Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1146 [Eleven Jewell]

Vermont was speechless after knowing that Richie had gone through his clothes and torn them up. 'That dog is targeting me!'

*A mini scene.

On some random day, Keegan received a text from Stella while he was working. [HR is so expensive right now.]

[I think the prices are alright,] Keegan replied.

[It was cheaper last year.]

[Prices are increasing due to inflation, my dear.]

[But, it's over my budget.]

[Are you in need of HR?] Keegan asked.

[Yeah. I've been working too much lately, and I've been staying up late. I really need to treat myself,] Stella responded.

Keegan thought of how Stella had stayed up all night shooting a movie recently and how her dark circles were getting worse. So, he texted, [I'll make some arrangements.]

[Thanks, honey. You're the best,] Stella replied.

Felicity gave her a thumbs up and said, "So, this is how you save your money..."

"I'm just giving him a chance to perform."

Felicity gave a knowing look and used the same tactic on Vermont.

Vermont responded in seconds. [The client had dropped off a couple of those at the office. I'll have them delivered to your house later.]

Felicity continued to apply what she learned from Stella and said, [That's rather perfunctory of you. How could you give me something someone else gifted you?]

Vermont's eyelids twitched when he received that text. 'Why does the way she talks sound so familiar? It doesn't seem like something Miss Bandit would say. On the contrary, it sounds like Keegan's girl,' thought Vermont.

However, he still replied, [Be good. You're pregnant right now, so you can't use poor-quality items. We'll go to their headquarters once you give birth, okay?]

Felicity immediately obeyed Vermont's words. Stella, who was at the side, shook her head and said, "You believe him? He will use the fact that you'll be breastfeeding as an excuse after you give birth to deter you from getting what you want. Hasn't he made enough empty promises?"

Vermont was frugal by nature. This was especially clear to Felicity after their marriage. He canceled all their annual club cards except those used in the two usual spots where he often discussed business. Vermont loved collecting sports cars but was forced to cut down on spending. Even when Felicity wanted a new vehicle, Vermont rejected her idea on the grounds that she was pregnant and not in the best condition to drive. He then assigned a driver to pick her up and drop her off whenever she needed to travel.

Felicity then thought about how Keegan had always fulfilled Stella's requests and felt that Vermont did not care about her enough. 'I shouldn't have gotten together with a man that has so many ex-girlfriends,' she thought.

While Felicity was sulking, Vermont sent her a picture of a real estate purchase agreement. [Pick a date, Miss Bandit. We're moving.]

Felicity looked at the address of the property and was stunned. [You bought the villa?!] she asked.

[I have to give you the best. Otherwise, your mom would think that I'm a good-for-nothing son-in-law and keeps wanting you to go home.]

[Did you pay in full, or did you take out a loan?]

[I paid in full, of course. The interest rate at the bank is too high. I'm not letting them earn my money. I would have bought it sooner if I had the cash.]

Felicity was immediately overwhelmed with emotion. 'No wonder he stopped buying sports cars. He was trying to save up to buy us a house!'

Suddenly, Stella's phone rang. It was Aldor. "We're here, Mrs. Kane."

Stella opened the door, expecting a gift box from the skincare brand known as HR. She was stunned to see Aldor and another man at the door. "Uh..." 1

"Let me introduce you to the top human resources manager in Rivera. He has an eye for details and is good at recruiting people. He would definitely be able to make your work life easier, Mrs. Kane."

Stella's eyelids twitched violently, and Felicity's laughter was heard from behind. "Hahaha... I can't believe Keegan thought you were talking about human resources! Ahahaha..."

Stella was at a loss for words.

Felicity was embarrassed about Richie tearing up Vermont's clothes. "I think he likes you. I've never seen him so excited to see anyone before," she said, trying to repair the damage.

Just as she said that, they heard Richie tearing another piece of clothing, and Vermont was utterly speechless.

Felicity's grandmother was a kind little old lady. After she saw how miserable Vermont looked, she immediately said, "Felicity, go and grab a set of your father's old clothes for your friend to change into. You can bring him to buy new clothes in the morning."

"Alright," Felicity said and immediately ran upstairs to get the clothes.

Vermont was dirty and covered in thorns. He was too embarrassed to sit down on the couch, so he stood obediently in the living room. Although he was in a mess, his silver tongue remained unchanged. "Hi, Grandma," he said.

The old lady smiled and said, "When Felicity said she was bringing a friend home for the holidays, I didn't expect it to be a young man."

Vermont paused when he heard that. "She told you I was her friend?"

The old lady was taken aback by the question. "Aren't you?"

"No, yeah. I am," said Vermont with a smile.

The old lady was skeptical after he said that. 'What's with his tone? Could it be that he's her boyfriend?' The woman's gaze changed immediately. She eyed Vermont from top to bottom and thought, 'This tall young man is rather polite. His looks are... too dirty to tell right now. But he doesn't seem very smart since he was chased around by Richie.'

"What's your name, young man?"

"My name is Vermont Snyder. You can call me Vermont."

While Felicity was getting the clothes, Vermont was downstairs talking with her grandmother. It was like they were best friends. When the old lady saw Felicity coming, she asked her to take Vermont to the bathroom and went out to call Florence.

