Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1201 [Eleven Jewell]

Hylda froze, and her eyes widened as she looked at Olivia. ‘That can’t be right! I’ve checked this wedding venue multiple times when everything was being set up, and there were no cameras near the gazebo.’

The area was surrounded by lush greenery, which made it difficult for people to spy on Hylda and Xenia when they were having their conversation. It was the perfect place for Hylda to execute her scheme without leaving any traces behind. She had even consulted the park administrator of Dragon Lagoon to confirm the locations of all the surveillance cameras to ensure that there were no hiccups in her plan.

‘What the hell is Olivia on about?’ thought Hylda. She forced herself to remain composed and asked, “What is the meaning of this, Mrs. Chapman? Do you think I’m lying?”

Olivia put on an innocent-looking face and explained, “Mrs. Jewell, as the owner of Dragon Lagoon, it is my responsibility to ensure that the facilities I provide are safe for use. Since I would be liable if anything happens to my tenants or their guests due to amenity issues, I’ve installed multiple CCTVs around the area to monitor the place. I don’t mean to question your honesty, Mrs. Jewell. I’m just suggesting we check the surveillance footage to find out the truth.”

Hearing that, Xenia was quick to react. Tears streamed down her cheeks as she said, ‘Mr. Jewell, I swear I didn’t push her. She asked me to come here, and we were just talking when she suddenly grabbed my arms and jumped off the-.’

“That’s enough! Stop trying to frame my mom for what you’ve done!” Sophia interrupted.

“Let’s not jump to conclusions, Ms. Jewell. How can you be absolutely certain that this young lady pushed your mother without looking at the surveillance footage?” Vermont asked in disdain.

“It’s obviously her! My mom’s pregnant and can barely climb the stairs. There’s no way she could push someone off the railing!” Sophia angrily retorted.

“Exactly. It would be difficult for Mrs. Jewell to climb the stairs. Why did she go to the gazebo when she knew that it was so high up? Did the young lady carry her up there just to push her?”

Sophia was taken aback. Feeling both embarrassed and furious, she asked, “Are you trying to imply that my mom framed her?”

Vermont shrugged. “I’m just pointing out the obvious. There’s no need to get feisty, Ms. Jewell. Like Mrs. Chapman said, we can check the surveillance to see what happened. Why don’t we just do that instead of making assumptions? Don’t tell me you’re scared to reveal the truth.”

Vermont’s words were sharp, leaving Sophia at a loss for a quick comeback.

“I’m not scared!” Sophia said.

Surprised, Vermont said, “Then, let’s find out who the real culprit is. By the way, there’s no reason to be mad, Ms. Jewell. I never said that Mrs. Jewell did it.”

“You-”

“Enough, Sophia!” Hylda stepped in to stop her daughter. She turned to Albert with a pale face and said, “I’m not going to argue with someone like her. We can watch the surveillance footage if you don’t believe me.”

Seeing how disheartened she looked, Albert felt that he was being ridiculous for suspecting that she would risk her own safety to harm Xenia. ‘Hylda is not a foolish person,’ he thought.

“Alright. I trust you,” whispered Albert.

Just then, the park manager approached Olivia and said, “Madam, we’ve found the surveillance footage you requested. We’re currently making a copy which will be sent to your phone shortly.”

Hylda’s lower back and abdomen were aching as she thought, ‘Fucking hell.

I can’t believe that she actually has CCTV footage.’ Suddenly, she felt a warm liquid gushing out of her lower body, and her face turned pale as she realized the severity of the situation. “Albert, the... the baby...”

Albert was alarmed when he noticed that Hylda's dress was stained in red. At the same time, Xenia was also experiencing excruciating abdominal pain. She curled up on the ground and held her lower abdomen while crying out in agony.

Albert was unable to care for both women simultaneously. Fortunately, the ambulance had arrived just in time to rush Hylda and Xenia to the hospital.

Since Stella's plan was only halfway near completion, she quickly devised a reason to tag along. She glanced at Albert and saw him stepping forward to say, "Let's head to Rotona Pinnacle Hospital. They have better medical facilities there. I'll have someone to get things prepared." He then turned to Stella and said, "Stella, some of Raine's belongings are still at the hospital. I've already asked the staff to keep them somewhere safe. Would you like to come along and pick them up?"

