

Chapter 1114

Henry ended the call with Silas.

Silas's words brought Henry a huge amount of information.

It might be the thing with the evil energy that triggered Henry. But did that mean that Henry was scared of that thing?

Silas warned Henry never to go anywhere near the palace, and Henry kept it in mind. He completely trusted Silas.

When Henry finally calmed himself down, it was already seven o'clock in the morning.

The first ray of sunshine brightened the sky in the east. Citizens got up and prepared to go to work after just getting back to bed a couple of hours ago.

Henry got back home and washed up. Just as he was about to walk into the bedroom, Sylvia walked out and signaled him to keep quiet.

"Henry, Milan stayed with me last night. She just fell asleep. Don't wake her up."

Sylvia stuck out her tongue at Henry.

Sylvia's lovable expression cheered Henry up from his earlier perturbation.

"She has trouble falling asleep?"

"She was scared."

Sylvia handed Henry a glass of water.

Henry thought it made sense and took the water from Sylvia.

"Henry, you went out all night. Is there trouble?"

Sylvia was worried. She knew Henry's status and what Henry had to deal with.

Henry smiled. He caressed Sylvia's hair and said, "Love, don't you know how powerful your husband is? Everything is fine. You can go back to bed. We still need to celebrate the holiday with Lisa and the other kids later today."

"Sure."

Sylvia nodded. She didn't get too much sleep because she was worried about Henry. Seeing Henry was back home safe and sound, Sylvia finally relieved. "You go and get some rest too."

Sylvia then went back to the bedroom quietly.

At ten o'clock in the morning, Henry woke up on the bed. He rubbed his sleepy eyes and went to check his cell phone. There were a couple of unanswered calls from Silver Visitor.

Henry was puzzled. He was about to call Silver Visitor back, but Silver Visitor called him again.

"Yeah?"

"Where are you?"

"Home. Where else can I be?"

Henry yawned and said, "You called me many times. Is there something wrong in the underground palace?"

"Nothing happened in the underground palace. It's you..." "What's about me?"

Henry was confused.

"You injured Master Tianxuan last night?"

"He was injured?"

Henry sat up from the bed and asked, "He shouldn't be."

When Henry threw his palm at Tianxuan involuntarily last night, Henry didn't think he used too much force. If Tianxuan was injured, the only explanation would be...

Tianxuan was too weak.

However, the Big Dipper of Section Nine were better fighters than even Master Sword Wielder. They were never weak.

Silver Visitor laughed bitterly, "Henry, you should know how those people work. They won't tolerate any attack or harm reflected on them, and they will exaggerate when it happens. You have one word of complaint about them, and they will paint the word as if you are insulting the whole Section Nine.

Henry chuckled and said, "Oh, I understand. What are those old cows gonna do?"

"They... they..." Silver Visitor said hesitantly, "They want you to apologize in public and take one beating from Tianxuan."

"That's fine."

Henry said without hesitation, "Ask them to wait for me in the suburb."

"What?"

Silver Visitor was surprised by Henry's answer.

"Just tell them that."

Without hearing one more word from Silver Visitor, Henry hung up.

When Henry walked out of his room, Sylvia and Milan were already sitting in the living room. Both of them looked fresh and energetic.

As the president, Sylvia always dressed in fierce business attire. But she was only in her twenties, young and full of life.

Henry was checking them out.

Milan raised her head and asked, "What? Blind by our beauty?"

"Yes, never see such beauty before."

Henry rarely praised Milan.

Milan was about to express her excitement, Henry continued.

"With your comparison, my wife looks much more beautiful than ever."

Milan's face suddenly changed. She held out her fist and pouted. "Henry Zhang, wanna have a go?"

Sylvia giggled. She gave Henry a look and said, "Knock it off. Stop teasing her. Go wash up. The Children's Day celebration starts at 11:30."

"Yes, ma'am!"

Henry gave Sylvia a military salute and rushed to the bathroom.

Staring at Henry, Milan said unhappily, "Sylvia, Henry has become more and more annoying. He was still tolerable when he was a kid."

Henry got himself washed up and dressed up at 10:30.

