

Chapter 929

In the Lin's mansion.

Henry lay comfortably on the sofa while he watched some funny videos. He would laugh exaggeratedly from time to time.

It was five o'clock in the evening; the time had come for the Lins Group to call it a day. Employees of the Lins Group started leaving the company.

The elevator rang as it stopped at the lobby of the first floor. Its doors opened and Sylvia stepped out it.

By her side followed a young man who was about twenty years old.

The young man's ears picked up Henry's hysterical laughter, causing him to frown a little in annoyance. "President Lin, are people allowed to make such loud noises in your company?"

Sylvia smiled back at the young man and said, "President Sun, that is my husband. Also, now it's time to leave from work, so naturally, those rules do not apply anymore."

As he listened to her reply, the young man who was addressed as President Sun frowned a little unhappily. "President Lin, are you married?"

Sylvia smiled and nodded, extending her right hand and waving the ring on her ring finger at the same time.

This wedding ring that had never parted from Sylvia's finger was made of Manjushri Gold. However, Rainer Sun did not pay much attention to this detail.

Rainer shot a glance at Henry, who was laughing loudly from the sofa. A look of envy and dissatisfaction flashed across his eyes. How could such a beautiful woman be so simply married to someone like him?

Rainer had a strong desire to conquer Sylvia from the moment he met her.

"Come, President Sun, allow me to introduce you two. This is my husband, Henry." Sylvia walked quickly through the hall and stopped right in front of Henry. "Dear, this is President Sun of Du Hai Cumulus Industry. He has already come to an initial agreement of cooperation with our Lins Group."

"Cumulus Industry, I've heard of it." Henry nodded. This Cumulus Industry was quite well known in Du Hai. Even if they were not ranked first, there was absolutely no problem for them to be ranked top ten in Du Hai. If it were still back in the day, this Cumulus Industry would never set eyes upon the Lin's Group. But now it was different. The Lin's Group became one of the top companies in the country overnight in terms of financial affairs, even men from Cumulus Industry had come to cooperate with them.

This cooperation was also very beneficial to the Lins Group. After all, although the Lins Group was wealthy, they lacked contacts for the development of bigger businesses. It was very necessary to have a good business partner.

"President Lin, it seems that some problems have appeared regarding the collaboration we had discussed earlier," Rainer said as he pulled out his phone and glanced at it. "I've just received news that the piece of the land that your company had sold off at the auction is still yet to be transferred to the buyers. Even the ownership of it is not under the Lins. I know the rules of the Auction House, you have to transfer the ownership of the land to the buyers within three days, yet two days have already passed."

"Rest assured, President Sun. My husband has already taken care of this matter."

"President Lin, I, Rainer Sun, don't dare say that I have seen it all, but I have seen enough to tell you this. Your company sold off this piece of land at a sky-high price. If the transfer could have been completed easily, I'm sure you, President Lin, would have been able to solve this issue on the night of the auction. But seeing that it has been dragged on for so long now, it doesn't look like it's you could take back the land whenever you wanted. If the Lins Group were to face a capital chain rupture, those channels aren't something a small enterprise like the Lins Group could deal with."

Rainer spoke very bluntly. He was deliberately adding on pressure to Sylvia, while trying to look superior.

Although the Lins had become the wealthiest family in the country overnight, but their foundation was weak and everyone knew the reason behind why the Lins had risen to the top in just one night. In the eyes of people from wealthy families like Rainer, the Lins were nothing more than one of those nouveau riches. To obtain wealth in a short time and to be wealthy for a lifetime were two very different things. It was a fact that some of them looked down on the nouveau riche like the Lins.

"Don't you worry." Henry said, "Our staff went to see them regarding this matter several times yesterday, but they refused to meet with our staff. I have already talked to them. The land owners have now gone to retrieve the money for our compensation. They will soon hand us the property ownership documents soon."

Rainer laughed out loud at Henry's words. He scanned Henry from head to toe, snorted coldly and said, "I, Rainer, have seen people do things of all sorts. You are telling me now that they are still holding on to your lands, yet you still asked them to compensate for the losses?"

"Sir, you might have taken them for granted," a middle-aged man beside Rainer said. It was Rainer's secretary.

Rainer's secretary said, "From my personal experience, the other party is obviously trying to benefit from your company. If President Lin's husband thinks that the other party will compensate the Lins, and hand over the rights obediently, with all due respect, if the Lin's are really this naive, then you really are not yet qualified to expand your businesses to Du Hai. That place is different from a small city like Yinzhou, it's no kid's playground."

