Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1086 [Eleven Jewell]

Everyone on set was in shock when they witnessed the sudden change of events. “What are you guys doing?! Somebody help her and call the doctor!” Stuart uttered with an ugly look on his face. Only then did the crew return to their senses and rush over to check on Bella.

Bella had curled up on the ground in a strange posture. The bag of fake blood that was attached to her had ruptured, and her whole body was covered in the liquid while a trail of blood was dripping down her forehead. It was a tragic scene.

The crew wanted to help Bella up, but she screamed as soon as they touched her. That was when they noticed that her left leg was in a weird position. No one dared to help her after that. The only thing they could do at the time was to wait for the ambulance to arrive.

Bella’s fans were terrified by the scene. When they saw that no one was helping their idol up, they immediately rushed over to check on her while yelling insults at Stella.

Stuart’s expression did not look good. He was worried that the fans would cause more trouble, so he had the security guards block their way and had Shea lead Stella to the lounge. To Stuart, the two important things right now were Bella’s condition and the angry fans, not who was responsible for the fall.

After some time, the paramedics arrived and rushed Bella to the hospital. Stella silently sat in the SUV and thought about what had happened. Then, she finally understood why Bella wanted to take on such a dangerous stunt herself. Initially, Stella knew that Bella was trying to give her fans the illusion that she was being bullied on set and make them hate her even more. However, she did not expect Bella to deliberately hurt herself in the process.

‘The Bella I knew wouldn’t have done such a thing. She cherished her looks very much as a star. She would have never hurt herself just to deepen the people’s hatred for me. When she tried to frame me for “pushing” her into the water on the cruise, I recall her protecting her face as I dragged her with me. That is why I never expected her to do something like this.'

Stella realized Bella's true intentions when she leaned forward during the falling scene. However, it was too late for her to do anything in that situation. Stella tried her best to withdraw her force and avoid touching Bella when she created a pushing motion earlier. The strength she used was not enough to make her fall down the stairs, but no one really knew that except for her and Bella. From their perspective, Stella had pushed Bella on the shoulders, and the actor had fallen.

Shea handed Stella a bottle of water and said, "Here. Have a sip."

Stella came back to her senses and took the water bottle. She unscrewed the cap, took a sip, and asked in a low voice, "How is she?"

"Her leg looks broken, and there's an injury on her forehead. No one knows much for now, so we have to wait for news from the hospital." Shea paused for a while before she continued, "I've contacted the company.

Someone will take care of it."

Suddenly, Stella received a text on her phone. It was a hate message from an unknown number. The person blamed Stella for Bella's injury, saying that she had forcefully pushed her on purpose. [This goes to show that you would go to any lengths just to be famous. Go to hell, Stella.]

It was obvious that Shea saw the message too. 'These haters are really something. It's not surprising that they would send something like this through text since they have different ways to get an actor's contact information.'

"Don't reply to it. Put your phone on Do Not Disturb mode, and take a screenshot of that message," said Shea.

Stella did as she was told. Shea also asked her to turn off the comments on her Facebook page so that haters could not leave mean texts on her posts when they found out about what happened.

Following that, Stella logged onto her account and saw Bella's injury trending online. Among the searches about Bella's fall was the news about Stella being the perpetrator. Some of the entries included [Stella Jewell Pushing Bella Young Down the Stairs], [Stella Jewell is A Bully], and [Stella Jewell is A Murderer].

The video of Stella "pushing" Bella had gone viral on Facebook. It gained millions of views in just an hour. Stella watched the video closely and noticed that it was taken at an angle where Bella's expression was clear but not hers. At the same time, the video showed Stella pushing Bella and how horrified Bella looked when she fell backward.

Bella's fans attacked Stella for her indifference; even the netizens could not stand it.

[You call that pushing? It's obviously murder!]

[Look at Bella's expression! She was completely defenseless! They asked for the person who directed the action to come forward, but there was no way this was preplanned. I mean, just look at how shocked she looked!]