Three of them hopped on a Mercedes-Benz SUV. Before heading to the orphanage, they first drove to the shopping mall to pick up the toys Sylvia ordered for the children.

They arrived at the orphanage at eleven o'clock.

Sylvia hired a planning company to take care of the Children's Day celebration. The orphanage gate was filled with balloons. People dressed as cartoon characters were performing on the street.

People would hear the sound of celebration from hundreds of meters away.

Henry never had a chance to celebrate Children's Day when he was a kid. There was only darkness in his childhood. When Sylvia walked into his life that winter, Henry saw the first ray of light in his life.

Sylvia also never celebrated Children's Day properly in her childhood. Both of them were expecting that day with excitement.

She arranged a couple of booths around the orphanage to sell snacks. She wanted to turn the orphanage into a theme park.

The moment the three of them walked into the orphanage, they were bathing in the cheerful laughter of the children. Smiles crawled onto their faces.

The teachers were playing with the children on the playground.

Henry glanced over and saw Dean Cui and Jenny.

Jenny noticed Henry.

She whispered something to the children, and they turned to look at Henry with excitement in their eyes.

Henry was very popular among children when he was at the orphanage.

"Henry!"

The children ran toward Henry cheerfully.

The scene brought Milan back to her memory. If it weren't for Mr. and Mrs. Xiao, she would have grown up in an orphanage, too.

Chapter 1115

"Dad!"

A crisp voice sounded. Lisa, running at the forefront, threw herself into Henry's arms. She then looked at Sylvia and called, "Mom!"

Lisa made Sylvia smile.

Henry picked Lisa up.

Sitting in Henry's arms, Lisa looked at Milan and asked, "Dad, is she my third mom?"

Milan was drinking water. Lisa's question made her almost spit out.

Milan wiped her mouth and asked, "What do you mean by the third mom? Are there two more?"

Lisa nodded, "Yes, mom Sylvia and mom Jenny."

"Jenny?"

Milan was confused.

She was about to ask, but Jenny walked over, "Sylvia, long time no see."

Jenny wore light makeup that day. Spending time with children had made her look much younger. Jenny used to have a serene and mature beauty. But at this moment, she looked young and full of life.

Sylvia gave Jenny a dignified smile, unleashing all of her beauty and power. She asked, "I heard President Qin has taken over the orphanage completely?"

The relationship between Sylvia and Jenny was complicated.

When Su Clan first came to Sylvia, Sylvia hadn't known about Henry's true identity, so Sylvia asked Jenny to look after Henry for her.

When Sylvia heard the news of Henry's death, it was also Jenny who kept her company.

Jenny smiled, "Hengyuan is operating on the right track. It doesn't matter if I'm there or not. So I put all my energy into the orphanage. I should thank you for building this kindergarten."

Milan stood aside and observed Sylvia and Jenny. Their interaction gave her a strange feeling. It didn't look like they were hostile toward each other, but there was something fake in their conversation.

Milan couldn't find any similar scenario from all the soap operas she ever watched.

Lisa looked at Henry with her big and innocent eyes, "Dad, mom Jenny said I would get gifts today."

All the other children also looked at Henry expectantly.

Looking at all the adorable and innocent faces, Henry laughed, "Of course. How can I not have gifts for you all? Come with me."

Holding Lisa in his arms, Henry walked in the front like Peter Pan, with all the other children following him. He walked to his car and popped up the trunk.

When the trunk was opened, children exclaimed in excitement.

The children's eyes were sparkling when they stared at all the toys. They really loved the toys Henry brought over. But they were also a bunch of well-behaved children. No one touched anything before Henry said so.

Henry put Lisa down and said with excitement, "Kids, let's dig in! Aunt Sylvia bought them for you."

As soon as Henry said the words, all the children went to pick their favorite toys with joy and laughter.

Enjoying the view, Henry admired how simple happiness was for the children.

Taking their gifts, the children run back to the kindergarten to play with their toys.

Listening to the children's song playing in the kindergarten, Henry couldn't help but hum with the tone.

