Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1361 [Eleven Jewell]

Chapter 1361

Vermont just said that Felicity was not his girlfriend.

Truthfully, she was not. They were just pretending to be a couple back then, and she even rejected his confession.

Everything that he said was true.

However, this very fact made her highly embarrassed.

Vermont had just hugged and kissed her last night while whispering her name softly.

She just could not believe that he would deny everything the next morning, claiming that they were just really good friends.

She had just made up her mind to accept him despite his condition, yet he did something so shocking to her!

He even defended the prostitute!

Felicity got so angry that her face turned pale, as she clenched her lips tightly without saying anything.

The police officer gave Vermont a strange look.

'He just asked me what his girlfriend's reaction was when we barged in, yet he said that she's not his girlfriend now that she's here.'

Although the police officer could not understand why he was doing that, it did not hinder the police from investigating the case.

The surveillance cameras captured Vermont going in and out of the club, and his friends there could also testify on his behalf. So, the truth was evident.

Everything turned out to be just a misunderstanding after a night of hassle. The police officer could not help but say to Felicity, "Make sure you know the facts of everything before you call the police next time. Look how awkward things are now."

Felicity kept a tense face and remained silent.

Vermont chimed in and said, "My friend was just very worried. We're sorry for causing you trouble."

The police officer did not say anything more after seeing how cooperative Vermont was. So, he asked for Vermont's signature to close the case.

As they left the police station, Vermont turned to Felicity and asked, "Did we make a lot of noise last night, and we bothered you?"

Felicity clenched her fists tight and looked at him. "No. It's just that I hadn't met her before and didn't know who she was. That's why I called the police. I wouldn't have interfered if I knew that she was such a close friend to you."

Vermont scrutinized her expression, and he lowered his gaze. "I'm sorry. I'll be more mindful next time."

Felicity's heart sank.

'Be more mindful next time?'

What does he mean?

'He'll be more mindful when he brings another woman home next time?'

Felicity almost laughed out of anger but managed to keep a calm expression. "There's no need for that. It's your place, after all. You can do whatever you want. You don't have to tell me about it."

Vermont was about to say something, but Emily came out of the police station and said in a gentle voice, "Vermont, are you okay?"

Then, she lightly pounded her shoulder and added, "The chair was so hard. It's making me sore all over."

Vermont pursed his lips and glanced at her without saying anything.

Emily knew that Vermont had testified for her and that was the reason why she could be released. So, she thought that Vermont was interested in her and pretended to be even more vulnerable in front of him.

“Vermont, your aunt is so busybody. She could’ve just asked me to leave if she didn’t want me there. Why did she have to call the police? My God... Isn’t that just causing trouble for the police?”

Felicity swept her gaze across Emily. “Stop babbling. Don’t you know how to keep your mouth shut? Your voice is so annoying!”

Very soon, the cab that Felicity booked had arrived.

She looked at Vermont and said in a stern voice, “The cab is here. Let’s go home!”

Vermont stood still. “You go ahead. I’ll send her off,” he said softly.

Felicity choked and gritted her teeth. “Whatever!” i

Then, Felicity left with a gloomy expression on her face.

Emily was ecstatic. “Vermont, there’s a hotel nearby. Should we go there and get some rest?”

Vermont’s gaze remained fixated on the cab driving away. He only looked away after the car completely disappeared from his sight.

He glanced at Emily nonchalantly and said in a cold voice, “Who gave you the audacity to shower in my house?”

Emily was taken aback by his sudden change of attitude. Then, she stuttered, “V-Vermont, wh-what did you say?”

“Don’t call me that.” Vermont chuckled lightly as his gaze turned frosty. “Do you think we’re that close?”

He leaned slightly forward and whispered in Emily’s ear. ‘Do you know what happened to the person who did the same thing to me last time? I made her disappear from Rivera forever. You should be glad that I’m in a good mood today. Otherwise, I’d do the same to you.”

Then, he returned to his original position and glanced at Emily’s pale face. He smiled faintly. “Don’t look so sad; the police might think I’m mistreating you.”

Emily shivered and fearfully forced a smile on her face.

