

Chapter 53: Mr. Park and Miss Burns

The next morning, when Suzy woke up, Liam had already left.

On the table in the living room of the suite, there was breakfast he had arranged to be delivered in advance, and next to it was a note he had personally written.

“I have a charity event today, and I won't contact you until it's over. – Liam”

Just as she suspected! Liam had come to West City for other matters.

After getting ready and having breakfast, Suzy met up with Alec.

Since she had already done a thorough investigation of George's background the previous day, today they only had to focus on understanding how SNS operated as a company.

Despite the fact that their manager had sent all the reports overnight, for the sake of caution, they decided to conduct an on-site investigation.

By the end of the busy day, Suzy's admiration for Liam had risen to another level!

The reason Liam emphasized to Frank that she was the person in charge of this project was evident.

Today, upon her arrival at SNS, everyone, from top management to the entry-level staff, treated her with great caution, carefully considering their responses down to the smallest details.

This made Alec's investigation into the actual situation much easier! After all, very few people were focused on him.

In the evening, Suzy and Alec found a local restaurant. As soon as they sat down, Suzy started reviewing the investigation materials.

Alec chuckled and said, "I just met you today, and you're already avoiding my gaze! I guess it's because you're afraid I'd get upset."

"This project involves quite a large investment and is one of Park Group's core projects. Mr. Lincoln, you've put a lot of effort into preparing for it, and then I come in and take all the credit. If I were in your shoes, I would be unhappy too."

"That's because you've just entered the workforce."

Alec appeared nonchalant. "Mr. Park knows very well regarding who did what and how much they did, or else he wouldn't have built Park Group into such a success!

"Although you're the one with the title on this project, in reality, there won't be a penny of difference in the compensation that should be allocated to me.

"This approach also serves to divert the other company's attention, improve the accuracy of our investigation, and reduce investment risks. Why would I be upset?"

Hearing this analysis, Suzy couldn't help but feel that her experience in the investment banking industry was still relatively shallow, and she was just a newcomer.

"Of course, it also depends on Mr. Park's willingness to support you," Alec added suddenly.

"Having such a major project on your resume is equivalent to jumping straight to the level of an investment banking director! When you decide to leave Park Group for another company in the future, they will be competing to have you."

"I won't leave Park Group."

"That's given! I've been with Mr. Park for so long, and I've never seen him care for anyone like this," Alec said, raising an eyebrow.

"Except for Miss Burns, you're the only one!"

Suzy kept quiet on his remarks.

And once again, Sophia came into the picture.

"But you two are different. Miss Burns has made significant contributions to Park Group and deserves Mr. Park's attention."

Suzy took a few bites of her meal and then casually asked, "Did you ever hear that Mr. Park and Miss Burns appear to have known each other since they were kids?"

"They indeed knew each other for a long time, but I don't know the details."

"Oh, I see."

"By the way, you had a good relationship with Mr. Park before, right? When you previously came to visit him in Newton City, he had just finished a meeting and was resting for a short while. He heard your voice and let you in."

During that time, Liam wouldn't see anyone else.

Suddenly, reminded of the past, Suzy felt a bit embarrassed. "Um... we were not only classmates but also desk mates."

"Ah! I remember now! During that business trip, you stayed in room 1501, right?"

Chapter 54: You Only Brought One Box

Suzy did not reply to his question.

"It's no wonder when I saw the name Suzy Chase, it seemed so familiar."

Suzy knew that she shouldn't allow this topic to be discussed further. Delving deeper would reveal the absurdity of that night's events!

She didn't want anyone to know about her agreement with Liam. It was best if everyone believed that Liam was only being kind to her because of their school friendship.

"Hey, Mr. Lincoln, please take a look at this trademark patent document..."

The Park Group was always committed to its charitable initiatives.

For every batch of financially disadvantaged students they sponsored, Liam personally reviewed the lists, verified the actual situations, and discreetly sent people to investigate whether there were even needier students who hadn't been selected.

If they came across cases where both parents were seriously ill, Liam would pay extra attention, making sure that students didn't have to sacrifice their education for their livelihoods.

It had been a tiring day for him.

As soon as he got in the car back to the city center, Liam called Suzy.

"Hello? Mr. Park."

Liam knew that Alec was with her.

"I need to see the summary of the due diligence you conducted today. Send it to me by tonight."

"Of course."

After ending the call, Liam massaged his temples, and soon after, Clive called him.

"You threw all the company matters and ran to West City! How's it going? Did that girl cry her heart out when she found out what you did for her?"

"She won't know."

Including the shop at the school gate, the reason he didn't follow was that he was afraid the shop owners would recognize him as the "young man" who gave them money.

In reality, there were times when Liam found himself feeling somewhat absurd. Wasn't he even more cautious than Suzy, despite her careful nature?

"Our Mr. Park is truly great! When do you plan to come back? I'm almost done with my work here. Let's have a good meal with Sophia. We won't go home until we're drunk!"

"I'll eat with you, but I won't be drinking."

"Haha! It won't be like the other time when you got yourself drunk!"

Liam suddenly curled his lips. "I've never been drunk."

The car arrived at the hotel, and Liam, wearing a windbreaker, returned to his suite. He looked around and realized he was alone.

He understood that Suzy had arranged this to keep Alec from discovering anything. That was why, before the business trip, she had made sure to reserve separate rooms for them.

At this moment, Suzy should be in her room.

Liam grabbed his phone and sent a text message. Before long, he heard a discreet knocking on the door.

He opened the door and glanced at the documents in her hand. "You really brought the summary."

"I was afraid that Alec might come looking for you."

Liam tugged at his thin lips, then slowly unbuttoned his shirt, revealing his well-built physique.

Unexpectedly, as he began to undress, Suzy was taken aback. Her cheeks flushed with embarrassment, and she quickly turned away. "Uh, um... Are you planning to take a shower?"

Seeing her conflicted and shy expression, Liam chuckled softly, then bent down to retrieve a set of fresh pajamas from his luggage.

His long fingers searched inside for a moment, and he said, "You only brought one box?"

"What?"

"This," he replied, walking to the bedside table and shaking the now-empty little box of condoms.

"Oh, right..."

"Did we run out of supply at home?"

Suzy nervously shook her head. "No, I thought you might be tired from the business trip."

Who would have thought that he would use up all five condoms in one night?

Liam crossed his arms and looked at her. "So, what should we do now?"