There were all kinds of activities arranged there. Except for the children from the orphanage, the other children also enjoyed themselves with the company of their parents.

Henry bought a sugar figurine. He remembered that he wanted one of those so bad when he was only a little boy. His mom bought one on his birthday, but Henry loved that figurine so much that he didn't want to eat it. In the end, the sugar figurine melted.

"Sweet memories."

Henry shook his head. Before he could take a bite, Henry heard a crying.

He looked over and saw a boy was sitting on the ground. He was around four years old.

Lisa was standing in front of him, waving her fist. Jenny was on the side, talking to a kindergarten teacher.

"What's going on?"

"Did they have a fight?"

"For what?"

Henry ran over and asked Jenny.

Jenny shook her head, "I only saw Lisa pushed that kid to the ground."

"Lisa, come here!"

Henry raised his voice at Lisa.

Hearing Henry's calling, the triumphant look on Lisa's face disappeared. She walked toward Henry, pouting.

"Why did you push him?"

"Go and apologize!"

Lisa was always a well-behaved child, but she shook her head hard to defy Henry's request, "Never! He says I don't have mom and dad!"

Hearing Lisa's words, both Jenny and Henry's faces dropped.

The children from the orphanage were very sensitive about the topic of parents.

A woman in her late twenties ran over in a hurry. She held the boy up and readjusted her Chanel bag in anger. The woman walked up to the teacher and questioned, "Why didn't you do your job? What happened to my baby?"

Jenny answered before the teacher, "I'm sorry that Lisa pushed your child. But it's not all Lisa's fault. Your child said some very insulting thing to her."

The woman took a look at Lisa and snored, "Orphans. I really don't know what's wrong with the Ye Family. Why did they allow all the orphans in this kindergarten? It's such a mess!"

Hearing the woman's words, Jenny and Henry both understood where the boy learned to talk like that.

The children would learn everything from their parents. Jenny took a deep breath to push down her anger, "Ma'am, I think you should pay more attention to your language. It was only a fight between children. Let's talk about how we can settle it."

"Settle?"

"An orphan just took a beating of my son, and you want to settle?"

"I'm telling you. I won't settle for anything!"

Chapter 1116

The woman was arrogant and furious.

The kindergarten teacher tried to calm her down, "Ma'am, children pushing each other often happens. They just need the right guidance to settle the quarrel between themselves. Overinvolved with their activities won't help them in long term. The gentleman has asked Lisa to apologize to your son."

"Apologize?" The woman yelled in anger, "We don't need the apology from an orphan!"

Hearing the words, Lisa rushed toward the woman and shouted, "I have mom and dad!"

The woman frowned. She kicked her foot at Lisa, "Dirty orphan, get lost!"

Just when the woman's foot was about to reach Lisa, a hand grabbed her leg.

Henry held Lisa up and glanced at the woman. He said to Lisa, "Be a good girl. Don't waste your energy on rude people."

The woman raised her eyebrows, "What did you say?"

"He said you were rude!" Sylvia walked over. She took a look at Lisa in Henry's arms and then walked toward the woman. She whispered to the woman, "My husband doesn't touch you because you are a woman, but I don't care. If your son weren't here, I could kill you for what you were about to do to my daughter!"

The woman was stunned. Sylvia's threat made her trembling with anger. Her eyes kept glancing at Sylvia, Jenny, and Henry. She pointed toward them and said, "You are bullying a woman! Just you wait!"

The woman took out her cell phone and made a phone call.

Sylvia looked at the woman unchivalrously. She then said to the principal of the kindergarten, who was standing next to her, "The boy will quit the kindergarten. You go and work on the paperwork. We cannot provide proper education for him anymore."

As the owner of the kindergarten, no one could disobey Sylvia's order. The principal immediately went to deal with the paperwork.

"By the way," Sylvia continued, "Children at such a young age need the right influence. Education from their family is important, but it doesn't mean the kindergarten can cut some slack. I want all the children in our kindergarten to grow up as reasonable and respectful citizens. So I don't want to see any segregation of the children from the orphanage among the other children."

The principal nodded, "Yes, you can rest assured."