The town was a tight-knit community; everyone in the neighborhood knew each other well. Florence was addicted to poker and dancing. When she was not busy at work, she would go to one of her friend's houses to dance and play. She would usually come home around 2:00 a.m.

Felicity's grandmother would normally let her be, but things were different today. 'I have to call her to come home and meet Felicity's boyfriend,' she thought.

Felicity's childhood home did not only look good on the outside but, it also looked magnificent on the inside. The tiles and beams outside looked like modern art, while the decoration in the house had a mix of antique and rustic styles.

Vermont no longer believed Felicity when she said she came from a low-income family. 'They're rather well off,' he thought. Still, he was happy that he had the chance to meet her family.

"Is no one else home other than your grandma?" Vermont asked as he followed her around.

"Yeah. My aunt and uncle don't live in this area. It's just my mom and my grandma."

"What about your dad?"

Felicity turned on the lights and said, "My parents got divorced when I was eight. So, my mom raised me on her own."

Vermont did not know what to say. When Felicity's grandmother told her to grab her father's old clothes, Vermont did not realize that it was because they were divorced. He simply thought that he was working outstation.

"I'm sorry," he said in a low voice.

"What's there to be sorry about? It's not like he's dead."

Once again, Vermont did not know how to respond to that.

'It seems like she's fine with it,' thought Vermont. "May I know why you still have his clothes?"

"Well, my mom bought them. There was no way we were going to let him have it," Felicity rightfully said. "My mom was going to give the clothes to my uncle, but they didn't fit him. She was reluctant to get rid of it, so she kept it. A lot of the labels have not even been removed yet. They're probably considered antiques."

"Do you have a good relationship with your dad?" asked Vermont, wanting to learn more so that it would be easier for Felicity's family to like him.

“It’s not good per se, but it’s not bad either. We didn’t really have much time together. My dad is not from here. When my mom married him, she lived far away from here for six or seven years. She then took me back to live with my grandma and got divorced in less than two years. My dad was still in school back then, so I didn’t get to see him much. He finished high school and wanted to study abroad. My mom was not willing to go with him to the city, and they had a fight about it. Since they couldn’t come to an agreement, they decided to go their separate ways and signed the papers. My dad has been pretty good to me, but there’s been a lot of tension between him and my mom. He started a family a long time ago. I have a half-brother, you know? But his current wife doesn’t like us being in contact, so I don’t really take much initiative to get in touch with him.” Vermont picked out the gist of everything and thought, ‘Okay. Mom hates the old man. In conclusion, approach with caution.’

Felicity opened the bathroom door and handed him a towel. “Wash up. And, remember to throw out your dirty clothes later.”

“My back hurts,” said Vermont.

“Well, of course it hurts. You freaking fell from a tree! You shouldn’t have run when Richie chased after you, dummy.”

“It’s not like I wanted to run. That dog is massive. He chased after me with his tongue out, drooling all over. It’s called reflexes, Felicity.”

Felicity laughed and said, “Look at you. You’re the big boss of a company, yet you got chased by Richie. Don’t you know that the more you run when a dog chases you, the more excited it gets? The trick is to bend down and pretend to pick something up to throw at them. I guarantee that 80% of dogs would fall for it.”

“What about the other 20%? Half of them are rabid dogs while the others are police dogs. What do I do if I come in contact with them?”

“Cut the crap and wash up.” Felicity pushed Vermont into the bathroom and said, “I’m going to go get us both something to eat.”

Seeing her go, Vermont closed the door reluctantly. He thought his experience tonight was strange, but there was a bigger surprise waiting for him. Vermont finished cleaning himself up and changed into a fresh set of clothes. He carried his dirty clothes out and went to ask Felicity where he could put them. His clothes were covered in thorns, so they could not be directly thrown into the wash.

Felicity was cooking. She asked Vermont to grab a hamper on the front lawn and put his clothes in there. "I'll deal with it tomorrow," she said.

Vermont went to the yard to look for the hamper and found it tucked away under the sink. He crouched down to get it. But something kicked him right in the ass. He then heard a female voice behind him say, "You thief! How dare you steal from my house!"

As she said that, the woman grabbed a broom and hit Vermont. Felicity saw that as soon as she walked out the door. "Mom! That's my friend!" she yelled.

Both Florence and Vermont were stunned.

'I should have checked my horoscope before coming out today,' thought Vermont.

Once the mall incident became viral, the public's opinion gradually began to change. The netizens were questioning Bella's fan group after they lost control of their actions. The video of Stella protecting the girl from the glass also made the public view her differently.

It was clear that Stella had a chance to escape when danger struck, but she chose to pull a stranger away from danger. This contradicted the public's assumption that she had pushed Bella down the stairs because of jealousy. They believed that someone who was cruel and vicious could not show that kind of compassion.

At the same time, the girl's parents also sent out a post on Facebook, thanking Stella for keeping their daughter safe.

The girl's parents had handwritten the thousand-word thank you letter. In addition to expressing their gratitude, there was a section detailing their daughter's account of the incident. The girl said that she had entered the store around the same time as Stella and had witnessed Stella's argument with the two minors.