[Girls support girls. How could Stella be so cruel?]

[It's well known that Stella has had a long-standing grudge against Bella. She literally bought likes and followers during the showcase of Secret Sweetheart just to pull Bella's numbers down. After she became an actor, she often used Bella's name to get on the trending page. I think she knows she wouldn't have become famous without Bella's help.]

[I heard that the original actor for the queen in The Palace was banned from playing the role because of Stella's sponsor. Bella spent five years climbing the industry to get to where she is today on her own. That scum better stay away from her.]

[As expected, she's a cold-hearted bitch.]

[How could you? Bella's life is as important as anyone else's]

[My parents and I liked her as the queen in The Palace. I can't believe she would do something like this. She has officially lost some fans.]

[I don't know why you guys think she's a good actor. Sure, she's pretty, and she delivers her lines well, but her expressions are not it. I love The Palace, but her face always looks so bland compared to the other actors on the show. If that's what you guys call good acting, then I can be an actor too.]

[I wanted to ask if you guys actually think she was good in Jurisdiction. Like, I don't get it. She's a bit too much, in my opinion.]

[Same here! I don't know how she became an actor, and I certainly don't understand those who say she's gorgeous.

Even a random girl from the streets would look better than her. Her fans are so brainless.]

[Careful. Her fans are going to kill you if they see this. She's at the top of the beauty ranking among the new generation of actors.]

[Can they remove her scenes from The Palace? Every time she comes up on the screen, people keep talking about her looks in the live comments; it's really affecting my viewing experience.]

[If she did push Bella, I don't think an apology would suffice. She has to go to jail for this. And they shouldn't just delete her part from The Palace. She should be removed from everything if she's found guilty!]

[They better remove her ASAP! She's so annoying.]

What was initially a wave of public opinion now turned into a criticism of creative work. Stella frowned as she understood the real reason why Bella fell down the stairs on purpose.

"Stop reading the comments," Shea said as she grabbed Stella's phone and logged her out from Facebook. "Don't get on there for a few days. Don't do anything. Just wait for news from the company."

Stella returned to her senses and smiled. "Don't worry. I'm fine."

“Okay,” Shea replied. Afraid that Stella could not control herself, she deleted the Facebook app from her phone. Stella did not stop her.

Instead, she said, “Shea, didn’t Bella have protection on? How could she break her leg?”

‘She’s not a porcelain doll. Why would her leg be broken after falling down around forty flights of stairs with protection on?’ Shea was also puzzled about the situation.¹ Bella couldn’t have suffered from such a serious injury, even if she accidentally fell,’ she thought.

Once Shea stepped out of the room, Stuart and a few people walked in. One of their main leads had suffered an injury, and it was not a trivial matter, especially since she was injured on set. Not only did this affect the shooting schedule, but it also affected the public’s view of the crew and the movie’s reputation.

Previously, the company was under a lot of heat because of the incident regarding Bella’s allergy and the death of Yolanda Fenley. At that time, filming was delayed again and again. It was unfortunate that Bella was now admitted to the hospital once more for an injury.

Stuart had been in the movie business for more than twenty years, yet he had never experienced such a difficult shoot before. The expression on his face looked bad. He did not expect this incident to reach the upper management so quickly.

The person standing next to Stuart was a senior executive at the film production company, Zachery Jensen. With a gloomy look on his face, he wanted to meet Stella. Stuart did not know what was going to happen, but it was beyond his control. All he could do was lead Zachery to the lounge where Stella was at.

“Mr. Winfield,” Stella stood up and called out as soon as she saw Stuart. But the man did not speak. Instead, the lean man next to him, who was 5.7 feet and in his early forties, asked, “So, you’re Stella Jewell?”

Stella did not reply. She was thrown off by the indifference in his voice. This was the first time she met Zachery, and she felt a little uncomfortable being around him.