Stella's expression turned cold as she replied, "Why didn't you just have someone deliver them to me before this?"

Albert lowered his gaze and said, "Well, I missed you and wanted to use this as an opportunity to see you."

Everyone found Albert's response to be cheesy.

The group then made their way to Rotona Pinnacle Hospital. Aldor drove Stella, Keegan, Vermont, and Felicity to the hospital while the Jewell family traveled in another vehicle.

"Did anyone notice that when the homewrecker, Hylda, was being put into the ambulance, her younger brother seemed extremely concerned? It's like he's the father of her child," Felicity whispered as they were on their way.

The others remained silent, leaving Felicity puzzled. "What? Am I wrong?"

Vermont patted Felicity's head and explained, "Don't you recognize him? Remember when you were in my car, and you saw Hylda being intimate with a man during her hospital visit? Yeah, they're the same person."

“But, the man I saw was her young lover, no? I’m talking about her younger brother, guys-” Felicity paused and said, “Wait! Her brother is her lover?! She’s got some nerve to do all this right under Albert’s nose. No wonder she looked so anxious when the other Ian appeared. Poor Albert.”

Everyone was at a loss for words at Felicity’s late revelation.

“So, were there actually surveillance cameras at the gazebo?” Keegan asked Stella.

“Not initially. But, Mrs. Chapman had one installed last night,” Stella replied in a hushed tone. She had asked Olivia to keep an eye on the gazebo, so Olivia did her a favor by installing a CCTV.

When Olivia was renovating the place, the construction workers found that the terrain near the gazebo was low, which caused it to be built high up. She wanted to demolish the whole thing but was lazy and eager to rent out the place. So, she decided to put it off. At the same time, not many people were using the facility. For that reason, she neglected to install surveillance in the area.

Olivia checked the area when she was asked to but found nothing suspicious. Despite that, Stella could not shake off the uneasy feeling she had. She was certain that Hylda had deliberately chosen the gazebo to commit her crime. Unable to find any evidence, she thought it would be best to install a camera and see what Hylda was up to.

As fate would have it, the camera proved invaluable that night. Stella could not believe her luck.

Hylda had chosen Dragon Lagoon, not just for its grand setting but also because it was the perfect location for what she wanted to do. What she did not expect was that Olivia was Stella’s ally. Hylda was doomed the minute she rented Dragon Lagoon as her wedding venue.

After some time, Stella’s thoughts shifted to Xenia, and she frowned.

“What’s wrong?” Keegan asked.

“Something doesn’t seem right with Xenia. I thought she was faking it when she was clutching her stomach earlier. But, I’m starting to have doubts after seeing how pale she looked when she was taken away. Somehow, it doesn't seem like an act."

Keegan barely paid any attention to Xenia amidst the turmoil. So, he did not notice what Stella was talking about. After contemplating for a brief moment, he reassured Stella by saying, "Don't worry, we're almost at the hospital. The doctors will conduct a thorough examination."

Stella could only suppress her concerns and hoped that nothing would go wrong.

Soon, they arrived at the hospital. Albert instructed the medical staff to take Xenia to the gynecology department, prioritizing his son's safety. He did not care what other people thought of him as long as one of his sons could be saved. As per his request, Hylda and Xenia were taken to operating rooms on different floors. Since Albert was Hylda's husband, he had to wait outside her surgery room patiently despite being worried about his mistress.

When Xenia arrived at the hospital, she could not stop vomiting. The doctors struggled to determine the cause of her symptoms, but they discovered that she was having vaginal bleeding.

Stella and the others were puzzled by the situation. "But, she's not pregnant. Why is she bleeding?" Stella asked the doctor.

"Did she eat anything bad?" the doctor inquired.

"I'm not too sure. Is it food poisoning, doc?"

The doctor pursed her lips and said, "Food poisoning doesn't cause vaginal bleeding. She's also suffering from abdominal pain and vomiting. I suspect that she may have taken drugs like mifepristone and misoprostol."

Stella was stunned. "What kind of drugs are those?"

"They're taken after one gets a medical abortion. I had a patient who had similar symptoms. We've drawn some of Ms. Garcia's blood and collected a sample of her puke to conduct further testing. We'll be able to confirm the cause of her problem soon," the doctor explained.

