Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1245 [Eleven Jewell]

Chandler's expression turned cold upon hearing Keegan's request. Cordelia glanced sharply at Jackson, who wore a gloomy expression and said, "You better start taking this job seriously, boy. Your cousin is giving you a golden opportunity here. I'll have no choice but to send you to the western branch if you don't keep your act up."

"Yes, Grandma," Jackson replied with a tense look.

Then, Cordelia put down her cup and said, "Keegan, you should consider giving Aurora a job as well. It doesn't have to be a high position, just one where she can learn something."

Keegan glanced at Aurora, who stiffened her back and pursed her lips. She avoided making eye contact with him because if she did, her mind would be flooded with memories of how he dragged her out of Chandler's house and handed her over to the police. All the care and affection she had received in the past became a nightmare. Her days in the detention center haunted her, filling her with fear and resentment.

Keegan fell silent for a moment before saying, "She can enter the secretary department. I'll have Aldor mentor her."

Aldor was baffled by the suggestion. He looked at his boss somewhat disbelievingly and thought, 'Couldn't they just hire a nanny to look after that girl?'

Cordelia seemed satisfied with the arrangement. Aldor was Keegan's protégé and would undoubtedly become a key figure in the company's leadership. His capabilities and approach to handling matters were excellent. By assigning Aurora to Aldor, Keegan was showing that he was taking her under his wings.

"Do you accept your brother's arrangement, Aurora? Or do you have anything to say?" Cordelia inquired.

Aurora kept her head down and replied, "I accept."

Cordelia nodded and said, "That's settled then. Aldor, take Aurora to complete the onboarding process so that she can start working tomorrow."

Aldor reluctantly accepted the task and said, "Follow me, Ms. Kane."

Aurora hesitated and followed Aldor out.

Cordelia then turned her attention to Chandler and Jackson. She rubbed her forehead and waved her hand dismissively, saying, "You two should also leave. I can't believe you asked me to come down here for such a trivial matter. You're giving me a headache."

'I wasn't the one who asked you to come down here,' thought Chandler. However, knowing Cordelia's bias towards Keegan, he took his son and left with a sullen face. Baldwin also left the room shortly after.

Once everyone was gone, Cordelia glared at Keegan and expressed her frustration. 'It was reckless of you to cause a scene like that. Aren't you afraid of getting beaten up by those shareholders?'

Keegan loosened his tie and said, "I'd get to fire them from their positions if they do, so no."

"You're so thick-skinned," Cordelia grunted. She remembered him picking up a phone call and paused before asking, 'Was it Stella who called earlier? n

"Yes," Keegan replied.

This piqued Cordelia's curiosity. "Is she still living with you?" she asked.

"No. She moved back to her place."

Cordelia frowned. "You're useless!"

Her words left Keegan speechless. "Stella is an actress now and has paparazzi following her everywhere. It wouldn't be suitable for her to stay at my place." He explained.

Cordelia was annoyed when she heard that. "Can't you stay at her place? How come you're so clever when it comes to messing with your Uncle Chandler but not when it comes to pursuing a girl?"

"But I'm already dating her, Grandma," Keegan felt the need to clarify.

Cordelia had her doubts. 'If what you say is true, why haven't you proposed? I want a great-grandchild, Keegan. I'm not getting any younger. And why the hell would you let her go back to her place?'

Keegan did not know how to respond. He knew he could not tell his grandmother about his vasectomy, so he said, "Stella has just found her footing in her career. I don't want to rush her."

"Are you sure it's not because she doesn't want to remarry you?" Cordelia asked.

Keegan remained silent.

"You only started treating her better after the divorce. Maybe she's afraid you would revert to your old ways if you two get married again. I don't blame her for wanting to test the waters," she continued.
