Mine – The Alpha’s Possession by Kylie Chapter 63

Jackson ordered a couple of omega’s to set up two bedroom’s for his mother and brother on the second floor of the packhouse, so] they weren’t near our room.I don’t see the problem because his bedroom and the office had the most sound proofing in them.

So it’s not like they were going to hear anything.But while they got settled in Jackson and I fled to the office and locked the door.

“Is it really that bad having them here?” I asked.

“Ask me that again in a couple of days.” He says.

“Okay.” I say.

And I sat down at the laptop to get some work done while he sat at his desk and the phone started ringing almost immediately.I only heard bits of the conversation.

Even the person on the other end was hard for me to understand, but I knew that it was another Alpha.And it sounded like they were in trouble.

So Jackson got off the phone as soon as he could and he called all off duty warriors.I got up from where I was standing and he looked at me like he was about to argue with me, but I raised my eyebrows at him and even he knew that it was pointless.

So we headed out of the office and to the front of the packhouse.

The warriors started showing up and pretty soon I saw Joseph come out as well and stand where the warriors were.He looked like he was a warrior and knew how to fight.

So, if Jackson didn’t say anything then I wasn’t going to either.

“The Alpha from the neighboring pack just called for our help.They’re under attack.It looks like Rogues.He’s asked for our help.I know that we don’t usually do this, but that pack has never done anything to hurt us and he sounded desperate.So, we’re going to help them.” Jackson announced to everyone.

And they all agreed.

Our defenses were going to stay in place and we were just taking off duty warriors to fight this battle.

So Jackson grabbed my hand and we headed down the stairs and through the crowd.

Joseph was right behind us as we led the warriors and when Jackson nodded to me, we started running in the same direction and Jackson and I both shifted at the same time.

And the rest of the warriors followed us.

“How the hell do you two look identical?”

Joseph mind linked us.

“Mind on the mission.” I demanded.

And Jackson didn't say anything to Joseph or me for giving his brother a demand.I honestly don't think he would have cared.

We ran through our own forest until we got to the border and then we stepped onto no man's land.

Which is what we call land that is not owned by a werewolf pack.

It's neutral ground that is owned by human's.

And this is not the same Alpha that was trying to demand Jackson hand over some of his territory.

Jackson would never go to the aid of Alpha Samuel.

Never in a million years.But Jackson was giving us details as we were running through the woods headed towards Alpha Ryan's pack.It was in the other direction from Alpha Samuel.

As soon as we got close enough we could hear the battle going on, howling, snarling, growling.

It sounded full force and it sounded serious.

Rogues don't usually travel in huge packs, but somehow they had assembled a huge pack to attack Alpha Ryan for some reason.We don't know why.But we were going to find out.

Jackson ordered to try and take one alive.

We needed to know what the hell they knew and why they were attacking.

When we got to the scene, it looked like absolute chaos.

So Jackson let out a loud howl that got everyone's attention and made sure that Alpha Ryan knew that we were there.

And then we jumped right into the middle of the fight before the rogues had a chance to react.

They were definitely outnumbered now.

Alpha Ryan was the Alpha of a pretty small pack and they were an easy target.

But when the rogues saw Jackson and myself coming, identical Wolves, just as big as each other.

They knew that they were in trouble.

Especially with 150 warriors following behind us.

I saw one wolf being attacked by three rogues and I jumped right into the middle and onto one of the rogues' backs and I grabbed another one by the back of the neck with my teeth and threw him across the battlefield until he hit a tree.

The rogue under me put up a fight and knocked me off but I managed to land on my feet and that one turned around to lunge at me but I was fast enough to get out of the way and then I turned around grabbing it by it's flank as it was passing me, instead of actually attacking me and I shook with my teeth so viciously that I badly damaged it's leg.

And I don't think it would ever be able to heal from it.

That rogue started whimpering and I leaned over it and knocked it to the ground growling in its face warning it not to move.I could feel Jackson's concerns during the fight.

He was on the other side of the battlefield and we couldn't see each other, but I knew that he was worried that I wasn't ready for this fight.

Since I got back from Morda, I hadn't been training and he was afraid that I wasn't up to fighting fit.But I didn't even talk to him.I kept doing what I was doing and I made sure that I was attacking any rogue that got in my way.

Jackson could feel everything that I was feeling, and I wasn't even hurt yet.So he knew that I was doing alright.He could feel it.

And I knew that.

So there was no reason to keep reassuring him that I was fine.I needed to concentrate on what I was doing.

And that was hard enough at the moment.

There were rogues everywhere and injured pack members from Alpha Ryan's pack.

I saw Joseph in trouble and being bailed up by four wolves at one point, so I ran up behind them and grabbed one of them by the hind leg and flung it across the battlefield and Joseph attacked another one when it wasn't looking.

"I didn't ask for your help Jackson." Joseph mind linked.

"I'm not Jackson, dickhead." I snapped at him.

And he looked at me for a moment before he reached down and ripped that rogue's throat out.

He didn't say anything else to me because I was fighting off the other two rogues that were attacking him.I told him that I could use a little help here, since I was the one that saved him after all.

But he just stood there looking at the rogues in front of him.

I saw him briefly looking at one of the rogues while the other one attacked me, but I managed to fend off his attack and Joseph didn't move until I attacked that rogue that Joseph was staring at.

Out of nowhere Joseph knocked me out of the way and I stumbled to the ground so that I couldn't attack the rogue.

And then Joseph turned on all of us and he was protecting the rogue.

I knew that there was only one reason why he would do something like that.

She was his mate.

He found his mate and she's a rogue.

But I don't know how she felt about it.I called for Jackson and he came running over as soon as he could and he saw the way that his brother was acting and protecting the rogue, but then the rogue took off when she found the chance and Joseph took off after her.

"Let him go." Jackson says.

"He's your brother.It's not safe out there." I say.

"He can take care of himself.Like you said, he's my brother." Jackson says.

It didn't take long before the fighting was under control.

The rogues were either dead or they had fled when they realized that they weren't going to win.

But Wyatt called us over to a rogue that he managed to keep alive and that rogue had shifted back to human form.

Jackson needed to do the same in order to communicate with him but I stood next to Jackson in my wolf form.

Jackson was the only one of us that shifted back.

"Why?" Jackson asked.

"Why would I answer any of your questions?" The rogue asked.

And I crouched down growling and snarling right in his face.

And I was bigger than him in my wolf form, while he was sitting down.

"Because she'll rip your face off if you don't." Jackson says, crossing his arms.

Not caring that he was using me as his weapon right now.

That's what I wanted.

"It was an order." The rogue said.

"By who?" Jackson asked.

"Alpha Samuel.He wanted us to attack this pack because he knew that you would help them." The rogue says.

"Jackson.He wanted us away from our territory." I mind linked him.

"What does he want with my territory?" Jackson asked.

"He wants her.He didn't think you'd bring her along because he thought she was still too weak to fight.He was going to use her as leverage to get your land." The rogue says.

And Jackson looked at me with almost fear on his face.

Before the rogue could say another word Jackson reached down and ripped his throat out and killed him.

And he shifted back to his wolf form and we started running as fast as our legs could take us back to our pack.
