

Chapter 348 Kiss

"Waah..."

Annis had not yet stopped crying.

The sound of her wails grew sadder the longer she cried.

Alick shook her arm and asked, "Tell me, what truth are you talking about?"

"This is all your fault! How could you even ask me that?" Annis grabbed his arm and bit it hard.

This was the second time that she had bitten Alick.

"Ah! Are you a dog?!" he shouted at her, his face grimacing in pain.

Why was she always biting him?

"No, you're the dog! Your whole family are dogs! Waah..."

All of a sudden, Alick's face turned into a block of ice. "If you're going to curse me like that, then I'll teach you a lesson."

He could bear her insults hurled towards him. However, when those insults were now directed at his family members, that was a different matter altogether.

"Go ahead. Hit me, why don't you?!" As she spoke, Annis slipped and fell to the floor.

Her hair was disheveled, and her breath reeked of whiskey.

She looked like a vagrant who had been wandering the streets for days.

Alick rolled up his sleeve and glanced at the bite mark on his arm. He gritted his teeth and said, "What an unreasonable woman."

At this point, the front desk had already processed his check-out procedures.

As he was about to leave, Annis grabbed his leg and cried, "This is all because of you! You can't leave!"

Alick lowered his head and stared at this maniacal woman. Was she crazy?!

What the hell was wrong with her?

Why was she saying things that were so confusing?

He forcefully wriggled his leg free from her grasp. Upon reaching the doorway, he saw that Annis was still on the floor, crying.

He stopped for a while and hesitated whether he should go to her and check up on her or not.

There were people passing through the hotel lobby who would point at her and whisper nasty things beneath their breaths.

Some men who were drawn by her beauty and saw that she was alone approached for a chat.

Afraid that something bad might happen to her, Alick came back and drove away the men who were trying to chat her up.

"Has her room been prepared?" Alick asked.

The receptionist nodded. "Yes."

After that, the receptionist handed the card to Alick.

He took the room key and picked up Annis from the floor. "I wouldn't care about you if you weren't Mr. Johnston's sister."

When she heard this, tears further gushed out of her eyes.

"Waaaah!"

Alick let out a long sigh and shook his head.

"Stop crying," he told her like it was an order. Those who had no idea what was happening might really believe that he was bullying her.

"I'm not Isaac's sister... I'm not my father's daughter, nor am I my mother's daughter. I was adopted. Waaaaaah!"

It turned out that Isaac and Nelson had met each other, and Annis happened to overhear their conversation.

She thought that she might be able to glean some information about the cemetery from the conversation between Nelson and Isaac.

However, what ended up happening was that she heard Nelson tell Isaac that she wasn't Cathy's biological child. She was only adopted.

She was adopted!

She wasn't Nelson and Cathy's child.

Nor was she Isaac's half-sister.

She was nothing.

Just an abandoned orphan.

She was just lucky that Nelson and Cathy decided to adopt her.

The news had come as an awful shock to her, and as a result, she couldn't accept it.

"You knew this all along, didn't you?" Annis said, her eyes growing even redder as tears continued rolling down her cheeks.

Actually, Alick was quite surprised to learn this.

It prompted him to observe Annis' face and found that she really didn't resemble either Cathy or Nelson.

At first, she thought she was a wealthy young lady, but that didn't turn out to be the case.

"I know how you're feeling," Alick said, trying to comfort her.

"Waaaah.... No, you don't. You don't understand!"

She kept bawling, each whimper sadder than the last.

Alick opened the door and put her on the bed. "You might be adopted, but Nelson treated you like you were his own. You don't have to be so sad..."

"But the person closest to me isn't related to me by blood! Do you have any idea how that feels?!" Annis cried with a sniffle.

Alick didn't know what else to say. He just sighed and put her on the bed. "Get some rest. Maybe that will help you forget about your troubles."

In his mind, it didn't matter whether two people were biologically related or not.

As long as their relationship was sincere, that was all that mattered.

Before Alick could leave, Annis stopped him. "Don't go," she murmured. "I'm scared to be alone."

Alick looked back and shook his head. "No. I have to go back to Azmar. I don't have time—"

Before he could finish his words, Annis wrapped her arms around Alick's neck and began kissing him! ①

Alick's eyes widened as he felt her lips moving against his.

Even though her lips were soft, he could tell that she was inexperienced.

She was just blindly nibbling on his mouth.

"You... You're drunk." Alick pushed her away.

Despite that, Annis held on to his collar and said, "I won't let you go."

Then, she pounced on him once again.

Her mind was no longer working properly. All she knew was that she needed someone to accompany her at that moment.

Annis had a good figure and smooth skin. With her so close, Alick could feel her chest rubbing against his body.

Alick swallowed the lump in his throat as he said, "If you keep acting like this, I might not be able to control myself. Don't blame me if something —"

Before he could even finish what he was saying, Annis had already wrapped her legs around his waist.

Damn it!

Could he really resist the temptation? ②