After the arrangement, Sylvia walked over to Henry and checked Lisa carefully. She was worried about Lisa's health. The unpleasant incident could affect Lisa's problematic heart condition.

Living in an orphanage made Lisa much more mature for her age. After some caring words from Henry, Lisa had let go of the grudge.

"Dad, I know what I did was wrong. The next time someone says bad things about me, I won't push them anymore. I will tell you and mom."

Looking at such a young child who behaved so maturely, Sylvia was heartbroken. Lisa should be spoiled by her parents and enjoy her childhood like all the other children. But in reality, she was forced to face the cruel grown-up world way too soon.

The interlude did not affect the Children's Day celebration.

Milan had a great time with the children from the orphanage. She borrowed a snack booth and made snack cakes for the children. All of a sudden, Milan became second to none favorite person in the kindergarten.

This was the first time Sylvia visited the kindergarten after the construction was finished. So she and Henry took a tour of the building and inspected the infrastructure. They then visited the principal's office, learning about the children enrolled here.

An angry voice came from outside of the principal's office.

"Honey, you have to help me! What are those people? How dare they make the principal expel our son! Is every one of the Lins Group stupid? And why Sylvia can be the president at such a young age?"

"That's enough. You can't talk about Sylvia like that behind her back!" Someone said angrily.

"What do you mean? Are you going to watch people bully me and your son?"

"I didn't mean that. I have personal connections with the Lin Family, and I'll make whoever did this to us pay. What I'm saying is that stop making trouble in Lins' territory. We can't afford to offend them."

"Fine, I won't go after the Lins. But those people have to pay! I looked for them everywhere, but they've gone. I guess they have run away. You go and get their information. Someone is in need of greetings!"

There were knockings on the door of the principal office when the conversation was over.

Sylvia was reading the documents in the office. She answered the knocking without looking up.

A man in his thirties walked into the office.

He said politely to the principal of the kindergarten, "Hello, principal. I am..."

A woman behind him interrupted the man.

"I was wondering where the hell you went. So you are hiding here!" The woman was the mother of the expelled boy.

Hearing the familiar voice, Sylvia looked up. She said with a contemptuous smile on her face, "It's you. What's the matter? We've found helpers?"

The woman pointed at Sylvia, "Don't be so arrogant. I'm telling you, today you..."

Before the woman spitting out her threat, she felt something hit her face hard.

"Slap!"

The man slapped the woman.

"Shut your mouth!" The man shouted at the woman.

The woman covered her cheek with tears in her eyes. She stared at the man in confusion.

The man ignored his wife. He said to Sylvia ingratiatingly, "Please don't be angry, President Lin. My wife is stupid, and I'll discipline her better."

The woman was stunned. She couldn't believe that the woman sitting at the desk was the president of the Lins Group, Sylvia Lin.

All the woman's anger disappeared in an instant, and the only thing she could feel was fear.

Sylvia put the document on the desk. Her eyes ran over the man and stopped on the woman. Sylvia said, "Do you still remember what I would do when your son is not around?"

Chapter 1117

Sylvia didn't raise her voice, but her imposing manner made the body of the boy's mother shake.

Hearing Sylvia's tone, the man slapped the woman again. He reprimanded. "You are so stupid. How dare you mess with President Lin? Apologize!"

"Leave it."

Sylvia continued, "How can I take your wife's apologies?"

The man quickly ingratiated himself with Sylvia, "President Lin, our families have been working together for more than twenty years, and my grandpa was part of Master Lin's team when he was building up his empire. For the sake of my grandpa, please forgive this stupid woman."

The woman also realized the trouble she caused. She said in a panic, "President Lin, I'm so sorry for all the inconvenience I caused. It's all my faults."

Sylvia smiled slightly. She looked at the man and said, "So you think I would forgive your wife just because of your grandpa?"

"President Lin, I..." The man wanted to explain, but he couldn't even find a reasonable excuse.

Sylvia looked at the woman and said, "Kneel."

The woman was stunned. Her pride stopped her from doing that.

However, the man knelt on the floor the moment Sylvia said the words.

"Ha."

