

Chapter 390 Go And See For Yourself

Annis rushed in, her question sharp and urgent, "Did you just say Alick is in a vegetative state now?"

Josiah was familiar with Annis.

She was the adopted child of his friend Nelson.

But her intense reaction puzzled him.....

"You're talking about Alick? How do you know him?" Josiah asked.

Nelson turned his gaze to his daughter as well, confused.

Her reaction was too strong. Did she have some undisclosed relationship with Alick?

Annis, clearly disconcerted, explained, "Alick and I became acquainted when I went to Isaac to locate my mother's grave."

"Oh, I see," Josiah replied, not giving it much thought.

But Nelson, who knew his daughter better, was certain that her emotional upheaval wasn't simply due to casual acquaintance with Alick.

His little girl had grown up.

She had found someone special.

"Alright, go and see for yourself."

Annis was taken aback by his response.

"Dad..."

"Go ahead!" Nelson dismissed her concern, adding, "And don't forget to visit home often."

Annis held back her emotions, saying, "Thank you, dad."

She quickly scurried off to pack her belongings.

Josiah, still baffled, asked, "What's going on, Nelson?"

"Didn't you notice? She and Alick..."

Nelson shot him a significant look.

Josiah suddenly understood. "You mean, she's in a relationship with Alick?"

"Shh. Keep that to yourself, no need to broadcast it like that."

Josiah was simply too stunned.

Nelson glanced at his wristwatch and rose. "Let's get going!"

"Go where? Where are we going?"

Although Josiah was asking, his hands didn't pause in their movements of tidying up things.

"Isaac's plane lands at six. We need to pick him up,"

Nelson clarified.

Josiah glanced at Nelson, asking, "Has the strain between you and Isaac eased?"

Nelson looked equally surprised. "I'm not sure why his attitude towards me softened."

Josiah pondered for a moment, then proposed, "Perhaps he saw something in Camila's possession that changed his perception of you."

Nelson let out a sigh. "Truthfully, I'm grateful for his forgiveness."

Back then, his decision to take Cathy away for his own interests resulted in Isaac being orphaned at a young age.

It was an unfair hardship for a child.

Yet, Isaac forgave Nelson, not only due to understanding Cathy's love for Nelson.

More importantly, it was Nelson's actions that saved Cathy, allowing her to enjoy many more years of blissful life.

Cathy was a gentle soul, and if she had stayed in the quarrelsome environment of the Johnston family, she would likely have suffered further.

This realization eventually brought peace to Isaac.

Nelson drove towards the airport.

Isaac just got off the plane.

Right on time.

He walked over with Josiah.

"Tough flight, I suppose? Must be worn out."

Nelson expressed his concern.

Isaac gave a slight nod and glanced at Josiah. He didn't comment on his presence, instead, he walked away briskly.

Josiah and Nelson seemed accustomed to his character, and without any fuss, trailed behind him.

They were here specifically to welcome Isaac.

However, Isaac had a date and didn't plan to return to the hotel to rest. He specified an address instead.

The car stopped at a certain location, and Isaac exited.

Without showing any emotion, he said, "You can head back now."

Then he strolled towards a villa.

It was nothing special.

Even this residence was somewhat ordinary.

Josiah asked Nelson, "He's meeting someone?"

Nelson simply responded, "Possibly."

"Let's leave. If he didn't share any details, it means he doesn't need our help. I don't want to intrude."

Josiah nodded in agreement.

At this time, it was better to work more and speak less.

After all, Isaac was the one under the most stress.

Isaac stood at the door and pressed the doorbell.

Soon the door was opened!
