

Chapter 183: Eventually Have A Lady of the House

Fortunately, Alec had always treated Suzy well; he hadn't offended this CEO's favorite person.

He headed to the legal department to deliver Liam's message, and the shock on everyone's faces was no less than Alec's initial reaction.

"Mr. Park is considering disbanding the entire legal department of Park Group?! Mr. Lincoln, are you sure you heard that right?"

This decision was crucial!

Every subsidiary of Park Group had its own legal department, and there had never been a precedent for hiring external law firms. Was he really about to break this rule just for Suzy?

Alec cleared his throat and replied sternly, "Now you should understand Mr. Park's intentions. When you work at Park Group, just focus on your job at hand and do it well."

"We understand! We'll make sure not to disappoint Mr. Park."

"Good."

After delivering the message, Alec turned to leave the legal department, only to find Sophia standing there! Unsure of how long she had been there or if she had overheard their conversation, Alec felt a wave of awkwardness and managed a stiff smile.

"Miss Burns."

Top of Form

"I came back to pick up some things I left behind when I resigned," Sophia said, nodding slightly, not making things difficult for Alec.

"Oh, then I'll get back to my tasks."

As Alec stepped to walk past Sophia, she suddenly moved to block his way.

Alec was taken aback. "Is there something you need, Miss Burns?"

"Did he really say he would disband Park Group's legal department?"

"...I wouldn't dare to misquote Mr. Park."

Sophia's face, which had been feigning calm, finally cracked upon hearing the confirmation!

She couldn't believe that Liam would prioritize Suzy over the entire company's interests! That was the entire Park Group at stake, where every decision could impact the future trajectory of its development!

What was Suzy's worth compared to these?

She was just an employee, at best valued for her beauty. Sophia truly did not understand what was so special about Suzy!

"Does he realize the implications of disbanding the legal department?" Sophia's eyes fixed on Alec. "As his personal secretary, it's your duty to remind him of the impact this could have on the company!"

Alec tugged at his lips, returning to his usual reserved demeanor.

"Miss Burns, Mr. Park has a deeper understanding of the company than I do, and he must have valid reasons for his decisions! He carefully considers changes like this!"

"Furthermore, Mr. Park didn't mention anything about immediately disbanding the legal department. The issue is mainly about certain individuals in the department who hold positions but aren't contributing. Mr. Park can't allow them to hinder progress, can he?"

His words, in fact, were a direct hint at Sophia.

Everyone knew that the employees in the legal department were hesitant to act and afraid to function normally because they feared repercussions if Sophia returned!

All of her subordinates believed that due to Sophia's connection with the Park family, her resignation was just a joke, so who would dare to truly replace her as General Counsel?

Sophia had anticipated this situation, which was why she purposely submitted her resignation and shared it online. In doing so, she subtly praised Suzy while also indirectly criticizing her, portraying herself as a victim.

Her goal was to leverage public opinion and the company's influence to put pressure on Liam.

Even Alec could see through such tactics, and Liam certainly wasn't blind to them.

"Mr. Lincoln, even if you have been by Liam's side for many years, don't forget that you are just a secretary," Sophia said coldly. "Keep in mind, the Park family will eventually have a lady of the house. Understand?"

Of course, he understood. How could he not?

Alec smiled politely, with a standard expression. "Indeed, Mr. Park has even specifically instructed me to take good care of Miss Chase."