I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 301

Chapter 301

Jesper was furious as he turned to look at Flynn, asking, “What do you think, Flynn?”

Flynn stood upright and solemnly replied, “I think you should uphold your end of the bargain, Mr. Jesper.”

Jesper was stunned, gawking at Flynn. After all, the latter hired the older man, an experienced figure in the world of geodes. Even so, Jesper wondered why Flynn would take Bonnie’s side.

Soon after, a bearded old man dressed in all white stepped forward. Someone from the crowd exclaimed, “Hey, that’s Mr. Pan from the Gemstone Association!”

“I thought he retired years ago. Also, he stopped caring about what was going on in the circle. What’s he doing here?”

Pan gazed at Bonnie as he walked past her. He approached Jesper and said, “Credibility is essential in our circle. You should deliver on your promise since you made a bet with her.

Everyone was shocked to hear that. No one expected Pan to come out of retirement after all these years, let alone speak up for Bonnie instead of Jesper. Moreover, Jesper was more seasoned than Bonnie was.

Jesper could just cry, thinking, ‘What rotten luck is this? Why would Mr. Pan show up just as I make such a bet with Bonnie?’

“M–Mr. Pan, it’s not like I don’t want to uphold my end. How am I supposed to swallow such a huge chunk of rock?”

“Then, why would you claim to do such an outrageous thing if you knew you couldn’t do it? Were you aware you were deceiving her? Your actions are utterly disgraceful!” Pan lectured Jesper harshly.

The latter could feel the onlookers judging him. He wished he could magically disappear to the other end of the world.

IBES

“Listen carefully, Jesper. You either do as you said or leave the association!” Pan exclaimed.

Jesper panicked. Although he was a renowned figure within the gemstone circle, Pan’s standing and reputation were far greater than Jesper’s.

Bonhle approached Pen and stood beside him, saying, “Since the rock is too big for you low, I guess I can be merciful. We can grind it to dust and feed that to you instead Jesper Inwardly cursed her and her family. However, he still had to keep his word and swallow the dust. He even considered preemptively calling an ambulance to get his stomach pumped.

Meanwhile, the curious Flynn asked, “Bonnie, how could you tell this humble-looking stone was an ice jadeite with the floating flowers pattern?”

She pointed at her eyes and said, “I saw it with these, of course.”

Flynn’s lips twitched, thinking, ‘Is that supposed to be an answer? Of course, she used her eyes. What else would it be?’

The crowd around Pan grew larger. One asked, “Why did you come out of retirement, Mr.

Pan? Are you going to rejoin the antique gemstone circle?”

“That would be wonderful, Mr. Pan! With you at the helm again, our country’s reputation within the circle will be even more glorious!”

Pan grew anxious when he noticed Bonnie leaving the crowd. He said, "I'd like to have a word with you about what happened earlier, Ms. Bonnie."

She stopped, turned, and said, "Sure thing."

Later, the two left the venue together. Avril watched as they went and could not help but say, "Why do I get the feeling they know each other?"

She was not the only one who had noticed that. Even Daken, Mairi, and Flynn felt the same way.

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 302

Chapter 302

Pan took Bonnie to a place where they could have some privacy. A moment later, he saluted her and said, "Master, when did you come to Jocrovania? You should've told me earlier.

"You're retired now, and I planned to meet with you after the conference. I didn't expect to run into that mess just now. I had a hunch Jesper would try to weasel his way out of the deal. That's why I called you. I wanted to play it safe."

"Jesper is despicable and rotten. His actions only drag us fellow appraisers' reputations through the mud!" Pan was so upset that he trembled with rage.

“Well, you’re not exactly a young stud. Save your temper for someone more worthy of it.” You have to watch your health. Anyway, did you finish the medicines I prescribed last time?”

“They’ll last me a couple more days.”

“How do you feel?”

“Your medical knowledge is utterly miraculous, Master! I’ve only taken your medicines and rested briefly, but my health is almost as good as before!”

Not too long ago, there was an auction in Pyralis. The people there spoke highly of a miracle doctor, and Pan could not help but wonder if the doctor was Bonnie.

Bonnie touched Pan’s wrist and said, “Let me check your pulse.”

Meanwhile, Avril had stolen away and tailed Bonnie. However, Avril stood afar and could not see her godsister properly. The former muttered, “What’s Bonnie doing?”

Flynn gasped, “Oh, dear, she’s holding Mr. Pan’s hands. Is she cheating on Ivor? If so, would she pick someone so old?”

why

Avril rolled her eyes at him and grumbled internally, ‘When did he sneak out with me? Also, to say he has a wild imagination is a major understatement.’

“How’s that possible, Flynn? From what I see, she learned everything about gemstones from Mr. Pan.”

“That makes more sense.” Flynn clapped. “I was trying to figure out why she was so good at appraising gemstones. Now, it’s all clear. Her mentor is the chairman of the Gemstone

Association himself!:

Who’s there?! Bonnie heard his voice and looked in their direction.

Avril and Flynn exchanged embarrassed glances before they came out of hiding.

“Oh, it’s you guys.”

Avril scratched her cheek, saying, "I'm sorry, Bonnie. I didn't mean to eavesdrop on you and Mr. Pan. I just couldn't contain my curiosity."

"It's fine. I don't mind that you guys saw it." Bonnie did not intend to keep secrets from Avril. The former was concerned about Pan's identity and preferred not to reveal it unless necessary. After all, this concerns Pan as well.

As for Flynn, he had known the truth about Bonnie's identity as Bonita, the nation's leading researcher. So, she was unbothered that he had learned about her real identity.

"Whew, that's a relief. I thought you were going to get mad at me." Avril patted her chest gently and sighed in relief. Then, her eyes sparkled. "With that said, I didn't know you guys knew each other this well."

Bonnie giggled. Although her relationship with Pan was eye-opening, no one would believe she was the mentor of the prestigious Pan, the widely respected chairman of the Gemstone Association.

Flynn gave her two thumbs up and exclaimed, "Color me impressed, Bonnie!"

She was adept at appraising gemstones, and her combat skills were some of the finest he had seen. Moreover, she was the Arvador's leading researcher. He simply could not believe he had such a badass sister-in-law.

He would eventually brag about her and bask in her glory when the day came.

Bonnie felt a little uneasy by Flynn's admiring gaze. She was exasperated and turned to look at Pan instead, saying, "You're about to recover fully, but that doesn't mean you can afford to take things lightly.

"I'll prescribe you a different medicine. It'll be milder than the previous one. Take it with you and drink it slowly. Remember to take it thrice a day. It's the same rules as before."

Chapter 303

Okay, I'll remember to take the new medicine according to your instructions." Pant promised, his tone reminiscent of a child's.

Avril leaned toward Flynn and whispered, "Do you find anything funny about the way they talk to each other?"

She was unsure if she had misheard, but Pan addressed Bonnie a little too respectfully. Avril even wondered if it were some tradition among the Jorcrovians.

"Is it possible they're just this well-mannered?"

However, Flynn's answer had nothing to do with Avril's question. He whispered back, Bonnie has medical knowledge? It sounds like she's excellent at it, too."

Avril rolled her eyes at him again.

"Of course, she's excellent at it! She's the fabled miracle doctor. I would tell Flynn about it if I hadn't promised Bonnie I'd keep her identity a secret. I wish I could tell him how badass Bonnie is."

Although the Antique Jade Appreciation Conference had nearly ended, Bonnie still had some free time. It had been a long time since she browsed through the antiques show. Now that she was in Jorcrovia, it was a perfect chance for her to do just that.

Bonnie looked at the duo and asked, "Why were you two following me?"

"Hehe... We came to see what you'll buy at the antiques show. You know, curiosity," Avril said smilingly.

“Y–Yeah, what she said,” Flynn added.

“Fine, then, Bonnie responded, casually. Then, she started browsing through the antiques.

show.

“Hey, missy!” One of the store owners waved a majolica at Avril and started promoting it. Take a look at this fine majolica. It was made in one of the five great kilns in ancient Arvador fifteen centuries ago! Look, I think fate brought you here for a reason.

“So, how about it? It’s worth half a million, but I’ll give you a fifty percent discount. You know what? I’ll make it easier for both of us. Let’s set the price at two hundred thousand dollars and call it a day. What do you say?”

