

Mommy 65

Chapter 65

Julian's POV

Julian turned away from her to hide his pain, and he ran his finger through his hair, gripping it tightly. He never thought anything would make him feel this lost, but right now, watching his Lana cry out in agony at the loss of her sons made him feel lost more than ever.

In silence, he stepped out of the room. He needed to think, gather his thoughts, and figure out a way out of this mess. This wasn't how he thought the day would go, but it had taken this turn, and they had to go with it.

Vivian was behind every one of these ill-fated happenings.

After hearing about Vivian and Nina's escape from their cell, he wondered who had aided their escape. Whoever it was, he had to be strong enough to take on five guards and come out victorious. He also couldn't be just anyone.

The guards were lower-ranked betas, and many were omegas, yet they were trained as soldiers before being appointed as guards. So, whoever took them on had to be a highly ranked beta in the estate. All the way back, he tried to decipher who it was.

He couldn't be trusted every beta that was highly ranked because they had dignity and loyalty to him. He wouldn't have known who it was if Bella hadn't said his name.

Brock

He had joined the team almost the same time Vivian did, and he had worked his way up, being diligent and loyal to the cause. At least, that was what he once thought.

Putting it together that he worked with Vivian all this while scared him because he was one of those he trusted. No, he didn't tell him everything because only the elite, which were Ken and Marion, knew personal details about him. However, Brock knew him;

he knew his strengths and weaknesses from the last five years of working with him. Learning that he had betrayed him by siding with the enemy made him question everything.

He also took his sons, which meant he had drawn the line of battle. He didn't care about his intentions; he had committed an unforgivable sin. His sons were the line that not even the moon goddess would cross without a fight.

"Where are you going?" Fiona asked as he almost stepped out of the mansion

He turned to find her behind him. Her eyes looked puffy and red from grieving her sons, but she looked composed and less shaken than a few minutes ago. He wished he could have contributed to her calmness, but she had pushed him away, and he had to give her space. Now he had to do his duties as a father and protect his children. He couldn't leave it to the men he sent out anymore; this was his responsibility. "I am going to find our sons." He replied.

"I am coming with you," she said, stepping towards him.

"No, you can't. Listen to me, I will find them, and I will bring them back to you. You have my word," he vowed.

His words didn't help because she frowned at him. They are my sons, too."

He knew that, but he feared her emotions might just get in the way of the mission ahead. "This might be the most brutal scene you ever witnessed," he said, but he didn't get to finish because she spoke. "Good, you will need help cleaning up."

They stepped outside together, and there they found Marion, Ken, and Yao standing as if waiting for them.

What are you doing here?" Julian asked.

News of the appearance of your sons, as well as Brock's betrayal, had reached us all. We are here to help you find your sons, Ken

“The clouds are heavy, and it looks like it’s going to rain soon. I gather they are heading east. We should get going while their scent is still strong. Yao spoke up, bringing their mind to the weather.

They headed out, following the scent of June and Jashin. Fiona would have been the weakest had he not marked her. Now she was able to keep up, and her healing ability helped heal her and keep her from wearing out. The scent, just as Yao pointed out, led them eastward past the community of Reign. They found the gigas, which were around the necks of the prisoners at the border of Reign. They must have taken it off longer and only thrown it away now. This meant they were back to their full strength.

They also found the bodies of the men sent first to capture and return the runaway prisoners, torn to pieces—all twenty of them.

He had sent them out without knowing Beta Brock was on their side. The guards were no match for him, and it was a known fact.

Their deaths, however, will be avenged. He was certain of that.

They have split up; I think they know we are fast closing on them.” Yao raised the alarm after a few minutes. “I picked up the footsteps of two, and I will follow their lead. One of them belongs to Brock.” Julian knew Brock was stronger, and more brutal than Yao would ever be. Yao excelled at hearing just as Chad did, but that would not save him if he were to meet Brock in combat.

“I will come with.” Ken said before he could speak up in his objection, and he followed Yao behind. Ken was stronger than Brock, but Julian still had a lingering fear. They were to expect the worst from a betrayer, and he didn’t want to lose anyone. “Be careful”

Ken nodded. “We will be you too. Be careful.”

They continued on in their trail, and it didn’t stray from the east even after passing by Bayland, which was the last land before they would exit the werewolf world, Julian didn’t want to accept that this was where they were going at first, but it was so obvious

They came to a thick forest, almost void of any lights or life. Julian felt his strength reduced, but he kept going, his sons were there, and he would not leave until they were returned to him. With every pace they covered, they drew closer, and with every pace, his strength reduced.

“What is happening?” Fiona asked, and her tone was laced with confusion.

“We are entering the realm of the dark world.” Marion, who also had knowledge of it, answered. “What does that mean, and what does it have to do with my sons?”

Julian couldn’t explain, even if he wanted to. It was a whole lecture. “The dark world is the third world in creation. Just like the name implies, all forms of darkness exist in this world; hence, only a few know of its existence. Because of its darkness, it subdues the majority of our powers as long as we are within its territories. I believe Vivian and her minions brought June and

Jashin here to offer them up and gain passage.”

Her eyes paled, realising the answer he gave was the truth. “No!” she screamed and took to her heels, running as fast as her feet could take her.

Julian and Marion followed behind her, knowing she wouldn’t be able to take the enemy alone, no matter how angry she was.

They soon arrived at the entrance of the dark world and found Rufus and Caroline holding onto June and Jashin, while Vivian stood at the entrance with her hands stretched out. There were many others standing behind Caroline and Rufus, but Julian couldn’t make out their faces because of how dark it was. This surprised Julian because he never thought Vivian had this many people supporting her

“Mommy! Daddy!” Jashin called out, looking terrified and shaky.

“Daddy! Mommy!” June called out, his eyes not displaying the fear that Jashin had.

Vivian turned around to them, and her teeth clenched. "Do not come any closer, or they will die," she threatened.

That wasn't enough to stop Fiona, because her motherly protective instinct kicked in. She launched at Rufus, who held onto Jashin, and ripped his hand out of its socket.

She attacked Caroline without looking out for the ones behind her, hidden in the shadow of darkness. They came out to attack, and Julian moved in to fight them off. Jashin and June were safe and kept under the protection of Marion while they moved to face the rest. They took down the dozen that came on to attack them. Even without their powers, they could still put up a good fight, and they did.
