

Chapter 354 Interests

Isaac was interrupted by a man who suddenly ran out.

"Don't run away!" the doctor and staff screamed as they chased after the patient. After some time, they managed to get ahold of him.

Once the commotion had died, Isaac started interrogating the people who were involved in Camila's operation.

Josiah might be stubborn, but those who had helped him might be less.

In this world where people were most concerned about their own interests, he didn't believe that they would hide the truth for Josiah's sake—especially if it would be at their own cost.

Alick led Isaac to a room where all the doctors and the medical staff who had participated in Camila's operation were.

Instead of threatening them, Isaac decided to dazzle them with a reward. "I have heard that the highest position among you is the attending doctor. If anyone is willing to tell me Camila's whereabouts, I will let him enter the Military Central Hospital as the attending doctor."

Although both were attending doctors, the status of each doctor was still different depending on the kind of hospital they were working in.

Attending doctors from the Military Central Hospital were equivalent to the leader of Benevolence Hospital. Aside from status, working there could guarantee a brighter future.

Suffice to say, it was a very tempting offer.

Everyone seriously considered it.

They were afraid that someone might speak up, and they wouldn't get the benefits being promised.

Everyone wanted to have a try.

"I'll tell you." A young man spoke up as he stepped forward.

He was Josiah's student and the lowest doctor among them.

He was just an intern.

As soon as he stepped forward, everyone looked at him.

They all gnashed their teeth as they shot hateful glares towards him. Even though they resented him for betraying them, deep down, they were actually jealous.

Isaac wasn't surprised. He had expected this outcome.

What surprised him was how easy it was for them to confess. They didn't even hesitate.

It was really true how if one was offered a great reward, they wouldn't be able to keep their word.

The only thing that mattered in this world was profit.

"Go ahead," Isaac urged as he sat on the chair and casually crossed his legs. He looked indifferently at the young doctor who had stepped forward.

Although he expected that someone would speak up in exchange for some profit, he still found it very hard to like a person who would sell out others for his own benefit.

The young doctor sank his head, avoiding the gazes of the colleagues he had left behind. All of them had eyes sharp as daggers, wanting to stab him endlessly if they could.

"Camila is still alive. Josiah used the body of a woman who was burned to death to fake her," the young doctor confessed.

"Where is she now?" Isaac asked.

The young doctor raised his head and shook it hard. "I don't know. Josiah asked us to leave the operating room. Ever since, we haven't seen each other. So, we don't know how and where she was sent out."

Isaac had thought that this young doctor knew a lot.

So, when he found out that he didn't, his face darkened.

"So none of you know it?" He cast a cold glance at the group of people behind the young doctor.

As soon as he did, they all felt a shiver down their spine that made them look down.

They only knew that Camila was still alive. However, they were clueless about her whereabouts. The only one who knew was Josiah.

Isaac snorted, unsatisfied with the answer he had gotten.

Josiah was a stubborn man.

It wouldn't be easy for Isaac to pry the answer from him.

At this moment, Isaac's phone vibrated.

Upon checking, he saw that it was a message from Lilith. "I'll be waiting for you at Seven Port," it read.

The fact that he knew that Camila was alive made Isaac uneasy to the point that he couldn't calm down.

He was too eager to know her whereabouts.

"Take Travis out," he ordered coldly.

"Well..." The young doctor wanted to remind Isaac to keep his promise.

In response, Isaac shot him a cold stare.

The young doctor was frightened and immediately retreated.

Isaac turned to Alick and said, "Release everyone here and arrange everything for this young man."

Alick nodded. "I understand."

"You can leave now."

Alick walked up to the young doctor and said, "I'll take you to the Military Central Hospital. However, whether you can stay long there entirely depends on your own ability."

If he didn't have the necessary ability, he wouldn't last there for a long time.

Alick took Travis out, covered his mouth, and put on a black cloth bag over his head. Then, he escorted him to Seven Port.

When they got there, Lilith was already waiting for them.

She was so nervous that her palms were damp with sweat.

Did Isaac really believe that she knew where Camila was?

"If you release Travis, I'll tell you where Camila is," Lilith said, trying to be calm as she negotiated.

However, Isaac instantly noticed the nervousness and uneasiness in her voice.