Chapter 84

Julian's POV

"What are we doing here?" Marion, who had been elevated to the Lycan King's team for the full moon, asked.

The movers, on Julian's commands, had brought Julian, Kenneth, Isis, and Marion to the extreme east of the werewolf world, which was far away from Bayland. This was the path that led to the entrance of the dark world. Julian knew Marion could recognise it from two years ago of being here.

The moon was almost at its apex now, and Julian felt strength surge through every fibre of his being, breathing in and out strength.

"You wanted to know why things are the way they are with me and why I sent Fiona away. You wanted to know what my relationship with Isis is; well, this is it."

"This is the entrance of the Dark world." Marion rightly pointed this out, and Julian nodded.

"Yes, the Dark World, in the last two years, has expanded its territory, and soon, it will consume the entire community around it, and nothing will be left. Bayland is one of these communities. Their forces are already manipulating their way into the hearts of men and women in the nearby communities and making them do their bidding. If I do not stop it, we might never be able to, and the werewolf world as we know it will become the Dark World's territory. The wrap can only be seen during the full moon, and I can only use my abilities during the full moon. So this is the only way out." Julian explained.

"What can we do?" Marion said and turned to the rest of them.

"You are here to keep watch and fight in case there is an attack from those already under the influence of Doom and Mischief.

Isis revealed a way for us to permanently seal the dark world and keep it that way for all time to come. Since the last full moon, I have done that. We need three tries to seal the entrance completely, and this is the only way.” He said that and dismissed

Kenneth and Isis, who already knew their duties.

“You could have told Fiona.” Marion pointed this out. “There was no need to exile her.”

Julian halted and sighed. “It’s not that simple, Marion.”

“Why isn’t it?”

“Because Fiona is who Doom, the master of the Dark world, wants. If he lays his hands on her, then we are all lost. I had to make sure to keep her as far away from here as possible. It was for her good and everyone else.”

Attempting to seal the dark world already came with its risks, one of which was Julian losing his abilities as a werewolf. The territories of the Dark World had always subdued the abilities of werewolves or other supernatural creatures, all but on the full moon. Being able to use his abilities during the full moon placed him at risk of losing all of them completely, but it was something he was willing to risk to protect those he loved.

Julian knew if Fiona had found out what it took to seal the entrance of the dark world, she would try to stop him from doing it. She would have argued there was another way to do it, and even if they did, they were out of time and options. This was the only way out.

“So, she is coming back.”

“When all this is over, yes, she will return.” He answered, “Now come and let me show you where your post is before the full moon hits its apex.”

Marion followed without saying another word, and Julian showed him where to stand and provide aid. This was where he had been attacked last week and needed to defend himself while pulling the entrance wrap back.

The moon hit its apex, Julian transformed into Jule, and Marion shifted into Rio. Jules was about to leave when Rio spoke.

“Thank you for telling me; I know you didn’t have to.”

Jules turned to look at him before dashing off towards the entrance at full speed. With his strength tripled under the full moon, he knew he would be able to achieve more than he did under the last time. His eyes spotted the wrap of the dark entrance, and it seemed to have extended from the place he had pulled it during the previous full moon. The Dark World probably knew what their plans were and was not going to allow that.

He gripped the wrap tightly and began pulling with all his might as he could to close it up. Then he moved to the other end of the entrance, and he pulled at the wrap when a creature launched at him from within.

The attacks he faced the last time were from the outside force, so Julian didn't prepare for this. Still, he fought it off, but it had slashed his arm, and he bled. Kenneth, who came to the rescue, fought the creature, and Julian focused on the wrap.

Although he was at his full strength because of the full moon, he couldn't heal the wound; those were some of the disadvantages. With his arm already slashed open, the strength he needed leaked out with every drop of blood. This cut was worse than the one he sustained during the previous full moon. Then, it was a scratch. Still, he did what he needed to do for the hours he needed to do it.

He knew the strength he was losing he would never get back, even after the full moon, but stopping wasn't an option. He kept pulling at the wrap, pulling for as long as he could until he no longer could.

His heart beat away so loudly that he could hear it in his ears, but he kept the thought of his sons with him and the thought of Fiona as well. Knowing that at the end of it all, he would be reunited with her.

He lost his strength and dropped to his knees. Marion ran over to him and placed his arms around him to help him up.

Meanwhile, Ken and Isis fought the creatures that crept out of the Dark world as the full moon came to an end.
