her lips. "Now you can tell me, why did you choose not to tell me and do things silently on your own?"

Liam's gaze darkened, and his lips parted slightly.

"If you had known earlier, you would have definitely kept your distance from me."

Suzy froze abruptly.

This was something she hadn't expected.

Liam actually understood her so well!

Yes, as soon as she sensed that a man had feelings for her, she would instinctively avoid him.

"So, I can't tell you, and besides, what's the point of mentioning such trivial matters?"

Liam hadn't mentioned anything since junior high, so why would he start now that they were grown up?

Suzy just looked at him quietly for a long time.

"Liking me must be exhausting," she commented, knowing it well herself.

Perhaps because of her mother, she was very averse to the opposite sex!

She even felt like she would never date or marry in her life because no man could tolerate her, or her upbringing.

"It isn't exhausting."

"You're lying."

"I'm really not tired."

"Well, I am. Let's go home."

Liam smiled. "Okay."

Back at Easter Bay, Suzy hadn't expected that despite Liam's fatigue, he still could spend the whole night having sex with her.

Not just once, but he repeatedly had sex with her many times, leading Suzy to believe he was trying to make up for the lack of intimacy over the past few days!

Finally, she was too exhausted to even lift her hands, and with a low grunt, he finally let her rest.

Liam carried her to the bathroom to clean up, and when he came out after his shower, Suzy had already fallen asleep.

Gently kissing her cheek, he tucked her in and then checked his phone.

There were several missed calls from William and Alec.

Without a doubt, William had bypassed him to pressure Alec to fire Suzy.

He reached into his suit jacket and retrieved the remaining half box of cigarettes, walking out onto the balcony, lighting one, and returning the call.

"I thought you weren't going to acknowledge me as your father anymore!"

"Is there something you need?"

"We have to fire this Suzy Chase. If she feels wronged, I can give her some money so she won't have to worry about her livelihood for the rest of her life! But considering the current situation, you can see that your mother simply can't accept her."

Liam took a drag of his cigarette, then suddenly remembered he needed to go back and rest with Suzy. He hurriedly extinguished it and picked up the damp tissue from the table, repeatedly wiping his slender fingers.

"She doesn't need money."

"So, in the end, you're still choosing to abandon your mother?! Liam, are you trying to make me beg you?"
