

Chapter 30: Immediate Disbandment

Suzy sat up, her expression filled with doubt. "I'm moving in here?"

"Any issues?"

Of course, there were issues! If she moved in, wouldn't it be like cohabitating? They would see each other all the time after work! Dealing with his unpredictable temper day in and day out, she'd age ten years at least.

Moreover, wouldn't his former love interest eventually find out about this?

If they reconciled after she moved out of her rented place, would she be stuck here witnessing their affectionate displays?

"Mr. Park, I think it might not be convenient for me to live here. Rest assured, during the contract period, if you call me over, I'll come immediately."

"Suzy, do you really think of yourself as a commodity for sale?" Liam furrowed his thick brows, his tone not open to refusal, and his manner commanding. "I said, move in."

"Alright, Mr. Park."

After breakfast, Liam left the house.

Suzy had no choice but to comply, returning to her rented place to pack her things. At around noon, Wendy gave her a call.

"Why aren't you at work today? Mr. Shaw said the headquarters approved your leave! Impressive, Suzy, it looks like you're on the fast track, directly transferred to the Park Group's main office!"

"Well, it's for further training, so I need to prepare in advance."

"Why do you sound so weak? You sound like you've been hoarse from spending the night with a man!" Wendy's words were rather explicit.

Suzy's heart raced, and she quickly cleared her throat. "Stop teasing me!"

Wendy on the other end laughed lightly and didn't suspect anything. "By the way, do you remember that person I told you about before, Mr. Park's love interest? The chief lawyer named Sophia Burns!"

"Yes..."

"She's back in the country! Someone saw her entering the company with Mr. Park, and they appeared to be getting along well. Everyone in our company is buzzing about it!" Wendy's tone made Suzy feel like she could almost picture the scene. "And here's the interesting part: I examined Sophia's photo closely, and guess what? You bear a resemblance to her!"

Suzy really didn't want to hear that.

She couldn't quite put her finger on why, but she just didn't want to hear it.

"Don't flatter me; she's a rich young lady."

"But you're pretty too! As soon as the Market Department's Director, Mr. Watson saw you, his eyes practically pop out. If you were to show interest, you could easily have Mr. Shaw wrapped around your finger in no time!"

"Alright, Wendy, I've got something going on here. I'll talk to you later."

Suzy quickly hung up the phone, sat on the sofa, and inexplicably opened the Park Group's employee chat group.

After Wendy had added her to the group, it was the first time she had looked at its contents.

Soon enough, photos of Liam and Sophia entering the company together appeared on the screen.

Liam still maintained his cold and serious demeanor, but beside him, Sophia wore a charming smile. She was tilting her head, saying something to him, and her eyes were filled with undeniable admiration.

The group chat had become lively, with comments praising how well-matched and perfect they looked together.

As Suzy continued to watch, she suddenly cleared the entire chat interface.

Before she could even put her phone down, a notification sound chimed, indicating an unread message.

"Add me back on WhatsApp."

It was from Liam.

She hesitated for a moment, copied the number, and was about to add him back on WhatsApp when she realized he had already sent a friend request.

At the same time, this account also posted a message in the Park Group's employee chat.

"Who's the group admin? Disband this group immediately!"

There was no doubt that Liam was the one who posted this message, as every word in his message was purposeful and concise.

Chapter 31: Mr. Park Must Have Gotten Married

Suzy noticed that Liam was likely aware of the ongoing rumors.

After accepting the friend request, Suzy saw that Liam's WhatsApp chat window kept showing that he was typing...

It seemed like he wanted to say something to her.

But after waiting for a while, no message came through, and then before long, it switched back to showing him typing.

Suzy wanted to ask what he was hesitating about, but even though she typed out a question mark, she ultimately chose to act as if she hadn't seen it.

In this rented room, she didn't have many belongings. Besides some personal clothing, there were only books related to the financial industry. After packing everything, she called the landlord to discuss the refund of the remaining rent.

After long and tiring discussions, the landlord finally agreed to give her a refund of two hundred dollars but insisted that she had to leave the room that day.

She had no other option; she was the one who violated the contract!

After dragging two large suitcases into the taxi, Suzy finally had a moment to check her phone.

Liam texted, "I'll be home by 6 PM."

Suzy really felt a bit overwhelmed that Liam was coming back today.

Upon arriving at Easter Bay, Suzy didn't dare to touch Liam's things. She just placed her suitcases in an inconspicuous corner. After everything was settled, she took her laptop to the dining table to work.

Right after accessing FortuneWave Holdings' internal server, Suzy received a screenshot from Wendy.

Wendy texted, "I can guarantee that our Mr. Park must have gotten married!"

When Suzy saw the words "Mr. Park must have gotten married," she was startled, thinking Wendy knew something!

But upon opening the picture, she realized it was a screenshot from Sophia's social media, which read —

"Both Liam and I value our private lives, so we hope everyone stops taking unauthorized photos. If I were to have a wedding, wouldn't I inform everyone?"

At the end, there was a smiling emoji.

The message was subtly crafted.

It neither confirmed their relationship nor denied the authenticity of today's rumors.

After being embellished by Wendy, the gossip queen, it almost seemed like Sophia and Liam had secretly registered their marriage but hadn't held a ceremony.

However, the irony was that Suzy and Liam hadn't gotten divorced yet.

Wendy texted, "Why did you read and not reply? Do you think Mr. Park will be happy enough to raise our pay because of his marriage?"

Suzy thought for a moment and was about to type a response when the male protagonist of the rumor returned!

She looked up at the entrance, unsure of what to say to the "newly announced" groom.

She couldn't exactly go straight to the person involved to ask for gossip. 1

"Have you eaten?" Liam, taking off his suit jacket and holding a briefcase, walked over to her.

Suzy shook her head. "No, but I'm not hungry. Mr. Park, do you have anything you'd like to eat? I can cook for you."

While her cooking abilities didn't reach the level of a five-star hotel, she had learned a thing or two from years of working different jobs.

At this crucial moment, she had to showcase her abilities to Liam. She didn't want him to think she was only there to sleep with him. She should find other ways to earn some points for herself.

Clearly surprised by her response, Liam hesitated for a moment before nodding. "Sure."

"How about grilled steak and some pork ribs?" Suzy quickly shut down her computer and got up, heading to the kitchen's fridge to check for ingredients.

"We're out of spare ribs; please wait a moment. I'll go buy some."

Suzy was about to leave in a hurry when Liam grabbed her wrist.

She was taken aback by his action.

"I'll go get changed. Let's go together."