“This is Mr. Jensen. He’s one of the people in charge of the film,” Stuart introduced.

“Nice to meet you, Mr. Jensen,” said Stella.

Zachery shot her a glance and said, “The company has prepared an apology statement. Add my assistant on WhatsApp, and he’ll send it to you. Then, post the official apology on Facebook.”

“An apology statement?” Stella bit down on her words. “Who am I apologizing to?”

“Bella Young and her fans, of course!” Zachery said impatiently. “Do you know how bad the impact of this matter is? If Bella’s leg does not recover soon, the movie will be put on hold indefinitely. It’s a large investment. One extra day of delay costs us tens of millions of dollars. Do you want to bear this responsibility? Issue the statement to control the public’s opinion so that the incident wouldn’t affect the crew’s reputation.”

Upon hearing that, Stella’s face darkened. “I refuse to make the statement. I didn’t push Bella. She was the one who didn’t follow the directions. I withdrew my strength the moment she touched my hands. This accident has nothing to do with me. I won’t apologize.”

Stella’s reply made Zachery’s expression turn cold. “The video of you pushing Bella is all over the internet, and you’re still trying to defend yourself? What kind of grudge does Bella have against you? Why would she hurt herself just to frame you?”

Stella’s body tensed up at that moment. “I think you should be asking her this question.”

“Where did you get the confidence to say something like that after pushing someone down the stairs?”

“I told you I didn’t push her.”

“You’re saying that but where’s your proof?”

While they were talking, Stella's phone rang.

It was Keegan calling, probably because he had seen the news on the internet. Stella tried to leave to answer the call, but Zachery glanced at her. Then, a man came forward and snatched her phone away.

"What are you doing?" Stella frowned and asked.

"Since you don't want to post the apology, we'll post it for you," said Zachery, who was ready to go through her phone.

Stella turned red. She picked up a cup of coffee on the table nearby and threw it at Zachery's face. Zachery cursed as he wiped off the coffee from his eyes, while Stella grabbed her phone with a cold expression and said, "My agency will handle the post. The document I signed with your company is just a business cooperation contract. You have no right to dictate what I do with my personal social media account."

Stella paused for a moment and continued, "I've said what I need to say. You can check the CCTVs if you don't believe me. Don't accuse me of doing something I didn't do just because people are talking about it in the comments. If I were the one who pushed Bella down the stairs, then I would die a horrible death. But, if she was the one who did it to herself, then she deserves the broken leg."

Zachery was so angry that his face turned red. He was about to say something when Stuart interrupted him. "Mr. Jensen, it's too early to make this kind of decision. If we force her to apologize now, things will get complicated when the truth comes out."

"She's your responsibility!" Zachery pushed Stuart's hand away and said in a cold voice.

At the same time, Shea entered the room and saw that Zachery was ready to leave. She took a few glances at him and withdrew her gaze. From Stella's expression, she could tell that something unfavorable must have happened while she was gone.

Before Shea could come up with theories about what had happened, Stuart called out to Stella and said in a low voice, “Stay home and rest for the next two days. I’ll update you if there’s any progress.”

Stella wanted to explain herself but decided not to when she saw how tired Stuart looked. The more she tried to clear herself without any proof, the more it would look like she was guilty. ‘I shouldn’t waste my time here,’ thought Stella. She entered the car and called Keegan.

“Where are you right now?” Keegan asked as soon as the call connected.

“I’m in the car, and I’m about to go home.”

“Don’t go back to your place. Your address has been doxed online. There are journalists stationed all around Clouditude International. You won’t be able to get in.”

Stella was stunned. She laughed wryly, thinking about how much she had underestimated Bella’s influence on her huge fan base.

“I’ll send you a location. Ask the driver to take you there. I’ll be there in a bit.”

“I didn’t push her,” Stella said softly.

“I know,” Keegan replied.