Avril took the majolica and examined it. Then, her eyes sparkled. She loved it very much.

Will you take a look at this, Bonnie? Do you think it’s authentic? I think it is.”

Bonnie did not even grace the majolica. She said, “Are you up on your history lessons? The five great kilns of ancient Arvador weren’t built until ten centuries ago.”

Avril returned the majolica to the store owner and pouted at him. She then took Bonnie’s arm and grumbled, “It’s good I came with you. Otherwise, that guy would’ve duped me.”

Then, Bonnie noticed Flynn was about to pay for an antique porcelain in another store.

“Really? You’re paying five million dollars for that sorry excuse of porcelain?”

The store owner was displeased when he heard that. “Hey, watch your mouth, missy! Are you looking down on it because it looks ancient? The archaeologists unearthed this porcelain from an ancient ruin. Look at its unique, vintage craftwork. It dates back to a millennia, at least.”

“That’s right, Bonnie. It’s an excavated antique porcelain. I’m sure it’s worth a lot. Grandpa loves this stuff. So, I’m buying it for him,” Flynn said.

She was speechless for a while. Then, she looked at Flynn and said, “You mistook it for an excavated antique porcelain because it looks ancient. I can tell by one glance that it’s a fake.

“It’s easy to make porcelains look older than it is. They only had to rinse it in hydrochloric acid until it turned yellowish and cracked. Then, they’d bury it in the earth and leave it there for three months. That’s how they make porcelains look ancient.”

“Is that the truth?” Flynn turned to the guilty-looking store owner.

Avril said displeasingly, “Sheesh, Flynn! It’s not like you haven’t seen how badass Bonnie is.

How could you doubt her?”

After some thought, Flynn came to the same conclusion. After all, Bonnie was Pan’s apprentice. Moreover, she saw an invaluable ice jadeite with a floating flower pattern in an unassuming piece of rock.

‘What was I thinking, doubting her skills?’

“Huh?” Bonnie stopped when she passed by another store.

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 304

Chapter 304

What’s wrong?” Avril and Flynn asked simultaneously. As far as they were concerned, Bonnie must have seen something exceptionally well for her to react that way. They looked where she pointed and saw nothing more than a dog enjoying its lunch.

Avril and Flynn were stunned.

“Do you want the dog, Bonnie? It’s just a common dog and doesn’t look cute either.” Avril could not understand why Bonnie wanted the dog.

Flynn retorted on Bonnie’s behalf, “What on earth are you thinking? She must like it because she wants to eat it. She doesn't care if it's adorable."

Avril did not know how to respond, while Bonnie thought, "These two aren't making sense at all. What a pair of clowns."

"Excuse me, sir. How much are you willing to sell this bowl for?"

'The bowl?! Reall?!'

The duo blushed in embarrassment.

The store owner was shocked, too. "Are you joking, miss? It's just a dog bowl."

"I'll pay you a hundred grand for it." Bonnie was determined to purchase the bowl.

The store owner's eyes glinted with a hint of cunning when he realized her sincerity. "Miss, although you look young, you have sharp eyes, I'm impressed."

The man dumped the dog food onto the ground and handed the bowl to Bonnie. He said, "It might look worn out, but this is made in the kiln of Emperor Gearoid Walshington's palace. He also owned the Primordial Kiln. Are you familiar with the five great kilns in ancient Arvador?

"There's the Primordial Kiln, Sovereign Kiln, Luminescent Kiln, Kinship Kiln, Cosmic Kiln. Among them, the Primordial Kiln is the most prominent. They say one would much rather own a piece of the Primordial Kiln than a sea of wealth. That should tell you just how invaluable this bowl is.

"Even a hundred grand won't reflect its worth. Here's the deal. I'll sell it to you for half a million dollars. You're so pretty I'm willing to part with it at half its original value."

Avril was flabbergasted, exclaiming, "What the hell?! Has greed clouded your mind? What was that bullshit about a Primordial Klin? Why would you use it as a dog bowl if pe Navaluable? What are you thinking?"

Flynn agreed. "What a load of crap. There's no way you'd find anything made in the Primordial Kiln on the market now. You can't even get anything made in the ancient common kilns nowadays. Do you think we're gullible?"

Hey, watch your mouth. I'm using it as a dog bowl because it'd be ill-advised to let people know I own such a prized possession. It's a perfect example of hiding it in plain sight." The store owner was furious.

Flynn and Avril stared him down. A while later, Bonnie said, "What are the odds? I plan to use it as a dog bowl, too. I'll offer you ten grand. I'll leave if you haggle over the price."

"Say what?! You offered me a hundred grand earlier, miss. Why'd you lower it to ten grand?" The store owner grew worried.

Bonnie refused to waste time on him. She looked at the duo and said, "Come on, let's check out the other stores."

"That's an excellent idea. Let's go to Sacryment. It's bigger and has better goods than this dump. We might even find an invaluable antique ware there." Avril held Bonnie's arm and left.

The store owner realized they were about to leave for real and hastily called out to them, Hey, wait! Fine. Ten grand, it is. You guys have gotten a sweet deal. It's a legacy from ancient Arvador, after all."

Avril rolled her eyes, saying, "Ugh, forget about it, Bonnie. I know you're rich, but consider how you spend your money."

Chapter 305

Bonnie tuned and looked at the store owner. "A thousand dollars."

Listen up, miss. You're-

Bonnie cut him off before the store owner could finish, "It'll be a hundred if you keep going. Have you ever seen a dog bowl worth a thousand dollars? I'll keep moving if you haggle over the price."

He realized Bonnie's patience had worn out and was unhappy about it. Still, a thousand dollars was a lot for a dogbowl. So, he was still earning more than he could have bargained. for. "Fine, fine. That's just my luck. A thousand, it is. Here, take it."

Bonnie paid the store owner, and Avril examined the bowl. The latter could not help but ask, "What do you want this dog bowl for?"

Bonnie was pleased with her purchase, saying, "That bowl was made in Emperor Gearoid Walshington's Primordial Kiln. It'll be worth at least five million dollars if I put it up for auction."

Avril and Flynn's eyes widened with surprise.

"I-Is this actually made in the Primordial Kiln? Are you toying with me?"

"She's right. If this is an invaluable antique bowl from the Primordial Kiln, why would he use it as a dog bowl?"

Bonnie disdainfully looked at the store owner, whose face fell. "He doesn't recognize its value and thought it was just a cheap bowl. He's got no one else to blame but himself."

The store owner was beside himself with rage. "The deal's off. Give it back!"

"We agreed on a price and made the transaction. You can't take it back once you've sold it. That's how it works in the antique ware circle. Moreover, you meant trickle me. If logic prevails, people like you must've duped a lot of money from ignorant buyers. Be grateful I paid you a thousand dollars for it

Bonnie's words cut so deep that the store owner wanted to tear her head off. However, he could not do it in the antique show, not to mention in broad daylight. Still, that did not mean he could do it later, either.

'She'll pay for this soon!'

When the trio left, the store owner made a phone call, "Bruno, gather your men. I need you to teach someone a lesson."

Bonnie and the other two browsed the antique show for a while longer before leaving. Avril asked, "Are we going to Sacryment?"

Bonnie rubbed her belly and said, "I'm a little hungry. Let's grab some food instead. Our flight's on tomorrow afternoon. We can visit Sacryment tomorrow morning."

"All right, let's do that."

"I'm pretty familiar with this area. I'll take you guys to a nice restaurant," Flynn suggested:

"Well, what are we waiting for? Let's go."

The trio walked for a while and turned into an alley. Then, a group of thugs blocked their way. These guys wore Halloween masks, so Bonnie could not recognize them. They were also armed with machetes and bats, closing in on the trio.

"Who are you guys? What are you doing?" Bonnie asked dryly.

"Heh, heh! Do you have to ask? We're muggers, of course. Cut the crap and give up all of your valuable belongings! Otherwise, we'll take more drastic measures!" The lead thug waved his machete at Bonnie.

Bonnie lowered her gaze and pondered before questioning, "Did the dog bowl store owner send you?”

The thugs exchanged glances when they heard that, wondering how she figured it out. It was as if Bonnie could read their minds because the next thing she said was, “Are you guys wondering how I figured it out?”

Avril and Flynn gazed at her, also curious about how she figured it out.

