Chapter 1341 Have Some Peace Of Mind

'Matthew is a man who excels in everything. How could a fool like me deserve him? Only those elegant women or those who are outstanding in business like Terilynn or Evelyn suit him, ' Erica thought to herself.

Perhaps other people would call her silly and crazy. She felt like she was different from other women. For example, most women would run away in fright when they saw snakes. On the contrary, she was happy to see those animals. She would even hold them and play with them.

When she came back to her senses, she dialed Gifford's number. However, no one answered, even after she tried to call many times.

It was only on her fifteenth attempt that he finally answered. He asked in a low voice, "Rika, is there any problem?" He was on a mission, but when he saw Erica's persistent calls, he had no other choice but to find a place to answer his phone secretly.

"Gifford, I need to tell you something."

"Is that really urgent?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Okay, tell me," he said with a sigh.

"Long time ago, I saved a man and took him home to treat his wounds. At that time, Matthew happened to come back home from a business trip. When he saw the man, he got so angry." She paused as Matthew's enraged face flashed in her mind.

She couldn't help sobbing as she thought, 'Did Matthew already like me at that time? If he didn't, why did he get furious when he found out that I brought a man back home?'

"Rika, what is happening to you? Why are you crying a lot recently?" This time, Gifford regretted not coming to Y City a few days ago to confront Matthew.

"I'm fine. I just discovered something that shocked me. I just found out that Matthew really loves me," she replied while wiping the tears on her face.

Gifford was rendered speechless. He was surprised that she found out about it just now.

Erica continued, "Since then, that man has started to appear in my life more often. And every time we were together, Matthew would always appear and get furious. One day, Matthew beat him black and blue. When I went to the hospital to visit him, he confided to me that he liked me, and he was the one who sent me the roses." Although intermittently, she had finally told Gifford about Watkins.

Matthew didn't speak. Unlike before, Erica neither naughtily urged him nor coquettishly forced him to answer immediately. After half an hour, he finally agreed, "Okay."

The corners of her mouth lifted in a brilliant smile. She kissed the man's face with tear-filled eyes, and said softly, "Thank you, Matthew."

'You are the man I love most. I love you, Matthew,' she confessed in her mind.

Matthew acted quickly. First, he confirmed a destination for Erica's trip—a country named Cass. The country was in the opposite direction of the slum.

Then he arranged for six bodyguards to follow her. Two of them—a man and a woman—were assigned to follow her closely, while the remaining four bodyguards would protect her in secret.

He also ensured that bodyguards were available for every scenic spot she visited.

While his arrangements were extreme, they helped reassure Matthew of Erica's and their two children's safety.

As soon as Debbie learned that Erica would be traveling, she offered to accompany her daughter-in-law. Erica, however, refused. Although she always listened to her elders, this time, she expressed her desire to be alone.

Debbie tried to persuade her, but the pregnant woman's decision remained unshakable. Eventually, Debbie gave up.

Her concerns only settled when she learned from Matthew the steps he'd taken to ensure Erica's safety.

After all three sisters of the Su family had been sent away, Fanya tried her best to sue Matthew and Erica, but no lawyer dared to take her case.

Finally, a small-time lawyer offered to accept the case for the money. However, he disappeared inexplicably when he went to meet Fanya.

Before leaving for Cass, Erica visited the Li family house in A Country.

Erica only stayed in the Li family's house for two days. She then set off from A Country to Cass.

Matthew had already calculated her arrival time. So, as soon as she got off the plane, she received a call from him. After telling him that she arrived safely, she hung up and went straight to the hotel.

At Orchid Private Club

In the dim VIP room, Matthew was seated silently, staring at the wine in his glass.

With a dissatisfied expression on his face, Sheffield sat down opposite him and said, "Just because you don't have a wife to sleep with tonight, we have to put aside our work and leave our wives to go out with you."

Joshua chuckled, "Don't provoke him, man. Be careful. He might have a life-and-death battle with you later." Everyone could tell that Matthew was not in a good mood.

"Then let's fight it out! Who says I'm afraid of him?" Sheffield poured wine into his glass leisurely.

Harmon echoed his joke and said, "Why not? Matthew has a lot of money anyway. Even if we smash his private room right now, he can have it decorated more luxuriously." They all knew that Matthew had a brawl with Watkins in this room last time. After the fight, he had it renovated, and it looked more luxurious than before.