Rainer added, "President Lin, it seems that we'll still need to think twice regarding the cooperation between us."

"President Sun, my husband was definitely not bragging about it. He is the man in charge of this matter. There would absolutely be no problem with that," Sylvia said confidently.

"Forget it," Rainer shook his head and said, "President Lin, we are all businessmen, and to us, the world of business is a battlefield. If everyone was as simple as you imagined, anyone could make it big in their businesses. If you are serious about cooperating with us, please show more sincerity."

When Rainer said the word 'sincerity', he purposely looked at Sylvia with a dominating gaze, using it to give her a hint.

Naturally, Rainer's gaze did not escape Henry's sight.

A hint of coldness flashed in Henry's eyes. He smiled and said, "President Sun, since you said that we are too naive, how about we make a bet on this?"

"Oh?" Rainer's lips curled into a playful smile. "How interesting. A person born in a tiny city like Yinzhou wants to make a bet with me? So tell me, what do you want to bet on?"

"It's very simple." Henry picked up his mobile phone. "Since President Sun doesn't believe a word I said, I will leave my mobile phone on the table from now on, and I shall not contact anyone. Let's see if those people will bring us the ownership documents along with our compensation money with them."

"Haha." Rainer's secretary laughed disdainfully. "What a childish game."

"President Sun, if you don't have the guts to make this bet, we could all just forget what I had just said." Henry replied, ready to slip his mobile phone back into his pocket.

"Hold on," Rainer said as he stopped Henry. "I can play your little game, but only if you raise the stakes!"

Henry threw his mobile phone, which he was about to return into his pocket, back onto the coffee table in front of him. "If no one show up later, Lins Group will give President Sun one-hundred billion in cash. What do you think?"

Upon hearing this, Rainer's secretary's pupils constricted.

One-hundred billion in cash!

The whole company owned no more than nearly two-hundred billion in assets! The cash of one-hundred billion was a massive sum of money for the company!

Rainer's eyes shone with greed as he replied, "Sure."

"Well then, let's make a deal. If we lose, we'll give you one-hundred billion in cash, but you lose, we don't want your money, all you have to do is get on your knees and bark like a dog three times," Henry said as he stepped forward and stood right in front of Rainer, looking him straight in the eye.

Chapter 930

Upon hearing this, Rainer's face changed. He stared at Henry and said, "What did you just say?"

"I said if you lose, you'll kneel down and bark three times. Of course, if you don't have the balls to bet on this, just forget I ever said that." Henry shrugged.

"You're f*ucking asking me to bark like a dog? Who do you even think you are?" Rainer cursed directly at Henry.

"Well then, forget it. There's no point for us to make a bet." an uninterested expression displayed across Henry's face as he reached out to grab the phone that he had just thrown onto the coffee table.

Rainer stared at Henry who was making his move. The one-hundred billion Yuan bet that Henry had mentioned echoed in his head over and over. Rainer believed that there was no way he could lose.

"Those people still had the ownership of the lands in their grasp, plus they were dragging it out and not transferring it over to the Lins, so why would they hand it over so easily this time?" he thought.

"Deal!" Rainer yelled.

"Okay." Henry snapped his fingers, then looked at his wristwatch, and looked towards the door of the Lins Group. "They should be arriving about now."

"Keep dreaming!" Rainer said with a disdainful smile.

Just as Rainer's words fell, a few figures appeared at the front of the company's entrance suddenly. It was Mr. Frazer and his friends.

Mr. Frazer and his friends had panic written all over their faces. They basically scrambled into the company from the entrance, fighting to be the first in line, in fear that they were slower than the others around them.

"Mr. Zhang! Mr. Zhang, we have brought you the money you requested. Quick, please take over the ownership of these lands."

"Mr. Zhang, I've brought you both the money and the land. Please, take my mine first."

"Mr. Zhang, I've withdrawn the amount you requested for in cash. I'm begging you. Please take it."

The crowd of owners all fought to be the first in place. Someone handed over a box filled with cash directly to Henry, as if afraid that Henry would not accept it.

There were only less than five minutes left of the time the Silver Visitor had permitted Mr. Frazer and his men. They all feared that they would face the consequences that were enough to make them regret for a lifetime just because they failed in the final five minutes.

Henry smiled as he looked at Mr. Frazer and the other owners, then looked at Rainer and said, "Looks like you've lost, so why don't you do what we've agreed on?"