Bonnie analyzed the situation leisurely, “It’s simple. You asked for our valuable belongings. We just left an antique store. If you didn’t know we had the bowl made in the Primordial Kiln, why would you decide to mug us now?”

“Hahaha! You’re bright, indeed, but you’re still a fool. We don’t know any antique store owner.”

“Why are we still wasting our breath with her, chief? Let’s mug them before things get complicated!”

Chapter 306

You’re right. Let’s get them, boys! Once we finish this job, I’ll take you out for a good time!

The other thugs grew excited when they heard what their chief said. They raised their weapons and dived at Bonnie and her friends.

Avril and Flynn paled at that moment, both frozen in terror. The latter exclaimed, “D– Don’t do anything rash! I’m from the Knight family, y’know!”

One of the thugs turned and asked his leader, "Chief, he says he's from the Knight family."

"What a moron. Are you going to believe everything he says? Stop wasting time and mug" them!"

"R-Roger!"

"Bonnie, what should we do? There are so many of them. We can't fight them off," Avril fearfully said while cowering behind her friend.

Bonnie flashed her a faint smile and said, "Don't worry. There might be many of them, but we have more people on our side."

"Huh?" Avril was puzzled. After all, there were only three of them. Worse, Bonnie was the only one who knew how to fight.

On the other hand, Flynn understood Bonnie's implications. Excitement soon replaced hist anxiety.

Chop-chop-chop!

A moment later, they heard the sound of a helicopter above them. Everyone looked up and saw one helicopter in the air. Soon after, a second helicopter flew in, followed by a third, and a fourth. Eventually, ten helicopters gathered.

Everyone except Bonnie and Flynn gawked at the astounding sight as teams of men in army uniforms slid down the helicopter ropes. Before they knew it, the men pointed their rifles and pistols at the thugs surrounding them.

The thugs were so terrified they could almost pass out.

"Ch-chief, what's happening?!"

"I-I could ask you the same thing!"

There were more than enough men to deal with a riot in an entire city. It looked like the army men were busting an International crime organization, even though the small-time thugs were Just mugging a young lady.

Take them to the briggs!" The squad leader barked.

"Sir, yes, sir!"

His team moved in quickly and subdued the thugs before dragging them away. Soon after, silence hung over the alley, and the trio were the only ones remaining.

Avril's jaw dropped when the helicopters arrived until now. Finally, she stammered, "Wh- what on earth just happened? Why would a whole squad of army men appear to seize those thugs?"

Flynn would have liked to tell her what happened. However, he could say nothing because he needed to keep Bonnie's identity a secret. The big commotion reminded him of the days he went against Bonnie. Flynn understood how shocked and helpless the thugs must have felt.

A sense of joy arose in his chest. Finally, he was not the only one who had suffered a similar traumatic experience.

Bonnie said leisurely, "Maybe the thugs committed serious wicked crimes in the past."

Flynn could not help but grumble internally, 'Exactly! Those thugs tried to mug the leading researcher of Arvador! If things go wrong, they might even endanger her life.

'They'll soon learn what atrocious crime they had just committed. I'm sure they'll regret it very much because they're about to rot in prison for the rest of their lives. Fortunately, Grandpa saved Bonnie's life once.

'Otherwise, I would've suffered the same fate—possibly worse than these thugs back when I crossed her."

Meanwhile, the store owner awaited the good news from his group of thugs. However, instead of seeing his henchmen, Jim appeared with a team of policemen.

"What can I do for you, officers?" The store owner thought Jim looked familiar, but the former could not tell why.

Chapter 307

Jim said coldly, “We did some digging around and found you responsible for the mugging of Ms. Bonita,

The store owner was so shocked that he stammered, “Wh–what? M–Ms. Bonita?”

Finally, he recognized the man before him, “A–Are you the Master Jim?!”

‘This man is Ms. Bonita’s bodyguard! No wonder why I thought he looked familiar. I’ve seen Jim on TV before!’

“Th–this must be a misunderstanding. I don’t even know what Ms. Bonita looks like. If that’s the case, I couldn’t have ordered my men to mug-”

Realization set in as he put two and two together. He froze as Bonnie’s face appeared in his mind..

‘If memory serves me right, the girl and guy beside that girl called her Bonnie. Come on, is this a joke?! Was that girl the famous Ms. Bonita?’

“How could you not know what she looks like? She bought a bowl made from the Primordial Kiln from you. I saw it myself,” Jim retorted.

The store owner slumped to the floor, pale as cold sweat rolled down his cheeks.

‘My life is over.’

Bonnie and the gang took a flight back to Pyralis on Sunday afternoon.

As a chatterbox, Flynn kept talking to Bonnie all flight long. Worse, even Avril chattered nonstop, “This is unexpected, but the store owner who tried to dupe us was captured for crossing Ms. Bonita.”

Bonnie continued to read a medical magazine and did not respond to Avril. The latter continued, “I guess he had it coming. Still, we owe one to Ms. Bonita. If it weren’t for her, those thugs would’ve gotten what they wanted last night.”

Flynn looked at Avril as if looking at a simpleton. He thought, “Come on, Ms. Bonita is right beside you. Otherwise, why would the army appear to arrest those thugs?”

When the plane landed in Pyralis, Bonnie saw Ivor waiting from afar. He strode toward her and glared at Flynn, saying, “She’s my fiancée. Keep your distance.

Uh..

Flynn knew Ivor was Jealous of him, so he hastily explained, “I have nothing but admiration and respect for Bonnie. I don’t have any funny ideas about her, Ivor. If I do, may the heavens strike me with thunder.”

“Hmm, well said.” Ivor nodded approvingly.

Flynn was surprised and dazed. After all, he had never received a compliment from his cousin until now. Although he was not thrilled about it, it felt strange.

“Let’s go.” Ivor held Bonnie’s hand and pulled her away. His smile grew wider when he realized she did not shake him off. He added, “We’ll have dinner at my place. I told the kitchen staff to make your favorite dishes for you.

“I even picked your favorite bottle of wine from the cellar. That reminds me, I also told Alfred to pick up some desserts from Desert Oasis.”

Bonnie felt pleasantly surprised. After hearing what he had prepared for her, she was unsure how to turn down his offer. More importantly, it would be unacceptable for her to waste the wine, dishes, and desserts.

“All right, I’ll go with you.”

“Once we finish dinner, we'll visit Grandma. I made an appointment with Dr. Fanelli several days ago. He'll be there tonight. Have you met him before? It doesn't matter. Tonight's a wonderful opportunity for you to meet him."

Bonnie stopped when she heard that. Her eyes widened in shock.

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 308

Chapter 308

Bonnie had received a text from Ivor before she went to Jocrovania. He stated that he had made an appointment for her to treat his grandmother. Bonnie was so focused on antique gemstones for the past few days that the appointment slipped her mind.

"Um, I won't be going to the hospital tonight."

Ivor asked in puzzlement, "Why not? I wanted to introduce you to Dr. Fanelli a while ago, but you turned it down because you had something to attend to. If I remember correctly, you felt bad for missing the chance to meet him. What's stopping you this time?"

Bonnie felt stumped. She had said that last time because she needed to dispel Ivor's suspicions about her. She answered, "Nothing special. It's just that it was a long flight from Jocrovania, and I'm exhausted. I want to sleep as early as possible after dinner.

"Also, it'll take longer than a few sessions to treat your Grandma's osteoarthritis. I'll meet Dr. Fanelli another time."

"Sure thing. You should sleep earlier if you're tired." Ivor squinted at her, subtly scanning her. He knew how strong she was and that a trip to Jocrovania would not have drained her so much. Bonnie would not feel tired even if Ivor took her on a journey around the world.

He was sure she was trying to keep something from him.

After dinner, Ivor visited his grandmother alone. He told her to take a good rest before leaving. He had also told Floyd to watch over Bonnie at home.

Bonnie glanced at Floyd, standing guard by her door. She concluded that Ivor was indeed suspicious of her. She said, "Go and rest, Floyd. I'm going to bed now."

"I'm okay, Ms. Bonnie. You should get some sleep. I'll continue to guard your room."

"I'm not used to having someone standing by the door. I can't sleep if you don't leave. If you keep standing here, I might as well return to Lenfield Resort."

"Well, I—" Floyd was stumped. "Let me call Mr. Ivor."

