

Chapter 246 Something Not Adding Up

At the entrance stood the woman donning an elegant updo with her long hair, dressed in a customized white suit adorned only with a pair of simple yet graceful pearl earrings.

Upon seeing him, Camila inquired with a curious look, "Who are you?"

As she gazed at the woman, Camila recognized her from the photograph.

For a moment, she seemed lost in thought before regaining her senses and crying out, "Help me..."

Standing behind Camila, Aldrin threatened with aggression, "Hurry up and come back with me. I'll teach you a lesson. Do you think you can escape?"

Terrified, Camila pleaded with Greta, her eyes filled with desperation, "If I go back with him, he'll beat me to death. Please help me."

Moved by her plea, Greta compassionately interjected, "Release this girl or I'll contact the authorities."

Undeterred, Aldrin barked, "She's mine. It's none of your business!"

Aldrin tried to appear aggressive though not as fierce as he looked like.

In reality, Aldrin was a handsome man.

He was delicate and had inherited his striking features from his mother, Trudy.

Unimpressed, Greta frowned and pointed out, "There is a surveillance camera here. You are breaking the law. I will call the hotel staff to come up now."

With a snort, Aldrin released his grip on Camila, confident in his claim, "I'm not afraid of the staff. I live next door, and they can come to me anytime they want."

And with that, he strutted away.

Still shaken, Camila felt grateful for Greta's intervention.

"Thank you," she mumbled.

"Don't mention it," said Greta.

As Greta moved to shut the door, Camila swiftly raised her hand, preventing it from closing, and asked, "May I have a cup of tea?"

After a brief moment of hesitation, Greta relented and said, "Sure, come in."

Overwhelmed with gratitude, Camila expressed her thanks in a hurry.

Greta walked to the table and poured her a glass of water, suggesting, "Drink some water to calm down. Is that man your boyfriend?"

Camila took a moment to compose herself before answering, "Yes, he has a terrible temper and accuses me of cheating. He wants to kill me." She held the cup in her trembling hand.

Greta's response was firm and empathetic. "It's best to end things with a man like that."

Camila nodded her head in agreement.

Curiosity got the better of Camila and she asked, "Are you married?"

Regretting her question immediately, Camila felt it was too intrusive.

What kind of question was that?!

Greta surely must have been married at her age.

Greta was amused by the inquiry. "Yes, my daughter will be twenty years old this year."

Camila was taken aback by the revelation.

She had a daughter?!

She had never heard of Isaac having a sister.

In fact, she was sure he didn't have a sister.

"What's your daughter's name?" Camila probed further.

"Annis Williams," Greta responded.

Camila gave a small nod of acknowledgement, her mind still whirring away.

She had never heard this name before.

Chapter 246 Something Not Adding Up

Greta's daughter had a different surname from Isaac.

Her last name was Williams, which was the same as Greta's and Nelson's.

This made it difficult for Camila to decipher their relationship.

However, she refrained from asking too many questions as it could arouse suspicion.

"I happen to know a man named Isaac," Camila mentioned casually, hoping to elicit a reaction from Greta.

Greta responded with a calm expression, "And?"

Camila was puzzled by Greta's lack of surprise or change in demeanor.

Obviously, Greta didn't know Isaac.

What was going on?

Camila was confused.

Was she mistaken?

After all, she had seen Greta's photo on Isaac's desk.

Something didn't add up.

"Why are you bringing him up?" Greta asked.

Confused, Camila wondered if she had made a mistake. "... I just mentioned it without thinking," she said, struggling to explain herself.

"Do you have a place to go? My husband will be back soon and he doesn't like strangers," Greta said tactfully.

"Thank you for your help," Camila replied, putting down her cup. "Or I would have been badly beaten. I'm leaving now."

"It's not a big deal."

Greta saw her out and, as Camila was leaving, Nelson happened to arrive at the door. When he saw Camila, his face immediately changed!

"What are you doing here?" he asked in shock.