Stella nodded as her mind raced. She could not help but think of Hylda at that moment. 'Did she somehow administer those drugs to Xenia as an extra precaution? Was pushing her off the railing not enough?' Stella shivered at the thought of that.

Keegan noticed that Stella was anxious and asked the doctor, "Are there any side effects to taking those drugs if one isn't pregnant?"

"It's definitely not a good idea to take medication you don't need, but there's no need to worry. She should be fine once her hormone levels return to normal."

"Alright. Thank you, doctor," Keegan replied. He then grabbed Stella's hand and said, "Don't worry. Xenia will be okay. We can hire a private doctor to look after her if you want."

Stella gave him a nod and said, "I just thought of something."

"What is it?" Keegan asked.

"Remember when I told you that my mom wanted another child?"

Keegan nodded and recalled the past conversation. Since Stella was not Rainee's biological daughter, it was not unusual for her to want another child of her own. "Yeah. I remember you said that she could not conceive because of health issues."

"That's what I thought, but today's incident made me consider another possibility," Stella continued.

"Have I ever told you that Hylda was one of the students my mother sponsored? She was the only student in her group who didn't go to university but attended a nursing school," Stella revealed.

Keegan recalled that Hylda's academic pursuits had been hindered after getting involved with Albert, leading her to choose nursing school as an alternative. It was not too bad, as it still granted her a diploma.

"She has some medical knowledge, and from what I remember, my mom wasn't in bad health. However, she couldn't conceive despite several attempts, even after a successful IVF that ended in a miscarriage," Stella continued.

Keegan quickly understood what Stella was trying to say. "So, you believe that Hylda has something to do with your mother's infertility?"

Stella looked at him and asked, "What do you think?"

Keegan thought about it and said, "Prescription drugs aren't easily obtained, and improper use of abortion medications can be dangerous."

This meant that the drugs Hylda administered to Xenia must have been obtained through reliable channels. 'If we could find out where she got those meds, we might uncover whether she was involved in mom's miscarriage years ago,' thought Stella.

"Don't worry. I'll have someone look into it. She'll be held accountable for her actions if she had something to do with it," Keegan assured her.

Just then, Felicity rushed upstairs and yelled, "Homewrecker Hylda lost the baby!"

Vermont followed behind her and said, "Keep your voice down, will you?"

Felicity hurriedly covered her mouth and whispered, "Hylda had a miscarriage. The nurses said it was a boy. Albert is downstairs crying like his own parents just died."

Stella and Keegan exchanged glances, and the latter suggested, "Should we go take a look?"

Stella hesitated. "I don't think I should go. She might suspect something."

"You not being there would be even more suspicious. Come on. It'll be fine."

Convinced by his reasoning, Stella decided to go and check on Hylda.

Hylda had just finished surgery, and she looked pale. Due to the blood loss on her way to the hospital, she was currently receiving a blood transfusion.

Albert was at the side, looking dejected. ‘How could this have happened..?’ he said.

Hylda gently held his hand. Her eyes were red, as she said, “I’m sorry. I failed to protect our child, Albert.”

Albert was filled with anguish over the loss of his son and could not help but scold Hylda, “Why did you go to the gazebo that was so high up, knowing your condition? Don’t you know your limit?”

Hylda’s face flushed red upon hearing that. She could not believe that Albert cared about the loss of his son more than her.

Ian frowned and said, “Do you think my sister feels good about losing the baby, Albert? She just underwent a miscarriage and is in a weak state. So, shut up. Her health should be our priority.”

Albert did not have much affection for his brother-in-law. He did not appreciate how Ian had relied on Hylda for financial support during his entrepreneurial endeavors. Albert was also unhappy that he was not able to gain some benefits from Ian now that he was part of the Moore family. When Ian married into the Moore family, the only thing Albert got was a gift from Irene.

“Don’t tell me what to do. I’m well aware of the situation,” Albert retorted.

“Uncle Ian is just concerned about mom. The child would be fine if it weren’t for that wench. Don’t vent your anger on the wrong person, dad.” Sophia immediately defended her uncle.

Suddenly, someone knocked on the door. Olivia stood there with a fruit basket and asked, “Is Mrs. Jewell okay? Is the baby safe?”