Vermont had worked on himself and improved his temper over the years, but people seemed to have forgotten how he fought his way up from the bottom.

He was so young, yet he managed to get where he was through his own abilities. He had seen all the dirtiest secrets in the industry and could easily see through a person’s intention when they approached him.

Only then did Emily realize that Vermont did not testify for her because he was interested in her. Instead, he was just putting on a show for someone else.

Felicity felt awful, and her heart throbbed in pain.

Suddenly, her phone rang. She looked at it and realized it was almost time for her follow-up appointment with Steven next Monday.

Just as the meeting ended, Aldor knocked on Keegan’s office door.

“Mr. Kane, something’s happened to Walter.”

Keegan paused and lifted his gaze. “What is it?”

Aldor placed the tablet in front of Keegan and responded, “* This is the real-time location data from the tracking device on him. It hasn’t moved at all since last night, and it has been over forty hours now.

“I downloaded the audio recording here. Let me play it for you.”

Aldor pressed the play button as he spoke.

Keegan's expression grew solemn upon listening to the conversation. When it ended, he looked somewhat surprised as he shifted his gaze to Aldor.

"He's dead?"

Aldor nodded. "Most probably. The location of the tracker is very close to the sea. I've contacted Mr. Lowe to find out where Hylda went these days. On the day Walter went missing, she was seen with a large suitcase on surveillance cameras near that area. Then, she moved the following day and had her place thoroughly cleaned."

Keegan remained silent for a moment before he said in a low voice, "Locate the suitcase and guide the police there."

Aldor nodded.

Hylda was far more wicked than Keegan had expected her to be.

He thought that taking away the money would cause them to turn against each other, but he did not expect Hylda to get rid of Walter in such a brutal way.

Keegan figured that a person like Hylda would probably lose control and do unimaginable things to Stella if she ever found out that Stella was behind everything. So, Keegan got very worried as he told Aldor, "Get several skilled bodyguards to protect my wife. Don't tell her about it; just do everything secretly."

"Yes, Mr. Kane."

Three days later, the fishermen out at sea retrieved a suitcase. They opened it and found a bloated and decaying corpse inside. They were terrified and immediately contacted the police.

The police arrived at the scene very swiftly.

The body inside the suitcase was already in an advanced state of decay, and it was only wearing underwear. There were two fatal wounds on the chest. The victim had a rather small build, so it could be stuffed into a suitcase.

A large crowd gathered at the scene when the body was recovered. The suitcase corpse disposal case spread online very quickly. Some people even shared uncensored photos of the decaying corpse online to gain attention, instilling fear in many.

Rivera had not had such a heinous case of murder and body disposal for almost a year. The photos of the victim were already circulating widely online before the investigation started. The authorities took this case very seriously and formed a special unit to handle the case overnight.

Lena was eating with Carter when she received a call from her team. Then, Carter immediately drove her to the place before they even finished their meal.

The autopsy result was released on the same night.

The victims had two knife wounds on their chest, both stabbed right into the heart. Clearly, it was not an accident but murder. The suspect intended to kill the victim. i

The victim only had a pair of underwear on without any other garments. There was also nothing in the suitcase that could help identify the victim. Also, no fingerprints or DNA from another person were detected on the suitcase.

However, there were numerous needle marks on the victim's arms. The officers first assumed that the person might have had a history of drug use, but Lena found a small needle mark on the victim's chest.

Based on how the victim looked, Lena speculated later that the needle mark was most probably a result of the biopsy.

After conducting the autopsy, her speculation was confirmed. The victim had advanced lung cancer that had begun to spread. The needle marks on the chest were caused by medical examinations and treatments.

So, she suggested beginning the investigation by checking with the oncology departments of all the major hospitals in Rivera.

Her superior officers agreed with her. However, the next day, they published the victim's appearance online to gather clues.

There was only one simple reason why they did that. The suitcase corpse disposal case had gained so much attention online, and they had to show that the officials were actively taking action to solve it.

That left Lena infuriated, as that was the same thing as reminding the suspect to run away.

When Carter came to pick her up, he saw Lena looking furious, as if she would just randomly go up to someone on the street and chop them into a million pieces.

