Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1263 [Eleven Jewell]

The other parents were convinced by the fact that the kindergarten was simply trying to raise the tuition fees.

“Didn’t they claim that the beds in the dormitory for afternoon naps were broken and couldn’t be used anymore? They wanted us to pick up our children in the middle of the day. They finish school at eleven something, and all of us would be at work at that time. We talked to them about it, and they said that they didn’t have enough money to replace the broken beds and wanted us to wait until the next semester. That solution was nonsense. As a result, we parents had to pay an extra two hundred dollars every month. I’m sure that they’re just going to do the same thing again.”

“It’s only been a few months since that happened, right? How could they raise it again? The tuition fees here are already more expensive than other places. This is ridiculous. Do they think our money grows on trees? We’re paying about a thousand dollars here without including the meals. Are we sending our children to a kindergarten or a university?”

“We’ve got to bring this matter up to the authorities if they’re really trying to raise the tuition fees again. It’s unacceptable for them to raise it again in just two months.”

After seeing that the discussion was getting offtrack, the chubby lady quickly added, “So what if they’re going to raise the tuition fees? We all chose this kindergarten because of its location, and it offers high-quality education. We should be willing to spend just any amount for the sake of our children. The problem now isn’t the tuition fees anymore. If this is a real land dispute and the land has to be reclaimed, it’s a matter of whether our children will have a school to attend at all.”

Her words struck a chord with the parents, and they immediately became worried.

Suddenly, one of the parents said calmly, “Let’s not panic before we find out what’s really happening. It’s a big matter since hundreds of children are attending this kindergarten. We shouldn’t be the ones bearing the consequences if there really is a dispute. I'm sure that someone else will take over the kindergarten. Let's stay calm and try not to be manipulated by others."

The chubby lady in a white shirt got upset. "What do you mean manipulated? I'm just worried about our children's education and sharing what I heard with everyone. Who cares about who this place belongs to? I'm only concerned about whether my child can continue to attend school."

The calm parent was bewildered. 'I was just expressing so defensive?"

The chubby lady was embarrassed. "Yeah, yeah. to manipulate anyone when your children don't have a school to attend!"

The other parents began to de-escalate

"I'm pretty sure that wasn't her intention."

"We're all just concerned about our children's education. Let's not argue with each other.'

"We've got to work together when our children are really forced to leave."

After the crowd had dispersed, the chubby lady called someone.

The police only left the kindergarten after a little over an hour.

On the same afternoon, the school suddenly posted a message in the parents' group chat, stating that the kindergarten would need to suspend its classes for some time due to some unforeseen circumstances.

The group chat was flooded with messages as soon as that statement was sent.

Everyone started asking what happened, why they had to suspend classes out of the blue, and when would the classes resume.

The teachers evaded the questions and only told the parents to wait for further announcements.

"Wait for further announcements" was the last thing the parents wanted to hear. They had no idea if they should wait for the announcement about classes resuming or the kindergarten getting shut down.

After hearing what the chubby lady said in the morning, the sudden suspension of classes in the afternoon inevitably led to assumptions.

The parents kept calling the kindergarten for the whole day, and the vice principal only responded in the group chat at night.

[Dear parents, I understand your concern, but we are facing some difficulties at the moment. There's a dispute over the ownership of the land that we lease, and the other party has demanded that we cease operation in the kindergarten. As long as this matter is not resolved, we have no other choice but to comply.]

One of the parents asked, [How long is this going to take? And, how long will the classes be suspended?]

The vice principal replied, [I'm not sure about that. It depends on whether the other party is willing to compromise. If they aren't, we might need to take this matter to court.]

The parents started panicking.

[Does that mean our children won't be attending class if the dispute isn't resolved? All of us here paid the tuition fees. Why should we bear the consequences of your actions?]

[That's right! Eighty percent of the parents here have both spouses working. We only send our children to your kindergarten for the whole day because we don't have time to take care of them. What are we supposed to do with our children now that the classes are suddenly suspended? Who's going to take care of the children?]

[Why didn't you inform us about the land dispute when we paid the meal fees yesterday? Did you just get the news today?]

The vice principal replied, [I understand how all of you are feeling right now. We don't want to see something like this happen either. I asked the principal about it just now, and she's deeply sorry about the situation. She promised that she'll do everything in her power to resolve this matter. She knows that all of you are concerned about your children's education, and she takes full responsibility for this matter. So, she told me that any parents who wish to withdraw their child from our kindergarten will be fully refunded with the tuition and meal fees for this month as an apology.]

It was already halfway through the month, yet seemed as if they were indeed facing a very tough dispute.

The parents only wanted to resume classes as soon as possible, not to transfer their children to another kindergarten.

Although many of them had complaints about Sunlight Kindergarten, they knew very well that it was the best kindergarten in the area. The teachers were known to be very patient, and it eased the worries of many parents.

While transferring to another kindergarten seemed easy, no other kindergartens in the area could accommodate hundreds of children. All of the parents preferred to send their children to a nearby kindergarten to avoid the hassle of commuting far distances. Not only that they would not know if the kindergartens would accept their children, but transportation would also be another problem.

So, the parents stopped being assertive as

After some time, another parent asked, [Ms. Lynch, can you tell us what exactly is going on? How did the dispute escalate to the point of going to court and suspending classes?]

The vice principal responded, [The land originally belonged to the ex-wife of Ms. White's husband. His ex-wife had used it as collateral for a loan to repay her debts, but she became comatose before the mortgage could be settled.

[However, Ms. White's husband collected enough money and managed to redeem the land. Ms. White thought that it would be a waste for such a big land to go unused, so she decided to run a kindergarten here with Ms. Night.

[Some time ago, the ex-wife's daughter came out of nowhere and wanted this piece of land back. We have no idea where she got the title deed from, but she's claiming that the land was left to her by her mother.

[In fact, her mother had mortgaged the land, and Ms. White and her husband are the people who repaid the loan. However, due to some technical issues, they could not get the title deed for a long time, and that was why the daughter managed to take advantage of this situation.

[We initially wanted to settle this peacefully, but she demanded five million or we have to cease all operations in the kindergarten. We are worried that she might cause a scene at the kindergarten and affect the children, so we had no other choice but to temporarily suspend the classes.

[Please rest assured that Ms. White has already appointed a lawyer and is actively resolving this matter. We will ensure that the children can get back to school as soon as possible.]