Matthew shifted his gaze from his glass to Sheffield. His brother-in-law used to be a ladies' man, and he should understand women better, so he asked him, "Why Rika doesn't want me to accompany her?"

He felt like Erica had changed a lot recently. He couldn't even guess what she was thinking.

Sheffield grinned mysteriously and replied, "Look at your poker face. Why don't you learn from me? You should smile more."

"Fuck off!" he cursed ruthlessly.

Sheffield just crossed his legs casually and said, "If I leave now, who can you ask for advice? Joshua? Harmon? Do you think these two can help you analyze Erica?"

Unfortunately, Matthew had to admit that Sheffield was right. He took a sip of his wine. The burning sensation when the liquid passed through his throat was too stimulating.

Joshua and Harmon refuted their so-called ladies' man friend discontentedly. After all, they had been in love and married. They knew how women think too.

But Sheffield just ignored their interruption and said to Matthew, "Tell me what happened recently."

Although Matthew had already booked a plane ticket for himself, he didn't expect to receive a call from the bodyguard informing that Erica was missing.

Immediately, he changed his flight to the earliest one and flew to Cass.

When he got to the hotel room that Erica was supposed to be staying, he sat down and quietly listened to the bodyguard's report about his wife's disappearance. "Mrs. Huo ordered the female bodyguard to get her some lady supplies from downtown. In the meantime, another bodyguard and I stayed and did the protection for Mrs. Huo. When she complained about having a stomachache, we accompanied her to the bathroom and waited nearly half an hour outside the door. But then we realized that something was wrong. We called her several times, but there was no response. After we broke in, we found out that she had climbed over the wall and left."

The bathroom in the mountain area wasn't as luxurious as the one in the city. It was only a simple toilet built of bricks.

Behind it, there was a small forest. So when the bodyguards checked the surveillance footage at the entrance, they saw Erica leaving through the woods in a hurry.

They managed to track her from the screen until she reached a blind spot and disappeared without a trace.

After the bodyguard told him everything, Matthew closed his eyes and inhaled deeply. He could still smell her scent in the room.

For a long time, he didn't say anything, nor did he make a move. He was so calm that it didn't seem as he had just lost his beloved wife. The bodyguards were in cold sweats, beginning to wonder if the man had fallen asleep. But slowly, he opened his eyes again.

Matthew then stood up and walked around the room as if he was looking for something.

Finally, he spotted a letter and a box above Erica's suitcase.

Sitting on the head of the bed, he casually opened the letter.

It didn't seem very long. The girl's handwriting was neat, unlike her naughty character, and in the very first word, Matthew noticed that the letter was indeed for him.

"What? Are you shitting me? She ran away again?" Wesley asked in disbelief.

"No, I'm afraid this piece of news is poo-free. Rika dumped her bodyguards and went AWOL when she was on holiday in Cass!" Carlos answered.

Wesley stood up abruptly and asked, "How'd that happen? Did she run away by herself?"

It had only been a month since Carlos told him the good news that Erica was pregnant with twins. Why did she run away?

"No one knows. She did leave a letter to Matthew, asking us not to look for her." As an elder, Carlos felt guilty after Erica took off.

Matthew must have done something again.

When Blair heard someone ran away, it didn't take her long to figure out it was Erica. It was always Erica.

She immediately dropped what she was working on and approached her husband. She asked anxiously, "What's going on, Wesley?"

Wesley didn't answer her; he was still listening to Carlos on the phone.

On the other hand, Chantel lowered her head and clenched her clothes nervously. 'She did it! Rika got away from her bodyguards!'

"My daughter is impossible!" Wesley was so pissed off his blood pressure skyrocketed. He paced back and forth in the living room like a tiger in its cage. "I really don't think it's Matthew this time. I know what kind of person my daughter is. It can't be his fault. She's gone too far this time! She didn't even think about her two babies at all!"

A moment later, he told Carlos, "Blair and I are heading your way now. We need to put our heads together and bring Erica back! Bring yourself and your ideas!"

Then Wesley hung up the phone and urged Blair to pack her things before leaving for Y City.

Chantel stood up from the chair and asked, "Dad, where's Rika? Is something wrong?"