“But, I did kick her off the ship when we were on the cruise last time.”

Keegan chuckled and whispered, “I know that too.”

Stella was silent for a while before she said, “You mentioned that Bella saved someone significant to you, but you didn’t tell me who it was. And I won’t ask you about it now, but I want to know... Are you going to intervene if I go against Bella?”

Stella did not wait for Keegan to respond. Instead, she continued, “If you do, at least let me do what I need to, and you can do what you need to afterward. I have to take my anger out on her even if I don’t win in the end.”

Hearing that, Keegan sighed and said, “Don’t worry. I won’t get in the way. I’ve already paid back what’s due to her long ago. But it’s better if you keep your hands clean. I’ll deal with the payoff.”

Keegan believed in Stella's ability to deal with Bella herself. However, he was worried about what it would do to her career. Stella had made her revenge obvious when it came to the incident regarding Arthur and Aurora. This was also true when she exposed Sophia's identity during an event.

This did not matter when Stella was just a nobody. But now, she was an actor with a decent number of followers. The recent incident had also caused her to gain a lot of attention. Keegan was worried that he would be unable to deal with the aftermath if Stella handled the matter the way she did before.

Stella closed her eyes, as she suddenly felt a little tired. 'I thought filming my scenes well was enough to fulfill my duties as an actor. But the reality is people who work hard don't get the appreciation they deserve. Instead, cheaters and backstabbers are the ones who get to climb to the top. Bella couldn't push an evil narrative on me on her own, so she used the power of the internet to bring me down. But, framing me is just a front to drag The Palace through the mud. The exponential rise of haters in the comments shows that someone else is behind this.'

Stella could feel the dangers of being in the film industry for the first time ever.

Suddenly, Shea asked, "Stella, what did Zachery Jensen say to you earlier?" Stella came back to her senses.

"That dude who looked like an addict is called Zachery?"

Shea was taken aback by those words. 'That's... one way to describe him,' she thought. "Zachery is a shareholder at Jetsun Entertainment. He's one of the people in charge of the film production in the company. He comes from a PR background, so he's rather sharp and brutal in his ways. He accumulated a good amount of wealth during his years in public relations. That was when he joined Jetsun Entertainment and became one of the shareholders."

Shea paused for a moment and said in a low voice, "He does hold another title to his name though, and you will understand everything once I let you in on it."

“What is it?” Stella asked as she was full of curiosity.

“Kelly Harper’s husband,” Shea said in disdain.

Stella was baffled by the answer. ‘No wonder Kelly was signed on for tons of famous work and dominated the industry. The last time I saw her on Facebook was when she was interviewed for creating rumors about me long ago. Kelly and Bella had always had a good relationship. The fact that her husband is involved in this matter makes it even more suspicious,’ she thought.

“Did you know that they crossed out Kelly’s name on The Palace? They even unfollowed her on their official account.”

Feeling surprised, Stella asked, “When did that happen?” She had always skipped the credit rolls when watching a show, so she naturally did not know that someone’s name was removed.

“Honestly, I’m not so sure. I noticed it a few days ago and asked around to get more information. It seems that Daniel Wood had something to do with it. Kelly Harper’s husband invested a ton of money into the movie to ensure a role for her. But Daniel called the shots and said that he would pull out if Kelly was working in the film. So, the producers had no choice but to kick her out.”

Stella was unaware of this matter. Since Kelly rarely came to the set, she did not think that it was unusual when she did not show up at all. Now that she thought about it, it was strange that Kelly did not go to the wrap party.

Shea then gave her analysis of the situation. “Daniel Wood removed Kelly Harper from the crew mainly because of you and the former actor who played the queen. He put a lot of effort into choosing actors fit for the roles. With his temper, it’s no surprise that he kicked the former actor out after realizing that she could not do her parts well.”

‘Knowing her, Kelly would never stand for this. This makes Zachery Jensen appearing here even more suspicious.’