She said that one of the girls had pulled Stella's mask off and held her phone in the celebrity's face. That was when Stella pushed her phone away.

The post also stated that Stella was not responsible for the girl's fall. Another girl had pushed Stella during the argument, which caused her to accidentally bump into the first girl when she stepped back.

That was the first time the girl, who was saved, had seen Stella in real life. She could not help but take a few videos and photos of the incident to show her friends some firsthand news. She stood very close to them in order to get a clearer shot of the incident.

The scene was very heated, but it was mostly the two perpetrators who were yelling, screaming, and pointing their fingers at Stella. On the other hand, Stella did not say much or take any action. [She pushed our daughter away from danger when someone threw a glass at her,] they said.

[My husband and I are in the media industry. We did not feel good about Ms. Jewell after seeing all the negative news about her online. Especially since that video seemed clear, and Ms. Jewell never apologized for the incident or responded to the accusations. I was surprised when my child told me that she was the one who shielded her from harm.

[My daughter's description of Ms. Jewell was a far cry from her internet image as a corrupt entertainer. She did not take credit for saving our daughter's life and did not go around parading it. When we contacted Ms. Jewell's company to thank her, they relayed a message saying that it was no trouble. That was when I began to doubt the comments online about her.

[I then asked my colleague to contact the cast of Jurisdiction to find out what kind of person Ms. Jewell truly is. I believe that no matter how well an actor she is, she is bound to slip up and show her true colors. However, the cast and crew of Jurisdiction all said that Ms. Jewell is a kind person. When the team did not have enough funds to supply costumes in the early stages of shooting, Ms. Jewell generously shared her clothes with the other actors and even guided them on how to act in front of the camera.

[Her colleagues said that she does whatever she can and gives it her all. It's illogical to say that she pushed one of her colleagues down the stairs because she was jealous of her. My family is ashamed of ourselves for ever believing in those rumors. We hope that everyone can learn to screen what they see on the internet and think independently for themselves. Don't be so easily influenced by the media. We also urge those who know the truth about the situation to step forward and clear Ms. Jewell's name.]

The thank you letter caused a stir in the online community.

The official account for Jurisdiction shared the post with the caption, [Not to mention starring in the show for free and providing us free publicity.]

Following that, a federated charity came out and said, [Ms. Jewell has donated seven hundred thousand dollars to fund education for children in impoverished areas. Please refer to our homepage for more details about the cause.]

The posts from the two verified accounts heated up the situation. Then, the crew from Motives for Murder also created a post stating that the staff who were in charge of the actors' safety were responsible for the mishap.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1150 [Eleven Jewell]

[There is something wrong with the angle of the video circulating on the Internet. Stella did not exert her force at all. I clearly saw her from behind but did not dare to speak out because of the fame and power that the other party holds. I'm overjoyed to see her being dragged down these past few days. I should have come forward sooner.

[I was one of the staff members responsible for Bella's protective gear at that time. Strangely enough, Bella asked me to help her add an extra set of knee pads that day. There was no need to do so since the danger level for that scene was not high. It seems like she knew she was going to be badly injured.]

As more and more people came out, the public had different views about the situation. 1

Bella was in the hospital at that time. Her eyes reddened with anger when she saw the viral posts on the internet. She tried to call the mystery person who had contacted her before, but the number was no longer in service. The man had said that he would reach out to Bella and did not like it when she contacted him first.

Bella was mad that the call could not get through. She lashed out at Tammy and instructed her to remove the bad press.

Tammy did not appreciate being yelled at by Bella, but she still did what she was told. She tried to take down the posts by reporting them, but none of the social media moderators were willing to do that. Tammy wanted to bribe them with money, but they did not accept it. 'There's only one possibility. Someone has already paid them to keep those posts up!' she thought.

"They won't take down those posts, Bella. It's not too late to send out a statement explaining what happened that day and say that it was just a misunderstanding," said Tammy.

"Are you crazy? They'd think I'm guilty of hurting myself and framing Stella!" Bella yelled.

Tammy's face turned ugly as she mumbled, "So, what now?"

"What now?! Is asking that the only thing you can do? Have you learned nothing from being around Wein all this time? Would I have asked you to deal with it if I knew what to do?!"

Tammy immediately shut her mouth. 'You were the one who was in a hurry to leave Elegant Media and get rid of your exmanager, Wein. Why would he tell me everything, knowing that we're close? He's not a fool,' she thought.

Bella was worried about the sudden change in the situation. Soon, a new matter came to light, and she had no time to handle the problem she was facing with Stella.

An article about Andrea Sonn's suicide three years ago had been wildly circulated on WhatsApp that afternoon. The report pointed the blame at Bella for setting up Andrea to be sexually assaulted back then and exposing the matter online after that. Various details were included in the article, along with a variety of evidence.

The post entailed the story of Andrea's family members suffering from illnesses and dying from trying to avenge her death. Subsequently, a video of Andrea and Bella checking into a hotel after getting drunk at a party was also exposed. Bella's figure was visible in the clip. She turned to leave after watching Andrea being taken away by the man who assaulted her.