Sylvia laughed, "Making your husband take the punishment caused by your mistake! Such a wonderful wife."

Looking at the scene, Henry shook his head. The man was able to read the tide of the situation and swallowed his pride when he had to. But his wife's over-expanding ego would eventually bring herself great trouble.

"President Lin, I know you are a generous person."

The man was pleading as hard as he could.

Without looking at the man, Sylvia walked toward the door of the office. Before exiting, Sylvia glanced at the woman and said, "Try to teach your child some manners, or someone will do that for you. You are just one fine example. You are lucky your husband is willing to plead for you with his pride, or you will be doomed. Henry, let's go."

Henry followed Sylvia out of the principal's office.

A long while after Sylvia and Henry left, the man finally got up. His wife was still standing in her spot.

The man's eyes were red. He glanced at his wife and walked out without saying a word.

The woman quickly followed him, "I..." "You've said enough."

The man shook his head, "You're too arrogant and tyrannizing. I don't think we're suitable for each other anymore. I'll talk to the lawyer about our divorce."

The woman suddenly felt blank in her head. Her limited- edition handbags, luxury car, and arrogance were all because of her husband's wealth and status. She would lose everything without him. The atmosphere between the two turned intense and awkward.

In the courtyard of the kindergarten, Henry was walking behind Sylvia with a big smile on his face, stretching from ear to ear.

"What are you smiling at?"

Sylvia rolled her eyes.

"Sweetheart, you were so awesome just now!"

Henry gave Sylvia a thumbs up.

"Awesome?"

Sylvia was confused.

"That's right."

Henry nodded hard. "Honey, I love you more and more each day!"

He said with a raised voice. Parents in the courtyard all looked toward them.

Sylvia's face immediately blushed, "Are you crazy? Why are you shouting?"

Henry chuckled.

The seemingly huge misfortunate event was only a minor hiccup for Sylvia and Henry. They were staying in the kindergarten and playing with the children the whole day.

Ever since the day they adopted Lisa, it was the day which they spent most of the time together.

As for Milan, she was treated as a patissier by the children and enjoying the admiration from them the whole day.

When the dusk fell, the celebration was ended. After a whole day of playing, all the children were exhausted. Some of them fell asleep in their parents' arms before leaving the kindergarten.

Although Sylvia and Henry had adopted Lisa, she still lived in the orphanage due to the instability of the lives of Sylvia and Henry. Good thing was that Lisa didn't mind. She was happy enough to know that she finally had the care of the parents.

Riding in the car, Milan was trying to relax her hands. After spending a whole day working in pastry, her hands were tired.

When they reached their community gate, Milan looked out with a confused expression on her face.

"Are they shooting a film?"

"Interesting costumes!"

Henry noticed that there were seven people in robes standing at the gate. They were staring at Henry's car. The seven people were the Big Dipper.

Henry pulled the car over.

"Sylvia, I need to deal with something. You and Milan go home without me."

Before Sylvia could say a word, Henry stepped out of the car and headed toward the seven people.

Seeing Henry walking over, the seven people turned angry.

Tianshu said to Henry sarcastically, "How superior the famous King of Hell is! We have to pay you a visit to see you!"

Henry rolled his eyes and said, "You guys came without an invitation. It doesn't look like I'm the one being superior."

"Quit playing the smart*ss!"

Tianxuan stepped forward and said, "You asked us to wait for you in the suburbs, but you never showed. Are you playing us?"

"Playing you?"

Henry stared at Tianxuan, "You asked me to apologize and take a beating in public. You are playing me in the first place."

"Young man, how dare you?"

Tianjin shouted.

"How dare you!"

Henry shouted back, "Take a look at yourselves. Who are you to deserve my apologies?"

"Does the First Brother know about this? Who allowed you all to punish me?"

"What makes your seven old cows think that you can do whatever you want to me?"

"Just because you are going to die before me?"

"You do have a sharp-tongue!"

Yuheng, the only female in the group, spoke, "You have no respect for seniors. Do you also talk to your master this way?"

"My master?"

Henry's face was full of disdain, "How shameless are you? You are so not in the same rank as my master!"