"Suit yourself." Bonnie closed the door and returned to her room.

If Ivor had not insisted that she spend the night here, she would have returned to Lenfield Resort. That way, Floyd would not have guarded the door and blocked her exit. Even so, she could not blame Ivor entirely. After all, Bonnie had a soft spot for him.

Even so, she just could not stand it when Ivor Insisted on her staying.

There was a reason Bonnie stayed. At least she would know Floyd was around to monitor

If she had returned to Lenfield Resort, he would have stalked her without her knowledge.

Bonnie played some music on her phone and raised the volume. She then locked the door and slid open the window before leaping out.

In the hospital, Ivor stared at Bonnie, who disguised herself as Dr. Fanelli. The former could not explain his thoughts. Although the doctor looked nothing like Bonnie, there was something familiar about the doctor's eyes.

"What took you so long, Dr. Fanelli?"

"I apologize, but the traffic is terrible tonight." Bonnie had thought of that excuse before coming.

“There’s no need to apologize, Doc. My grandma’s waiting for you in there. Please begin the treatment.” Ivor gestured for her to enter.

“Of course.” Bonnie entered and greeted Winnie before treating her.

Meanwhile, Ivor gazed at the doctor and noticed the piercing in the doctor’s ears. The former lowered his gaze and asked in puzzlement, “Why do you have an ear piercing, Doc?”

Bonnie’s heart sank, but she seemed unfazed on the outside. She said, “You’re pretty conservative, Mr. Ivor. We’re not living in ancient times. It’s normal for guys to have a piercing or two these days.”

Ivor kept his suspicions in check while monitoring the doctor’s expression. He said, “Yeah, it’s quite common for a guy to have a piercing, but not two.”

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 309

Chapter 309

Oh, Bonnie responded briefly and did not bother to explain herself.

That’s enough, Ivor. Why are you hounding Dr. Fanelli with these mundane questions? Mind how you carry yourself.” Winnie did not understand why her grandson was uncharacteristically drilling the doctor’s private life.

There’s something off about him today.”

“Hmm, you have a point, Grandma.” With that, he stopped questioning the doctor. He did not say a word until Bonnie finished the treatment, and he brought her out of the ward.

Ivor said, "I have a friend whose grandfather's health is deteriorating. None of the prominent doctors he hired knew where to begin. He asked me for a favor. Will you check on his grandfather for me?"

Bonnie looked at him and said, "If that's the case, why didn't your friend attend the auction for the miracle doctor's service?"

Ivor explained, "Where do I even begin? My friend's grandfather is pretty stubborn. He feels bad that his family worked so hard to find countless doctors for his condition. It has been over a decade, but they still aren't close to finding him a cure..

"So, he's beginning to think there's no cure for his condition. He thinks his family is just wasting their time and money for him. That's why he told them to give up on him."

Bonnie was confused, asking, "So, why is your friend looking for a doctor for his grandfather now?"

Ivor's brows furrowed as he stared at her. "He's so ill that he's bedridden. He practically has one foot in a grave. He won't last until New Year if the family doesn't do anything now. I know you have protocols for how you do things, Doc. I'm asking you to do me a favor this time. I'll owe you one afterward and will do everything I can to repay you."

Bonnie would have helped him even if he did not mention the latter part. After all, Ivor had helped her numerous times, even though she did not need his help.

"No problem."

Ivor's eyes widened in surprise. He did not expect to succeed so quickly. He had even devised several ideas to convince the doctor if he turned him down.

Thanks, Doo. No words could describe Ivor's gratefulness besides this brief response

When can I drop by your friend's place?" She asked.

It's your call."

After some thought, she said, "We'll do it tomorrow night."

Since she needed to treat Harold in the Shepards' house tomorrow afternoon, she could finish everything in one day.

The following day, Bonnie visited the Shepards' house to treat Harold. A while later, Hadwin and his mother arrived. Demetria told her son, "I heard the miracle doctor will treat Harold this afternoon. We must establish a good relationship with the doctor."

"You can count on me, Mom. I came prepared." Hadwin waved the expensive gifts he had brought. Rhodes spent plenty of money on these gifts to make a good impression on the miracle doctor.

"Come on, let's head in."

"Okay."

When Trina heard Hadwin and Demetria had arrived, she paled and hastened over to stop.

them. "Hi, Hadwin and Demetria. What brings you here?"

"We heard that the miracle doctor is here. We prepared some gifts for them." Hadwin could not wait to meet the doctor.

However, Trina was worried, thinking 'I knew they'd come to meet the miracle doctor! I won't let that happen. I must stop them no matter what. They must never know who the miracle doctor really is!"

"Say, where did you hear that from?"

"Are you telling me the doctor isn't here?" Demetria was startled, asking, "How can that be?"

You must've misheard. The miracle doctor Isn't here today, I swear."

Demetria looked at Trina suspiciously. The former was confident she had gotten the right news. "If the doctor isn't here today, when will they drop by?"

"~~I~~I'm not sure about that."

"Is that so?" Demetria smiled and added, "That's okay. Since we're here, we might as well stick around. It's almost lunchtime, so why don't we join you?"

"Um..." Trina grew worried again.

Demetria knew something seemed unusual about her future daughter-in-law. Trina was undoubtedly hiding something. If not, she would not behave so strangely.

Demetria questioned, "What's wrong? Is this how your family treats their guests? Don't be cheapskates and refuse to cook a meal for us."

"No, no, that's not it. It's just-"

"Just what? I've had enough of you. If the doctor isn't around, I'll just talk to your mom," Demetria said as she walked past Trina.

The latter realized her future mother-in-law was about to enter the house and tried to block her. However, Hadwin stopped Trina and said, "What's wrong, Trina? Why do I feel you don't want us to go inside? Are you hiding something?"

He also noticed something amiss with Trina.

"That's preposterous. What do I have to hide?"

"All right, I believe you. Come on, let's go inside together." Hadwin chased after his mother.

I

Meanwhile, cold sweat covered Trina's forehead.

'Oh, no! What do I do now?'

When Demetria and Hadwin reached the living room, no one was around to greet them.

The latter asked, "Where is everyone?"

Demetria gazed upstairs at Harold's room and said, "If my assumptions are correct, the doctor should be treating Harold now. The whole family should be in his room."

thought Trina said the doctor isn't here today.

After some thought, Demetria responded, "Trina's trying to hide something from us."

What do you think she's trying to hide?"

guess we'll find out."

When Trina entered the living room, the mother and son were upstairs. They opened Harold's room door, and Hadwin's eyes widened in disbelief. "How is that possible?! Wait, what?"

At that moment, Bonnie was administering acupuncture to Harold while the rest of the Shepards huddled around his bed. Suddenly, Hadwin remembered calling off his engagement to Bonnie. He also remembered the countless times he looked down on her.

Demetria covered her mouth and gasped, exclaiming, "I-I can't believe Bonnie's the world-renowned miracle doctor! That's impossible!"

Simultaneously, the older woman understood why Trina tried to stop her and her son from entering. The latter did not want them to learn about Bonnie's identity as the miracle doctor. Trina feared Hadwin would ditch her and choose to marry Bonnie instead.

Gresham and Vera also felt concerned when they saw the mother and son's expressions. The former duo felt uneasy for Trina.

When Bonnie finished the treatment, she stood up and prepared to leave. However, Hadwin stood before her and questioned, "Hold it, Bonnie! Are you really the miracle doctor?"

Bonnie looked at him and responded casually, “What do you think?”

“Y–You are the miracle doctor! Why didn’t you tell me earlier ?!” Hadwin was immense regret.

Chapter 311

Bonnie looked at the pale Trina standing at the door. The former then turned to Hadwin and giggled, saying, “You wouldn’t have cheated on me with Trina if I told you. That way, you could’ve bragged about marrying the miracle doctor. That’s how it works, right?”

Hadwin was stunned because Bonnie’s assumption was right. She had seen through him and revealed his true intentions to everyone.

Meanwhile, Trina gripped her dress as she gritted her teeth.

Demetria stepped forward and revealed a loving smile at Bonnie. The former said, “It was all a big misunderstanding. He called off the engagement because we thought you were al good–for–nothing. The fact is that you and Hadwin are a match made in heaven.

“Also, you were engaged to Hadwin first. Trina is nothing more than an accident. I’ll tell my son to announce that he’s canceling his engagement with Trina. Then, we’ll pick another date for your engagement party with Hadwin.”