The atmosphere in the room grew even more intense.

Albert did not respond to her question. Instead, he stood up and said, “Mrs. Chapman, what brings you here?”

“I was worried about Mrs. Jewell after the incident on my property. I also brought a copy of the surveillance footage since I thought you might want to take a look, Mr. Jewell,” Olivia explained in a warm voice.

Upon hearing that, Hylda froze.

Hylda’s body stiffened, and she subconsciously gripped the bedsheets tightly. Unaware of her being tense, Albert turned away, as he was still reeling from the loss of his son. He had no interest in watching the surveillance footage and politely declined Olivia’s offer. “That’s alright, Mrs. Chapman. Thank you for coming, and sorry for the trouble.”

Olivia smiled reassuringly and said, “It’s no trouble at all, Mr. Jewell. I just want to make sure that everything is clear so there are no future complications for my business. It’s better to address these matters directly than to deal with misunderstandings later. Do contact me if you need anything, Mr. Jewell.”

Albert, being a businessman himself, understood Olivia’s perspective and did not doubt her intentions. On the other hand, Hylda glared at Olivia angrily, as she was unhappy about her interference.

Sophia furrowed her brow and said, “I think this is the wrong time to discuss this, Mrs. Chapman. My mom just had a miscarriage and is still recovering.”

Surprised by the news of Hylda’s miscarriage, Olivia exclaimed, “Oh my! I’m sorry to hear that.”

Sophia expected her to leave after expressing her concern. But, to Sophia’s dismay, Olivia continued, “Then, that’s all the more reason to investigate and clarify what happened. We cannot let this incident go unaddressed.”

Sophia was at a loss for words. ‘Is Mrs. Chapman intentionally stirring up trouble?’

Upon hearing that, Albert felt an overwhelming anger welling up, as he recalled that he had lost a son. He was determined to find out who harmed his child. “Thank you, Mrs. Chapman,” he said.

“It’s no problem. I want to clear my name as well,” replied Olivia as she pulled out her phone and played the surveillance video.

Hylda clenched her fists, thinking that there was no point in trying to keep things a secret any longer. ‘What’s the worst that could happen? The baby in that bitch’s belly isn’t going to survive anyway.’

After a few minutes, Albert roared, “It was you!”

Sophia’s heart trembled, and she cursed Olivia in her heart. Ian, on the other hand, remained silent with a tense expression.

Meanwhile, Hylda was composed. She looked up and responded in a cold tone, “She was the one who started making disrespectful remarks to me! Who does she think she is? Who gave her the audacity to provoke me on my wedding day?”

As she said that, she looked at Albert with tears in her eyes and continued, “You promised me that you would handle this situation, but look at what happened. You impregnated her and allowed her to ruin our wedding!”

Albert had a lot on his mind but was momentarily speechless after being exposed by Hylda. He had assured her that he would deal with Xenia if she promised to keep the child. He even offered her a small share of his business to pacify her. Hylda had agreed to the deal and appeared unaware of Xenia’s impending visit. ‘Did Xenia deliberately show up to provoke Hylda?’ Albert thought.

Olivia glanced at Albert, who was thrown off by Hylda’s words. Then, she calmly stated, “You could have simply dismissed the girl if you didn’t want her there, Mrs. Jewell. There was no need to resort to violence. Given your condition, weren’t you concerned about harming the child in your womb?”

She was trying to imply that Hylda did not really care for the baby since she engaged in a physical altercation over a few taunts from someone else.

Albert might not be the brightest person in the room, but when it came to matters concerning his child, he was extremely quick-witted. Olivia’s words instantly reminded him of Hylda’s previous attempt to abort the child behind his back.

'Hylda did not want this child since the beginning. She didn't even seem as excited about giving birth. When she was pregnant with Hugo, she panicked and contemplated calling the ambulance after a minor fall in the bathroom. This time, however, her immediate reaction was to blame Xenia for pushing her over the railing...'

Albert's lips tightened as he locked eyes with Hylda, and his anger intensified. Hylda felt a sudden wave of panic and said, "What are you insinuating, Mrs. Chapman? Are you saying that I purposely got rid of my own child and framed that woman for it?"