Wesley took a deep breath and answered gently, "She ran away again. I'm off to Y City with your mom. You hold down the fort here. I'll get Yvette to come and take care of you for a couple days."

The first and second prizes for the photo contest were one hundred thousand and fifty thousand respectively. Erica won both for her entries, so the money was immediately transferred to her bank account. The certificates were also sent to the ZL Group. Matthew received them, but he couldn't celebrate her victory with her.

It had been one month and ten days since Erica left. Chantel received a call from Gifford. Before she could get the chance to greet him, he immediately asked, "You were with Rika for two days before she went to Cass, right?"

"Yes. Why?" she answered. Her voice was a little shaky as if afraid of something.

"Did she tell you anything about her plans, like where she wanted to go?" he asked again.

She heaved a sigh of relief first before she answered calmly, "No, she didn't." It was true. She knew that Erica was going to run away from home, but the latter didn't tell her exactly where she was going.

"Really?" He sounded unconvinced. If only he wasn't busy today, he would go back home to ask Chantel in person.

"Yes, really."

There was a moment of silence from the other end of the line before he spoke again. "If she contacts you, let me know immediately."

"Okay." But Erica had not contacted her yet since she left.

Then Gifford hung up the phone.

Chantel was in a daze as she stared at her phone. All of a sudden, her heart felt empty. It was as if she lost something important.

Meanwhile, in the slum located in the opposite direction to Cass, a skinny woman in plain clothes carried a bowl of freshly-cooked noodles into a shabby small room. She then said to the other woman, "Erma, I bought eggs and tomatoes to make these noodles. Eat them while they are still hot."

Erma was currently six months pregnant, but her belly was so big that some people thought she was about to give birth.

She was Erica. When she came to this slum, she decided to change her name into Erma Huo so people wouldn't recognize her. Without minding the shabby surroundings, she took the bowl of noodles and wolfed them down.

The woman who made the noodles for her was Tessie. Looking at her dirty face with a smile, she asked, "Are you leaving tonight?"

The money award for the first prize was five hundred thousand dollars, and the second was three hundred thousand.

After the competition, Erma immediately bought five air tickets to Y City using her money award.

Since she bought first class tickets, she spent around three hundred thousand dollars.

Two days later, at Y City Airport, a video of a woman advertising a name-brand dress appeared on the huge screen. She had a perfect figure and a beautiful face that attracted many people's attention.

An old man with grey hair walked out of the VIP corridor. Looking at the woman on the screen, he nodded with satisfaction. He then muttered to himself, "Wesley's daughter-in-law is indeed excellent. In just two years, she has become an international superstar. Alas, it's been three years, but I still don't know where Erica and my two grandchildren are. It's so disappointing!"

The old man was none other than Carlos. He put on his sunglasses and continued to walk towards the gate of the airport.

A few moments later, several kids passed by the same corridor. They stopped for a while and stood there, enjoying the advertisement on the big screen. "Aunt Chantel has become so popular in the past two years, hasn't she?" remarked one of them.

"Yes, that's right. I can see her everywhere," another boy said.

"Have you seen the movie Youth in Yesterday? She is the lead actress in that movie."

"Of course, I have. Her acting skill is so good that she can beat anyone else in the same movie."

"All right, that's enough. Let's go! If we are late, we won't be able to catch up to Grandpa."

While the children were walking and talking, they also attracted many people's attention. "Wow, they look exactly the same!"

"Yes, their clothes and faces are exactly the same. They are so handsome."

"They are too small to travel by themselves. I think they are only about four or five years old. Why is there no adult with them?"

At this moment, the boys that they were talking about ran to the exit hand in hand and stopped an old man.

A black limo halted in front of Carlos outside the exit. He was about to get in the car when suddenly, some cute little boys rushed to him while calling out loudly, "Grandpa! Grandpa!"

Matthew had always been the type of man who could calmly accept anything thrown his way. However, it took him a while to take in Carlos' words this time. 'My sons have shown up, and there are four of them... Or maybe five.

And there is still no sign of that woman? Humph. She had the nerve to get her sons back here, but she's going to remain gone.'

As Matthew's cars were on their way to the airport, Carlos took the opportunity to chat some more with the children. "Kids, how many sons have your mother actually given birth to in total?"

One of the quadruplets answered quickly, "Four. The black kid was adopted halfway."

Carlos nodded, feeling relieved for his son. "And what are your names?"