“Another engagement party?” Bonnie said sarcastically.

“If you think it’s redundant, we’ll arrange a wedding ceremony instead.” Demetria knew

Bonnie and her son should get married immediately.

Once they revealed Bonnie’s true identity, plenty of contenders would ask for her hand in marriage. The Rhodes would have no chance to get her then. Demetria wanted to seal the deal as soon as possible.

She continued, “Perhaps we could do it next Saturday. Although it seems rushed, we’ll reserve the most upscale hotel and get you a hand-tailored wedding dress. You won’t have to worry about a thing.”

Trina was furious, her eyes red as she looked at her parents.

Vera was just as mad, saying, “How can you do this, Demetria?! Trina and Hadwin are engaged, and my daughter gave him her virginity. Y–You-”

Demetria said blankly, “Don’t blame me. I wouldn’t have discovered Bonnie’s real identity if I hadn’t come here today. Put yourself in my shoes, Vera. Would you have chosen Bonnie or Trina as your daughter-in-law? I’m sure anyone would choose Bonnie.”

Vera countered, “You say that, but we disowned Bonnie much earlier. She has nothing to do with my family. Hadwin was the one who proposed to Trina. Also, Bonnie isn’t my biological daughter, Trina is.”

She’s right, Gresham took his wife’s side, adding, “Bonnie is no longer one of us. That means her engagement with Hadwin was irrelevant.”

After some thought, Demetria said, “You have a point.

Trina and her parents sighed in relief. However, they did not expect Demetria to approach

Bonnie and say, “Now that you’re no longer a member of their family, I don’t have to ask for their permission or opinions. Instead, I’ll just ask you. How about marrying Hadwin next Saturday?”

Vera said hastily, “What do you mean by that, Demetria?”

Demetria casually glanced at her and said, “You guys clarified that seconds ago. You’re no longer related to Bonnie, meaning she gets to make her own decisions. She can decide- who to marry. Of course, I’ll ask her about it.”

“Listen-” Vera choked on her words while her husband turned red with rage.

Suddenly, Bonnie walked toward the door, almost leaving.

Demetria noticed it and chased after her. “Where do you think you’re going, Bonnie?! I need your answer.”

However, Bonnie ignored her and continued walking despite how hysterical Demetria seemed.

“Bonnie!” Demetria yelled again, but it was useless. She knew Bonnie would not stop, so she had to race after her. Ultimately, she managed to stand in Bonnie’s way. “I’m talking to you, young lady. What’s the hurry?”

Bonnie grinned and said sarcastically, “Who the hell do you think you are? What made you think you could boss me around? I don’t have to marry your son just because you said so. Do everyone a favor and tighten that loose screw in your head.”

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 312

Chapter 312

Although Demetria was upset, she suppressed her anger because of Bonnie's identity as the miracle doctor. The former forced a smile and said, "I know you're unhappy with how we treated you in the past. I'm also aware of your temper.

"Even so, the universe must've brought you and my son together for a reason. It'd be a shame to miss out on a match made in heaven. We knew nothing about your identity before today. Ugh, I'm getting nowhere with this. How about I apologize to you, and we'll start over?"

"Hmph," Bonnie smirked.

Demetria glanced at her son. "Um, how about Hadwin apologize to you as well?"

Hadwin knew what his mother was trying to do and walked over. "I'm sorry, Bonnie. I didn't know any better. I thought you were a good-for-nothing when you were the world-renowned miracle doctor instead.

"I swear to shower you with nothing but love and respect once we're married. I'll make up for my past mistakes. It's a promise-

Bonnie left before he could finish.

'Damn it!' Hadwin cursed internally. He gritted his teeth and chased after her to bug her.

However, Bonnie made a phone call, "Hello, is this the police department? I have a stalker who won't leave me alone."

Hadwin heard her words and froze, asking, "Are you serious, Bonnie?!"

"Mhm, I'll give you my location right away."

“Bonnie!” Hadwin roared.

“Do

you hear how loud and scary he is? Although I’m talking to you fine officers, it doesn’t deter him. Bring as many officers as you can. You must put him behind bars, officer.”

Hadwin was about to explode. Ultimately, he could do nothing but watch as Bonnie left. Suddenly, a dozen police cars showed up and surrounded him. Not only that, the officers were from a SWAT team.

“Are you the thug who has been harassing a young lady earlier?”

Hadwin froze.

Firstly, it’s a misunderstanding. Secondly, do they need such a big team even if I did harass a young lady?! If I didn’t know any better, I would’ve thought I harassed some royalty or something.”

a

“Th that’s not true, officer! It’s just understanding. Bonnie and I know each other.

She’s just-

The SWAT team’s expressions turned grave when they heard Bonnie’s name. The chief exclaimed, “How dare you! Take him away, men!”

Two officers grabbed Hadwin from both sides and dragged him to the police car. Demetria was shocked but quickly regained her senses and explained, “Officer, you must’ve misunderstood something! My son didn’t harass Bonnie, I swear!”

“We’ll get to the bottom of it soon enough, ma’am. Please don’t get in our way.”

Demetria could just cry as she hastily pulled out her phone and called her husband, “Draco, the police arrested Hadwin!”

Draco’s brows furrowed. “What happened?”

“It’s all Bonnie’s fault!” Demetria told her husband everything that had just happened. Simultaneously, Jim called Bonnie.

Chapter 313

Before Jim could say anything, Bonnie asked, “Did you ask a SWAT team to arrest Hadwin?”

“He had it coming.”

She helplessly shook her head. As expected, she had only called the police department and wondered why they sent a SWAT team instead. It looked like they came to arrest an International fugitive instead of just Hadwin.

Meanwhile, Demetria ran to Bonnie and scolded, “You bitch! Hadwin was just trying to win you over. How dare you call the cops on him. I finally know why your family refused to let you rejoin them even if you are the miracle doctor.

“You’re such a vicious woman who brings disaster wherever she goes. You made a false report against my son!”

Bonnie sneered at Demetria as if the latter was the biggest moron she had ever met, saying, “I knew you had a screw loose. The cops didn’t just arrest your son because he harassed me. No SWAT team has ever arrested anyone for something so small.

“What are you talking about?”

“Jeez, your stupidity astounds me, Demetria. I thought it was obvious. A SWAT team just arrested your son, not just the cops. It isn’t about me. Your son must’ve broken the law in a far more sinister way.

“Maybe he blew up an airport and murdered several victims. I don’t know what he did, but it must be horrible. He’s probably a lost cause by now.”

“I—I can’t believe you called my son a lost cause. How dare you make such a claim?!” Demetria roared. She was mindful that Bonnie might call the cops on her, too. Otherwise, she would have pounced on the young lady.

Bonnie smirked, saying, “Because I saw a SWAT team take him away, that’s why. Fine, let’s give Hadwin the benefit of the doubt. Why do you think the cops sent a SWAT team?”

“Well, I...” Demetria was so angry that she could barely respond.

“Hmph,” Bonnie scoffed and ignored the older lady before turning to leave.

Meanwhile, Trina sighed in relief when she saw Bonnie leave. After all, the Rhodes could no longer call off her engagement with Hadwin.

Bonnie reached the Days’ house around four in the afternoon. Her cab had just pulled over When she saw Ivor’s Maybach approaching the entrance. He said, “What a coincidence.

Yeah.” Their conversation sounded a little uneasy and forced.

The Day family is waiting for us inside. Let’s go, Doc.”

“Sure.”

The Days huddled around Bonnie when she entered the living room, welcoming her to their place. The guy in the lead sported dashing features.

Ivor said, “He’s the friend I mentioned before. Meet Sebastian Day.”

“Hello there,” Bonnie greeted him politely.

On the other hand, Sebastian was quite surprised to see her. “I—Is he the miracle doctor?”

“Mhm, he’s Dr. Fanelli,” Ivor responded.

“He’s so young, though! What a pleasant surprise. If I may, Doc, how old are you?” Sebastian could not help but ask.

“I’m twenty,” She answered truthfully.

Not only was Sebastian stunned, but Ivor was also dumbfounded.

'I asked Dr. Fanelli about his private life, but I never considered asking his age. Hmm, perhaps he just looks young. I'm sure he's much older than twenty. After all, everyone needs time to accumulate their experience in the medical field.'