He cleared his throat and asked, "Should we go to the shooting range for a couple of shots to lighten the mood?"

Lena kept quiet.

She glanced at Carter. "It's too far away. I don't feel like going there. Why don't you come to the boxing gym and practice with me?"

Carter smiled and said softly, "That'll do too. But please go easy on your fragile husband."

Lena looked at his playful expression, and her mood began to turn better.

Then, she said, "Don't worry. I'm not going to kill you. I don't want to be a widow at such a young age anyway."

Her response left Carter speechless.

When they got into the car, Carter received a call from Keegan. He remembered how Keegan asked him to erase his divorce record, and his eyes twitched. Then, he declined the call without hesitation.

However, Keegan gave him another call shortly after. Carter was about to hang it up again, but Lena said, "Pick it up.

What's if it's something urgent?"

Carter sighed. "He never calls for anything good."

Although he said that, he answered the call anyway.

As expected, he heard Keegan speaking as soon as the call was connected, “I need you to forge evidence about the suitcase corpse disposal case.”

Carter’s eyelid twitched abruptly before he secretly glanced at Lena. She was scrolling through her phone, unaware of what Keegan said on the phone.

Carter silently lowered his phone volume and said, “I’m busy.

“Your wife’s going to thank you for that.”

Keegan understood what Carter meant and said, “I’ll call you back later.”

After the call ended, Lena looked at Carter and asked, “What is it about?”

“Nothing much. He just wants to have a drink with me because it’s been a while since we met.”

“Go ahead then. I’ll get something to eat around here and get a cab back myself,” Lena said.

“No way.” Carter immediately rejected her suggestion. “I’ll stay with you for a while first.”

Lena felt helpless. There was nothing she could do to change how clingy Carter was, but she kind of liked it too.

Carter leaned in and kissed her on the lips. “Lena, why don’t you switch to another less demanding position? You’ve been working overtime so frequently; it isn’t good for your health. Look, you’ve lost weight again.”

Lena lowered her gaze and said, “This is my field of expertise. What else can I do other than this?”

“You could work in the management department. It’s less tiring.”

In that way, not only that Lena would not have to put herself in danger on the front lines, but it was also the easiest path to get a promotion.

It would probably be difficult for Lena to make the switch with her own capabilities, but Carter had all the connections. It would be effortless for him to help her with it.

However, Lena did not want that as she said in a low voice, "The management role will need me to interact with living people, and I'm only good at dealing with the dead. I'm not very good with words. It'll be hard for me to deal with so many different people, let alone using official terms to handle the media."

She paused before asking softly, "Is it because your parents want me to switch careers?"

"No." Carter brushed her hair that fell on her cheek to the back of her ear and said, "I just don't want you to drain yourself. It was just a suggestion. I'll support you no matter what others say if you want to work in this field."

Lena's chilly gaze softened as she hugged Carter and gently kissed him.

"If we have children in the future, and the job is still as busy as now, I'll consider switching to management."

Carter was taken aback by her response. A faint smile appeared, and he said, "Okay."

After eating and sending Lena back home, Carter called Keegan. He asked directly, "Are you a friend of the victim of this case?"

"I'm not, but I know who he is and how he was murdered."

The case had been widely spread. Keegan figured that Hylda would definitely start escaping, judging by how clever she was.

Although Keegan knew about the truth behind Walter's death, he could not provide the police with the audio recording he heard earlier. The case would become much more complicated if he was involved. The police had limited efficiency, and Keegan was worried that Hylda might already be gone before they sorted out the facts.

So, he needed Carter to do what he did best and present the evidence to solve the case as soon as possible.

Keegan told his entire plan to Carter. Carter kept quiet for a while before he finally spoke. "Can you find something legal for me to do next time?"

"Hackers are meant to break the law. That's how they showcase their skills." Keegan said indifferently.

Carter pointed a middle finger at him.

Keegan gazed at him. "You never did this before."

Carter paused and swept his gaze across him. "I only did that because I respected you back then. However, it seems like you're not a respectable person, so I won't do that anymore."

Keegan stood up and buttoned his suit. Then, he looked at Carter and said, "Both of you are the same."