"Grandpa, I'm Adkins Huo, the eldest child."

"Grandpa, I'm Boswell Huo, and I'm the second child."

"Grandpa, I'm the third child. My name is Colman Huo."

"Grandpa, I'm Damian Huo. I'm the fourth child."

When it came to the black boy's turn, he looked at Carlos with his eyes wide open. Then he introduced himself, but his Chinese wasn't so fluent. "Grandpa, my name has fifteen characters. For your convenience, you may just call me Kenney."

A minute later, Carlos was confused again. He looked at the four children and still couldn't tell them apart. But how could he? They all looked exactly the same!

Learning their names didn't prove to be much useful either.

Noticing their grandpa's confusion, Adkins Huo told him a secret. "Grandpa, look at our clothes. They are embroidered with numbers. Aunt Tessie did them in order to distinguish us."

"I think it's disrespect to our mom," Boswell said as he shook his little head disapprovingly. Then he added, "How about this? If you don't take us to do the paternity test, I'll tell you where our mother is."

Carlos and Matthew raised their eyebrows at the same time. 'This boy sure knows how to negotiate at such a young age, ' they both thought. But of course, Matthew was interested in his proposal.

He pointed at Kenney with his chin and said, "Tell me about this foreign boy first, then you won't have to do the paternity test."

"If I tell you about Kenney, then I don't have to tell you where our mother is, do I? There can only be one condition for one question." Indeed, Boswell had the mind of a real businessman. He knew that everything must be exchanged for something of equal value.

Matthew nodded and said, "Okay." After all, his children had already appeared. It wouldn't take long before Erica showed up to see their sons.

"We picked Kenney up from the street one and a half years ago. We haven't found his parents yet, so he came to Y City with us." Since Matthew was his father, Boswell didn't hesitate to give a lengthy explanation.

'I see. Good thing Erica didn't cheat on me, ' Matthew thought, feeling relieved.

He put the two children down, put his hands in his pockets, and said slowly, "Get in the car now. You are going home with me."

The five kids walked towards the five cars that had been waiting for them. Although it would be their first time to ride a luxury car worth more than ten million dollars, everyone stayed calm.

When they were about to get into the cars at the same time, Matthew spoke from behind. "Who will go with me?" He wanted one of the kids to ride his car so that he could ask about Erica on their way home.

The five kids turned to look at him simultaneously. "I'll go with you," Boswell volunteered.

Matthew raised an eyebrow. It seemed that this little boy had a lot of conditions to exchange with him.

Adkins hurriedly stopped him and said with a frown, "Boswell, you can't betray Mom."

"I won't betray Mom. But do you want her and Aunt Tessie to live in Tow Village forever?" Boswell was worried about Erica, who was left in the village.

Upon hearing what he said, Adkins got in the car without saying anything more.

The next day, Wesley and Blair brought Hugo to the Huo family's manor to meet their grandsons.

Now, there were ten children in the manor. Everyone was laughing and talking, and there was so much love that the scene was spectacular.

The Huo family and the Li family were prosperous not only in the success of their business, but also because of their growing families.

In a village of K Country

As the night grew darker and darker, the village became quieter. Soon, only the sound of chickens crowing and dogs barking could be heard.

A woman in tight black clothes, with a camera around her neck, slipped along the wall and quickly rushed forward. She had completely integrated herself into the darkness.

Finally, she stopped at the gate of an old yard, where a few men were drinking, eating meat, and talking about disgusting topics.

She quietly went to a corner, tied the rope that hung from her waist to the big tree beside the wall, and began to climb up nimbly.

But... "Woof, woof, woof!" Suddenly, a dog began to bark.

'Oh, crap!' She had not expected that a nearby dog would discover her and ruin her plans!

The woman was so frightened when she heard the sound that she almost fell from the wall. As suspected, the noise attracted the attention of the men who were drinking and eating meat inside the yard. They dropped their chopsticks and ran toward the sound.

Her heart thudded in her chest as she grabbed the rope and slid down.

Before the men caught up with her, she retrieved and coiled the rope, and then ran into the safety of the darkness.

"Pike! Someone is over there. Hurry up!"

"Let's go!"

After all, it was shameful that a group of grown men couldn't handle a few boys! "Where did they go?" As soon as he heard that the four little boys had left, reluctance surged in his