"It's incredible that you possess extraordinary medical knowledge at such a young age! I can see why they call you the miracle doctor!" Sebastian was not shy about showering the doctor with high praise.

At that moment, a young lady approached and looked at Bonnie sparkingly. The former asked, "Why didn't you introduce him to me too, Ivor?"

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 314

Chapter 314

Ivor saw the young lady looking at him with puppy-dog eyes, knowing what was on her mind. He said, "Doctor, meet Jordynn Day. She's Sebastian's younger sister."

"Oh, hello." Bonnie extended her hand.

Jordynn blushed and shook the doctor's hand, stammering, "G-Greetings, Doctor Fanelli."

Ivor and Sebastian exchanged glances, both knowing Jordynn's intentions. They thought it would be beneficial if the doctor and Jordynn got together.

Sebastian looked at Bonnie and said, "My grandpa's in this room, Dr. Fanelli. He's not feeling too well and can't come downstairs to welcome you. I'll have to trouble you to go, upstairs to check on him."

"That's okay. I'll just head upstairs." Bonnie climbed the stairs and entered the room.

Jordynn ran to the side of the bed and took her brother's arms. She would occasionally steal glances at Bonnie and blush. The former said, "Grandpa, this is Dr. Fanelli. He's the miracle doctor we told you about.”

Gibson was older and more experienced than everyone in the room. It did not take him long to notice his granddaughter’s fondness for the doctor.

He glanced at the doctor and thought he was good-looking and sophisticated. Indeed, the older man thought the doctor was more handsome than an actor. No wonder the usually picky Jordynn had a crush on “Bonnie.”

“You look young and accomplished, Dr. Fanelli.”

“You’re too kind, Mr. Gibson,” Bonnie responded lightly. She then went to the side of the bed to check his pulse.

The older man’s fondness for Bonnie grew. After all, she took compliments without letting her ego inflate. Moreover, she looked unfazed by his praise.

‘That’s the mark of an incredible man in the making. It’d be wonderful if Dr. Fanelli ends up marrying my granddaughter.”

“Your condition isn’t too severe, Mr. Gibson. You’ve just been overworking and neglecting your health for too long. Mr. Ivor said your symptoms have worsened. Did you take anything to reinvigorate yourself, such as ginseng or ganoderma?” Bonnie guessed.

Jordyng gave her a thumbs-up and said, “You’re good at this! You took less than a minute to figure that out!”

Bonnie noticed something unnerving about the way Jordynn looked at her. Nonetheless the former said, “As I said, you’ve neglected your health for too long, Mr. Gibson. Your body can’t take something too strong, even if the supplement was meant to reinvigorate you.” Jordynn’s eyes sparkled whenever she looked at Bonnie. The former was oblivious that she was edging closer to the doctor, asking, “What do we do? Is there a way to cure Grandpa?” “There’s a cure, but your grandpa will have-” Before she could finish, Jordynn grabbed Bonnie’s hands and said gleefully, “Really?! That’s all that matters, Dr. Fanelli. I’ll do anything you say!”

Bonnie looked at Jordynn’s hands and then at her reddened face.

‘Uh, countless men have confessed their love to me. I’m numb to it now, but this is the first time a girl has fallen in love with me.”

Bonnie withdrew her hands and said, "I don't have any special terms. You just have to pay for the treatment, as usual."

Jordynn was disappointed when she heard that.

"Don't worry, Dr. Fanelli. We'll pay you for the treatment." Sebastian pulled his sister aside. and whispered, "Pull yourself together, Jordynn. You're scaring the doctor."

Jordynn retorted, "Dr. Fanelli's not as timid as you think. Also, we're all adults here. What's there to be worried about?"

Sebastian palmed his forehead, not knowing how to respond.

Then, Gibson looked at Bonnie and asked, "Do you have a girlfriend, Dr. Fanelli?"

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 315

Chapter 315

At that moment, everyone gazed at Gibson and Bonnie.

Thump, thump! Thump, thump!

Jordynn's heart pounded while she held her chest.

Bonnie knew what the older man meant by asking such a question, but she answered truthfully, "Not at the moment, Mr. Gibson."

"That's wonderful!" Gibson laughed heartily and pulled Jordynn over. "My granddaughter's single, too. How about I set you two up?"

Bonnie's eye twitched, knowing this would happen. Meanwhile, Jordynn was so embarrassed that she did not know what to do.

The room fell silent before Ivor said, "Sebastian's sister is certainly eye-catching, Doc. Also, she's the same age as you. She's never had a boyfriend in her life. Still, don't get me wrong. It's not for the lack of choices.

"Instead, Jordynn is extremely picky about men. I think you two would be good together. Perhaps you should give it a shot?"

Bonnie looked at Ivor inexplicably, while the latter had a strange feeling in his gut. However, he did not know what it was.

Everyone held their breaths, waiting for the doctor's answer. Finally, she said, "I'm sorry, but my mom wants me to focus on my studies and forbids me from getting into a relationship."

Jordynn gasped, asking, "You're still studying?!"

"Is that surprising? After all, I'm only twenty. It makes sense that I'm still studying," she shrugged.

Bonnie

Everyone returned to their senses when they heard that. Perhaps they saw Bonnie as noble and graceful because she was a miracle doctor. That was why it never occurred to them that a miracle doctor also had to attend college.

"Where do you study, Doc? You're probably in college now, right?" Ivor asked.

"Pyralis University," Bonnie answered.

What are the odds? Bonnie studies there, too.

What a coincidence! I'm studying at the same University. Which year are you in? If you're twenty, you should be in your junior year, like me! Why haven't I seen you before?" Jordynn knew there was no one named Fanelli in her university.

Otherwise, the doctor would be the most handsome man on campus.

"Um... Bonnie never expected Jordynn to be studying at the same university. "I'm a freshman."

“Freshman? How’s that possible with your age?”

Gibson lectured Jordynn before she could say anything else, “Mind your words, Jordynn.” How can you compare yourself with Dr. Fanelli? He works and studies at the same time. He’s also the miracle doctor for crying out loud.

“He’s incredible for holding down a place in the university while doing all that. How can you mock him for being a freshman

“I—I wasn’t mocking him, Grandpa! I—I was just curious,” Jordynn explained. She feared Bonnie would misunderstand her and turned to clarify, “Please don’t misunderstand, Dr.

Fanelli! I didn’t mean anything by it.

“I—I was just curious, that’s all.” She was even more nervous now. After all, she could have. pissed Bonnie off and caused her to leave.

However, with a light smile, Bonnie said, “Don’t worry about it.”

Jordynn sighed, saying, “That’s a relief. I was worried you’d get mad and start ignoring me.”

Sebastian said despite himself, “Jeez, you’ve always been fearless and unruly. Are you seriously freaking out because you said something out of line, or are you just being submissive because you found your prince charming?”

Chapter 316

Stop your nonsense, Sebastian! Don’t make me give you the silent treatment.” Jordynn blushed.

“Um, what’s your full name, Dr. Fanelli?”

Bonnie tweaked her first name a little, saying, “Fanelli Bonaldi.”

“Bonaldi?” Ivor asked.

Her lips twitched a little. After a couple of seconds, she said, “Yeah. Bonaldi.”

Ivor resumed his poker face when he heard that.

Sebastian mocked him, “Ged told me how obsessed you are over Bonnie. Now, I know he wasn’t exaggerating. Dr. Fanelli’s last name sounds slightly like hers, yet you’re already bent out of shape.”

Jordynn knew a thing or two about Bonnie too. The former asked, “Do you love this Bonnie person that much, Ivor? Halle and Rowena told me she did some unspeakable things to you. That must be how she ensnared you. She’s bad news.

“Also, her family disowned her. She’s a good-for-nothing, but I’ll let it slide. What matters most is her character. She’s a meanie and a compulsive liar. She has no respect for her parents and always picks on her sister. Even her ex-fiance couldn’t stand her and called off their engagement.”

When Jordynn finished speaking, she felt a menacing glare burning a hole in her. She raised her gaze and saw Ivor gazing at her coldly. He said, “Never believe hearsay, Jordynn. You’ve never met her, let alone know her. How can you be an expert on her character?”