Carter ignored what he said. "I'll help you again for your wife -because your ex-wife helped Lena before. However, you'll have to pay me the next time you ask for my help again."

Keegan was speechless.

"Hmph." Keegan scoffed and corrected him. "She's my fiancée, not my ex-wife."

He then showed the engagement ring on his finger to the camera and spoke somewhat proudly. "Stella bought this engagement ring for me."

Carter kept quiet for a while before he said without holding back, "That looks cheap."

Keegan got upset as he said, "Gold maintains its value. It represents how I'll always have a place in her heart."

Carter continued to mock him. “How valuable can a gold ring be? She’s so stingy that she doesn’t even buy you a diamond ring. What’s there to brag about?”

Keegan frowned. “If you bought a diamond ring for a million, can you resell it for a million?”

Carter was speechless. “Why would I sell something that I bought? Are you that desperate for money? One hundred grams of gold costs only around five thousand dollars, even if it can maintain its value. Will you ever dress up in gold when you attend some important social events? Even if you wear twenty pounds of gold, it will only cost you around four hundred thousand dollars. On the other hand, a platinum ring alone that I have cost tens of millions. Who do you think would be the laughingstock?”

Keegan kept quiet.

Carter continued, “She didn’t buy you a diamond or a platinum ring because they’re too expensive. She thinks her relationship with you isn’t worth spending that much money. So, gold naturally became her best option. Not only that it’s cheap, but it can also easily satisfy someone as... honest as you.” Carter wanted to call him stupid, but he was afraid Keegan would hold a grudge against him. So, he changed his mind.

Keegan’s face darkened as he gritted his teeth and said, “That’s nonsense!”

Carter said nonchalantly, “If you don’t believe me, why don’t you ask her to buy you a gold ring?”

Keegan then left with a tense face.

When Keegan got into the car, Aldor immediately noticed that his boss was in a bad mood.

‘Could it be that Mr. Lowe turned him down?’ Aldor wondered to himself.

Carter was not the only person who could handle this matter. However, he was Keegan’s close friend and Lena’s husband, making him the best candidate.

Aldor pondered how to ask Keegan about it, but Keegan raised his hand and asked, “Is a gold ring cheap?”

Aldor was taken aback. He had no idea why Keegan would suddenly ask such a question.

Of course, Aldor knew who had given Keegan the gold ring. He would never dare to call it cheap, no matter what.

However, judging from Keegan's expression, he figured Keegan did not really want to know if a gold ring was cheap.

Aldor thought for a few seconds before he said cautiously, "It's the thought that counts."

However, Keegan was not as easy to brush off this time. "So, it's cheap?" he asked.

Aldor was speechless.

'What on earth happened to Mr. Kane?'

He was so happy that he wore it every day when he first received the ring. He made everyone in the company so curious about it.

They could not figure out why an elegant person like him would wear a tacky gold ring every day.

Keegan's style clashed terribly with the gold ring. He was very classy, and people like him should only wear jewelry like titanium and diamond to match their aura. Gold would only do the opposite.

However, Aldor was the only person who knew that the tacky gold ring was a priceless treasure to him because it was a gift from Stella.

So, he did not know why Keegan would suddenly be so bothered by the ring's value.

"Mrs. Kane chose to give you this, and she surely thinks this is the best regardless of its price or value. She's giving you what she believes is the best, and you can't measure the sentiment behind it with just money."

Keegan immediately felt a lot better after hearing Aldor's words. But he still could not get over what Carter said, "But I can't wear this everywhere I go. It's too tacky."

Aldor thought, 'You should be glad that Mrs. Kane even bought a ring for you. The gold price is so high right now, and she definitely wouldn't buy gold at a time like this.'

He was wondering how to respond to Keegan, but then he heard Keegan say, "Do you think that she would buy a diamond ring for me if I asked?"

Aldor kept quiet.

Keegan continued, "I have a place in her heart, and she cares for me. Why wouldn't she buy me a diamond ring, right?"

Aldor opened his mouth but could not find the right words to say.

Obviously, Keegan did not know his wife well enough.

It was true that he had a place in her heart, but it did not mean that she would be willing to spend money on a diamond ring for him.