Rainer's expression hardened incredibly. He glanced at Sylvia, who stood beside him, and snorted, "How do I know if these people weren't people you invited to act this out?"

"Since you knew the issues the Lins Group were facing, you would clearly know whether they were invited by me." Henry said, "Come on, it's time to fulfil your end of the bet."

"What a joke. You're taking this childish game so seriously. Let's go," Rainer said as he waved his hand, signalling his secretary to leave with him.

Henry stretched out his hand immediately, blocked Rainer's way. "You haven't barked out loud yet."

Rainer's secretary frowned and said, "Mr. Henry, you're taking this too far. This bet is a joke in its entirety. If it was you who had lost, we wouldn't have done anything about it. We were just joining in on your joke all along."

"You want me to bark like a dog? You've really got balls, why don't you take a good look at yourself!" Rainer waved his hand and turned to leave.

Just as he was about to take a step, Rainer felt someone grab him by the collar, causing him to be unable to move forward.

Rainer turned to see Henry staring at him.

Rainer frowned and yelled, "Let go of me!"

"If we don't hear you bark today, you shall not leave." Henry said, his face in smiles the whole time.

"Bark my *ss!" Rainer yelled at the top of his voice. "You... Argh!"

Rainer's miserable shrieks interrupted his sentence.

Henry sent a whip kick towards the back of Rainer's knees.

Rainer fell to his knees with a thump. The force of the impact caused the tiles on the Lins' flooring to crack.

Rainer could only feel an inexpressible pain coming from his knees, causing him to wonder if his bones had been completely shattered. The piercing pain left him completely unable to consider the humiliation he was to face at this moment, all he could do was scream in agony.

"What are you doing!" Rainer's secretary roared and hurriedly stretched out his hand to help Rainer up.

Before Rainer's secretary could touch him, he was kicked over by Henry.

After kicking Rainer's secretary down, Henry slapped Rainer in the face.

Slap!

A crisp sound rang out as a bloodied tooth flew out of Rainer's mouth. Rainer's shrieks came to an abrupt end as he was completely hit stupid.

Henry said impatiently, "I'm asking you to bark like a dog, not scream like that, don't you understand?"

Rainer gradually came back to his senses, his eyes filled with disbelief. He raised one of his trembling hands and pointed at Henry, "You..."

Slap!

Henry slapped Rainer in the face once more.

Rainer's face was completely swollen from the two slaps.

"I told you to bark like a dog, not speak."

"How dare you hit him! We'll sue you!" Rainer's secretary roared as he scrambled to his feet.

Henry glanced at Rainer's secretary, then took two steps toward Rainer's secretary and said, "Sue us? I'll give you a hint, I've only hit him a few times. If you really do sue us, you won't be able to get anything out of it. Let me help you a little more."

After Henry finished speaking, he grabbed the secretary's arm and twisted it forcefully, as if he were wringing dry a piece of wet cloth.

Rainer's secretary let out a painful shriek. He took a few steps back and collapsed onto the floor, rolling around on the ground in pain.

As they witnessed this scene, Mr. Frazer and others almost gulped in unison. They really did not expect Henry to be such a ruthless person, he broke someone's arm just because he wanted to.

As they recalled their previous attitude towards Henry, and how they addressed him, cold sweat wet the backs of Mr. Frazer and his friends.

Henry turned his attention back to Rainer, completely ignoring Rainer's secretary.

"Do it."

Rainer looked fearfully at the secretary who was still rolling all over the floor screaming. His body trembled uncontrollably. When he looked at Henry once more, Rainer's eyes were filled with fear, and totally lost his voice.

Henry looked at Rainer with narrowed eyes. After a few seconds of silence, he suddenly shouted, "Bark!"

Henry's sudden roar rang in Rainer's ears. He reacted to the roar almost subconsciously.

"Woof!"

Rainer only returned to his senses after he barked like a dog. His face instantly flushed red with extreme embarrassment, but he dared not to say anything out of fear.

"Haha!" Henry laughed and said, "What a disobedient dog. We'll have to teach him a few more tricks. Come on, Keep barking! You still have two more to go."

Rainer's voice trembled, "You... don't you go too far."

"Bark!" Henry yelled, his smile disappeared instantly. Then, he raised his palm once more and slapped Rainer in the face.

This slap landed on Rainer's face, knocking him completely onto the ground.

Rainer only felt the world go black and his mind go blank. He could even feel that his features might have been displaced by this slap.

"Bark!"

Henry walked over, stepped on Rainer's palm, and crushed it hard.