Sebastian knew Ivor was furious. The former lectured his sister, “I told you to mind your mouth, Jordynn. As he said, you don’t have the right to say such things about Bonnie before meeting and getting to know her.”

Jordynn felt slightly aggrieved.

‘Who the heck is this Bonnie person? Her character has nothing to do with me. I was just looking out for Ivor. Sheesh, I’m doing this out of the kindness of my heart, but all I got was trouble and lectures.

Finel Since they claim I can't talk about her because I haven't met her, I'll look her up on Campus tomorrow and see just how rude and despicable she is for myself.

The following day, Bonnie went to one of the lecture halls on campus. Suddenly, one of her fellow college students yelled, "Bonnie, a junior student is looking for you!"

Bonnie glanced at the door, wondering, 'A junior student? Is it Trina?'

She was stunned when she saw it was Jordynn.

'What is she doing here, and what does she want with me? Did she find out I'm the miracle doctor?'

Immediately after, Bonnie decided that was not the case.

'That's probably not it. Dr. Fanelli is the miracle doctor whose reputation reaches all of Pyralis and even Arvandor. On the other hand, I'm just an ordinary girl that her family has disowned. No one would think we're the same person.'

Jordynn was shocked when she saw Bonnie's face, which resembled Fanelli's quite a bit. Jordynn approached and asked, "Are you Bonnie?"

"In the flesh."

Jordynn revealed a cheque and said, "Here's a three million dollar cheque. It's yours if you agree to leave Ivor alone."

Chapter 317

Bonnie raised her brows, saying, “No thanks. Last week, I visited the Antique Jade Appreciation Conference in Jocrovania and appraised a couple of ice jadeites with floating flower patterns. They’re worth tens of millions.”

“What? That’s such a lousy bluff.” Jordynn did not believe Bonnie at all.

The latter lazily responded, “Feel free to send your men to Jocrovania to investigate. Hey, you can even ask people in the antique gemstone circle. They’ll tell you the truth.”

Jordynn glared at her but could not find even a hint of a lie. She criticized, “Hmph, what’s so special about that? You were just lucky!”

Bonnie added, “After that, I browned an antique show and spent a grand purchasing a bowl made in Emperor Gearold Walshington’s Primordial Kiln.”

Jordynn’s jaw dropped, not knowing how to respond for a moment.

Suddenly, Bonnie laughed and said, “Bingo! You’re right that I got lucky. So, I don’t need your money.”

Jordynn lowered her head and looked at the cheque she held, saying, “You got rich overnight, and that’s nothing worth boasting about. It’s just tens of millions of dollars. That means nothing to truly wealthy people like me.”

Bonnie feigned surprise. “Oh, you don’t think tens of millions is worth much?”

“Of course not!” Jording raised her head high.

“Wow. Since that’s the case, I don’t want three million dollars. Instead, give me thirty billion, and I’ll promise to leave Ivor alone,” Bonnie said matter-of-factly.

Jordyn was so furious that she could breathe fire. “Thirty billion?! We’re not talking about Monopoly money, you know. Do you have that much money yourself? You must have a screw loose.”

Bonnie nodded solemnly. “It’s just thirty billion dollars. It means nothing to wealthy people like me.”

Jordyn knew Bonnie was using her own words against her. “Fine, let’s talk nice. What do I have to do to get you away from Ivor?”

Bonnie texted Ivor immediately, asking, “What do I have to do—to get you away from me?”

He replied almost instantaneously, “Over my dead body.”

Then, Bonnie showed his reply to Jordyn and groaned, “You see. Not even I can do anything to get away from Ivor.”

The school bell rang at that moment, signifying the start of classes.

Classes are starting. You should probably return to your lecture hall,” Bonnie told Jordyn. However, she did not speak in an overly harsh and sarcastic tone. She felt Jordyn differed from Halle and Rowena.

After all, Jordyn genuinely cared about Ivor and thought Bonnie would harm him. That was why the former used unconventional means to get Bonnie away from Ivor.

Jordyn said through gritted teeth, “Damn you, Bonnie. I’ll figure out a way to get you to leave Ivor alone. I never quit, either. When I put my mind to something, I’ll finish it. I’ll keep trying.”

Bonnie thought, “What a headache. Dealing with her will be tricky.”

Bonnie had a physical education class in the afternoon. So, Jordyn stole into Bonnie’s lecture hall and ruffled through her bag and seat. She wanted to find something to prove. Bonnie was after Ivor’s wealth.

However, Jordyn found nothing but snacks in Bonnie’s seat. It looked like the former had to go through Bonnie’s bag.

Zip!

Jordynn unzipped the bag and poured everything on the table, noticing a notebook and file.

'I wonder what's in this notebook. Is Bonnie looking at smut?'

Jordynn was stunned when she flipped through the book, muttering, "Is this a medical journal?"

'I thought Bonnie was a computer science student. Why would she have a medical journal in her bag?'

After carefully reading the material, Jordynn realized its contents were obscure and convoluted. What surprised her most were the personal remarks and insights on every Impossible These personal remarks and Insights denote a deep knowledge of adioal held, How could someone like Bonnie write them down?"

Jordynn compared the handwriting of the remarks with the name written on the cover of the medical journal. "The handwriting matches. Did Bonnie seriously write these herself?"

Her head was full of suspicion and disbelief as she set aside the medical journal and picked up the blue file.

"Now, let's see what this is."

"Latest Nanomaterial Augmentation Research?" she read it aloud and then muttered,

What the heck?"

She was dazed and astounded as her hands began to tremble. She gulped and opened the file, unsure of what she would find. At that moment, she heard footsteps outside the lecture hall.

“Shit! Someone’s coming!”

Jordynn looked left and right, then decided to duck behind the podium. The footsteps drew closer, and someone entered the lecture hall. The person said to herself, “I think that’s Bonnie’s seat.”

‘Huh, why does that voice sound so familiar?’ Jordynn had a good idea who it was. She poked her head out and checked, thinking, ‘It’s Trina! What’s she doing here? She mentioned Bonnie’s name, too.’” in continued to spy on Trina as the latter found a necklace in another student’s bag and stuffed it into Bonnie’s.

Jordynn

Jordynn realized Trina was trying to set Bonnie up.

‘Jeez, I never thought Trina would do something like that. She always looks so innocent and harmless. Wait a minute. I heard rumors that Bonnie loves picking on Trina. It seems I was a fool to believe that. Those rumors are unfounded.’”

Jordynn thought perhaps that was a good reason why Ivor loved Bonnie so much.

However, it was all just circumstantial evidence, and Jordynn wanted to keep monitoring.

Bonnie to find out the truth.

Once the physical education class ended, Bonnie and her classmates returned to the lecture hall, One of the classmates, Rene, nervously ruffled through her bag, forehead covered in sweat.

Huh? Where is it? I remember keeping my necklace in my bag before PE. Where’d it go?”

Natalee, the classmate beside her, said, “Did you put it in your pocket instead?”

“No, my grandma gave it to me as a gift for getting into this university. It’s an expensive necklace, too.”

“Keep searching. Maybe you left it somewhere on you and forgot about it.”

Rene turned out all her pockets, but the necklace wasn’t there. She grew so worried that she was on the verge of tears. “Oh, man! That necklace costs nearly ten grand. My life is over if my family finds out I lost it.”

Natalee noticed the other students leaving and exclaimed, “Hey, guys! Rene misplaced her necklace. Someone in this hall must’ve stolen it. Still, I’m not accusing anyone. I’m just saying there’s a thief among us.”

Rene sobbed, “I—I’m sorry, everyone. Please stay here for a while. My necklace means the world to me. I can’t afford to lose it.”

The class representative said, “If anyone finds a necklace on the ground, please return it to Rene immediately.”

Chapter 319

One of the students clicked her tongue and said, “What do you mean if we find it on the ground? Whoever stole it, just come forth and admit it.”

Soon after, she opened her bag and showed it to everyone, saying, “I’ll start. See? I didn’t steal it.”

Bonnie did not want to waste any more time. So, she also unzipped her bag. Surprisingly, a necklace slid out when she removed her blue file. She picked up the necklace, confused.

Huh?"

"Whoa, you should be an actress! You feigned ignorance and opened your bag so soon. I'm sure your plot to pass yourself off as innocent backfired. How sickening!" Natalee could not stand Bonnie, rolling her eyes at the latter.

Avril stood before Bonnie and said, "You don't have to be so nasty. Who gave you the right to talk to Bonnie that way? Just because the necklace was in her bag doesn't mean she stole it, genius. Does it make you a thief if I accidentally put my bracelet in your bag?"

Bonnie stared at Avril with a hint of humor in her eyes.

"That's what a true friend looks like. She'll believe me and pit herself against anyone, no matter what."

"Avril, stop defending Bonnie. Still, I guess you have a point. Someone else could've set her up. I would believe that if the same thing happened to anyone else. Even so, we're talking about Bonnie here. Everyone here knows what happened between her and her family.

"It's safe to say that even her countryside parents disowned her. Think about it. She's just a student and must've run out of money to pay for her studies. That must be why she stole Rene's necklace," Natalee analyzed the situation with misguided and biased thoughts.

"You think Bonnie ran out of money? This necklace is only worth ten grand. It's nothing to brag about." Avril waved around and then pointed at her bracelet. "Do you know how much this is worth? It's worth ten million dollars. Bonnie purchased it at an auction.

"She's wearing one, too. That means Bonnie spent twenty million getting these. She also appraised a pair of ice jadeites with floating flower patterns from random chunks of stone at the Antique Jade Appreciation Conference last weekend.

"If she puts those up for auction, she'll earn hundreds of millions! With that in mind, do you atht think Bonnie would want a necklace worth ten grand?

Netelee scoffed and rolled her eyes. “Damn, hundreds of millions, huh? Hahaha! You must be tripping. No one will ever believe your bullshit.”

The other students were in disbelief.

“Avril, I know you come from a wealthy family, but you Smiths aren’t one of the prominent if you said your bracelet ones in Pyralis. Twenty million, my ass! I would’ve believed you costs a hundred grand or even a million.”

Natalee could tell Avril’s bracelet cost a fortune, but she’d never believe it was worth ten million a piece.

“Bonnie, return the necklace to Rene and apologize to her. We’re all classmates here. There’s no need to turn this into a big deal. I only ask that you sincerely apologize to Rene. No one here will mention this incident to anyone else.

“With that said, you must promise me you’ll turn over a new leaf and never steal again. If we find out you did it again, we’ll report you to the cops.”

Bonnie stared at Natalee indifferently, saying, “I didn’t steal it.”

“Tsk! Does anyone buy her crap?”

Bonnie glanced at the security camera in the hallway and said, “There’s a camera facing the lecture hall’s back door. We’ll find out who snuck in here while we were out for PE.”

Natalee spoke everyone’s mind, “You just don’t know when to quit, do you? It looks like your want to do things the hard way. We’ll be here all day to see how you keep up this act.”

Meanwhile, the still-hiding Jordynn grew anxious. She was so focused on looking through Bonnie’s bag just now that she overlooked the security camera in the hallway. Before she knew it, the whole class returned to the lecture hall.

However, they discovered that the duration between their time in physical education class and their return had been tampered with and overwritten.

“What are the chances? Someone tampered with the footage when we went for PE.”
Avril

was upset.

Natalee cackled. “Yeah, what a coincidence, huh? That’s only the tampered part. Everything else seems normal.”

“What’s with the sarcasm, Natalee? Are you implying that Bonnie did this?”

Chapter 319-

“Is that such a crazy idea? We’re all computer science students. Anyone here could’ve hacked into the security cameras.”

I Love You Miss Genius (Bonnie Shepard) CHAPTER 320

Chapter 320

Avril wished she could roll up her sleeves and put Natalee in her place. “Indeed, we’re computer science students, but some of the greatest minds in the industry developed Pyralist University’s firewall. Not even our professors can hack into it, not to mention freshmen like us.”

“Well, Bonnie could’ve bribed the staff in the monitoring room.”

“You motherfucker! It’s taking all my strength not to punch you, Natalee. You just said Bonnie stole Rene’s necklace because she ran out of money to pay for her studies.

“Are you seriously claiming Bonnie bribed a staff member with the money she doesn’t have? Do you even hear the shit that comes out of your mouth?”

Natalee turned red with rage and said stubbornly, “Either way, Bonnie’s the prime suspect.”

She glanced at Bonnie and asked, “You’re trying to prove your innocence with this footage, correct? How do you plan on proving that you didn’t steal Rene’s necklace now?”

“That’s easy.” Bonnie approached the security footage system and typed away. At that moment, everyone knew what she was trying to do. Some students looked at her with disdain and mockery.

“Someone tampered with the footage. Is Bonnie seriously trying to recover it? That’s absurd!”

“She must’ve run out of excuses and is just trying to bide her time.”

“I guess you’re right. After all, Bonnie’s just a freshman. Does she think she can do what most of us can’t?”

As the students mocked and questioned Bonnie’s intentions, she stopped typing.

“D–Did she recover the footage?!”

Everyone was dumbfounded. Some even rubbed their eyes to see if they were hallucinating. Others even pinched their thighs, wondering if they were dreaming.

“Did you do it?!”

Suddenly, the lost footage began to play.

Meanwhile, Jordynn, hiding outside the monitoring room, became nervous. Although she was relieved that someone had tampered with the footage, she did not expect Be recover it so quickly swear I’ll smack whoever else says Bonnie’s a good–for–nothing. She’s so good with computers and almost better than some of the professors here!”

Soon after, Jordynn’s worries became a reality, as everyone saw her in the footage.

It’s her! But how’s that possible? Her family is wealthy and reputable. Why would she do something like that?”

Even Bonnie was shocked.

I've only met Jordynn twice and can't claim to know her well, but I don't think she would've.

done something so outrageous even if she hates me.”

Bonnie was amidst her thoughts when Jordynn entered the monitoring room.

anuck into the lecture hall but had nothing to do with the necklace.”

Although the footage showed who entered the hall, it did not reveal what happened Inside.

Jordynn approached Bonnie and said, “I ruffled through your bag to search for evidence. that would make Ivor leave you.”

Bonnie believed that, but it made her curious about something else. She frowned and wondered what Jordynn saw in her bag.

“Can we trust you, Jordynn?” Natalee asked timidly. She could afford to be cocky with Bonnie and Avril, but things were different regarding Jordynn. After all, Natalee was an ordinary girl and could not risk offending the Day family.

“Keep watching, and you'll see.” Jordynn calmly leaned on the wall.

Judging by her reaction, everyone felt there was something more to it. As expected, they saw Trina in the footage a minute later.

“It's Trina!”

Everyone gazed at Bonnie, thinking about the rumors that claimed she liked picking on Trina. The ex-siblings even fought in public on several occasions.

The students could not see if Trina took Rene's necklace and placed it in Bonnie's bag after sneaking into the lecture hall. However, Bonnie was not in the footage at all. That meant the culprit was either Jordynn or Trina, and the latter was the most suspicious between the two

Soon after, the incident spread, and the dean called the students involved to his office.

Avril pointed at Trina and said, "Bonnie is no longer your sister, Trina. Your family clarified that they wouldn't concern themselves with anything Bonnie does. I remember she didn't even have time to gather her belongings because your family immediately kicked her out.

"She was miserable enough back then, so why would you do something so atrocious? You took everything from Bonnie, including her fiance, parents, and status as one of you. She has lost everything.

"Aren't you content with what you have? Stop kicking her while she's down! Why do you hate her so much?!" Avril roared, expressing all her thoughts. She even began to lose her breath from anger

Meanwhile, her classmates muttered and pointed at Trina.

Trina became teary-eyed as usual, playing the victim again. "I-I didn't do that. I went to look.

for Bonnie and realized she wasn't there."

"Please, you were in the lecture hall for over a minute, and no one else was there. You didn't need to linger inside for so long. You're not fooling anyone. Do we look like gullible fools who'll believe everything you say?"

"I swear I didn't do anything. I noticed the empty lecture hall and walked to the window to look outside. I was searching for her downstairs." Trina began to shed tears. She looked so innocent and tragic that anyone would think she was the victim.

However, Avriil was numb to her acts. “You and Jordynn were the only ones who snuck into the lecture hall, yet you keep claiming you didn’t do it. Does that mean you’re accusing Jordynn?”

“I don’t know who did it, but I swear I didn’t-Bonnie interjected, “If I remember correctly, Jordynn was the first to sneak into the lecture hall. She was still in there when Trina entered.”
